It's going to be one "L" of a building. But in the meantime there will be some inconveniences. That's the general reaction from Harper College officials when speaking about the construction of Building L, the first major construction project on the Harper campus since Building M was completed in 1979. The $18,800,000 project is the first of a two-phase, $18.3 million building plan.

"The building will blend in very well with the existing buildings," said Vernon F. Manke, vice president of administrative services. "However it will be different. It will have two atriums at either end. And it will provide needed classroom space."

A large student seems to gain a degree of privacy from the construction fencing of the northeast corner of Building L. Construction of Building L began Aug. 20 and will continue through 1993. Official groundbreaking ceremonies are scheduled for Friday, Sept. 18. The new building will house the liberal arts division offices, several classrooms and the Harbinger Children's Clinic.

Celebrate Harper! 25 years of Excellence

Jim Hays
Harbinger Staff Writer

The 1992-93 school year at William Rainey Harper College will be a special one. It marks the College's silver anniversary. That means for 25 years Harper College has been dedicated excellence in education.

The College's story began more than 25 years ago, to create what we see before us today. On March 27, 1965, voters from four townships in the northwest suburbs passed a referendum to establish the Harper College district. The four townships were Palatine, Schaumburg, Elk Grove, and Wheeling.

Thirty-four days after the referendum passed an election established the first board of trustees. Seven members were elected from 48 candidates. Jesslyn Nicklas, of Inverness, was one of the seven elected. She remembers the beginnings when she held meetings in her living room to get support for the College from friends, business people and educators.

Nicklas was also a favorite board member of the students because she talked to the students regularly.

The students showed their appreciation one year by presenting her with an award during the graduating ceremonies.

When she was asked what she had felt after receiving the award from the students, she replied she was "truly touched."

Nicklas along with the other six board members proceeded to pick the first president of the College, Robert Labi.

Labi, now doing research for the Texas Higher Education Board, served as the first president from 1966 until 1977.

During his first year at Harper College, Labi and the Board of Trustees selected the architect and found a suitable campus site.

Eleven Student Senate seats will be decided September 14 and 15

John Pove
Harbinger Staff Writer

Student Senate elections will be held September 14 and 15, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., in Buildings A, D, F, and J.

Students interested in running for one of the 11 Student Senate seats available are encouraged to pick up a Candidacy Form now, at the Student Activities Office,

In addition to solving campus-related problems, they had decided upon a name for the college. After considering choices such as Governor Adlai E. Stevenson and Senator Everett McKinley Dirksen, they settled upon William Rainey Harper College.

Harper was the solid choice. The next step was to secure permission to use the name. "We approached the Harper family to see if they would let us use the name," Nicklas said. "We told them we wanted to pursue the excellence that Dr. Harper was known for."

The name, William Rainey Harper represents a man and his quest for excellence in education. He is considered to be the father of the two-year college. Harper was graduated from Muskingum College in Ohio and received his doctorate from Yale.

One of his more notable accomplishments was Harper's presidency of the University of Chicago. Hand-picked by John D.

Rockefeller, Harper, his ideas and enthusiasm made the University of Chicago a symbol of excellence.

In 1967, Harper College opened its doors to 1,725 students. During the first year, the students took evening classes at Elk Grove High School.

In 1968 the enrollment had more than doubled to 3,700 students, and in 1969, again the enrollment increased up to 5,350 students. By the mid-70s Harper had over 20,000 students attending classes.

And in 1975 the school made additions to the campus after a referendum was passed.

The main goal over the years has been to educate the people within the community. The College encourages students to take an active role in changing society and promotes individual growth.

William Rainey Harper College is not just a community college. It is a community college with a purpose of giving back to the community.

The Student Senate represents the student body and works with the faculty and administration on college programs, policies and issues. The Senate recommends students for important college committees, budgets more than $350,000 of student activity funds, approves club and organization charters, and reviews and recommends changes in college policies which affect student life.

A336. Candidacy Forms are due September 4 at 2 p.m.

All students are encouraged to apply and Director of Student Activities, Jeanne Pankratin. Questions may be directed to Pankratin at ext. 2242.

Eleven of 12 senate positions will be elected this fall. The Student Trustee was elected last spring.

These are representative positions from each of the academic divisions: Academic Enrichment and Language Studies; Business and Social Science; Liberal Arts, Life Science and Human Services; Physical Education, Athletics and Recreation; Technology, Mathematics, and Physical Sciences. Four senate positions will represent clubs and other organizations; one senator represents the Disabled Student Services and one Student Trustee.

Harper provides information on privacy rights

The following notice and information is given by William Ranney Harper College, District Number 512 to advise its students of their rights under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 (The Act).

The Act established the right of students to inspect and review their education records; provides that personally identifiable information will not, with certain exceptions, be disclosed without the student's written permission; provides for guidelines for the correct flow of information and the through informal or formal hearings; grants students the right to file complaints with the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act Office (FERPA) concerning alleged failures of the College to comply with The Act, and makes provisions for notice to the student concerning their rights.

William Ranney Harper College has adopted policies and procedures implementing The Act, which are contained in the William Ranney Harper College Student Handbook, copies of which are available in the Office of Student Activities.

A student who wishes to review his/her educational records must complete the appropriate form and submit it to the Dean of Enrollment Services.

The student will be notified in writing of a date and time he/she may come to review the records. The following student data is hereby designated as "Directory Information" and as such may be disclosed or released by the college for any purpose and at its discretion:

Student name, dates of attendance, officially recognized activities, home address, degrees/certificates earned, date and place of birth, major award study awards received, home telephone, last college attended.

To have any or all of the "Directory Information" withheld the student must give written notice, in person, or by mail, by certified mail return receipt requested and addressed to the Dean of Enrollment Services by the first day of the semester they enroll.

Initial notice of changes may be made at any time; however notification must be done in writing and to the Dean of Enrollment Services following the directions above.

This notice will be published annually at a public Board of Trustees meeting, in the College newspaper schedule and posted on an official bulletin board of the College.

Copies of The Act, the HEW regulations, William Ranney Harper College policies and procedures, the William Ranney Harper College Student Handbook and forms for use in implementing The Act are available upon request, in the Registrar's Office, Building A, Room 213.

This course is one of a series offered by the Institute for Small Business Development at Harper College and is recommended for start-up businesses.

Tuition is $65 plus a $14 fee. To register, refer to course number LE1075-101. For additional information, please call extension 2591.

'L' Building construction may cause parking woes

the new building. "Having a building dedicated to liberal arts will allow the unique contribution of the programs to be highlighted," Chapman said. "It will give us more space for courses and solve a lot of problems."

Some of those problems are inadequate classrooms, overcrowded offices and inadequate work facilities, Chapman said. Although liberal arts divisional offices and some classrooms are located in Building F, liberal arts classes are held in several buildings.

"The new building will help to centralize our operations," Chapman said.

There will be some other beneficiaries of the new construction. When the new building is occupied, the vacated space in Building F will be renovated, creating more space for the library and other tenants of the existing building.

With a completion date pegged for January, 1994, the 91,000-square-foot structure will house the liberal arts divisional offices, 21 classrooms, three art studios, an innovative drama laboratory and 14 faculty offices. Besides the liberal arts facilities, the building will also be the new home of the Harper College Bookstore.

But the construction will create an obvious disadvantage—inconvenience.

Building L, a two- and three-story structure, will connect old buildings—the library (Building F) and the building housing music and the women's center (Building P). Fencing has already restricted pedestrian access routes to the library and forced people parking in lot 1 to take some extra steps to get to where they are going.

About 110 existing parking spaces have been delineated in lot 1 for construction traffic. And although the liberal arts division needs the new space, it will lose some office and classroom space for about 10 months during the construction when the new building is connected to the existing building.

School officials said access to existing buildings, for people with disabilities will not be affected.

Kevin P. King, supervisor of public safety, doesn't anticipate any unusual traffic problems caused by construction traffic, but he does anticipate parking problems.

"Parking lot 1 is already used parking lot," King said. "With the loss of 100 spaces in that lot, parking could get hectic. People are going to have to adjust their parking habits, and allow a little more time."

King said there is adequate parking on the northwest side of campus in lots 4, 5, and 6. He said public safety officers will strictly enforce parking rules, including those prohibiting parking on the grass and in fire lanes.

In summing up the planning for the construction, Mankie said officials have considered many things.

"We've tried to make the situation as trouble-free as possible and as safe as possible," Mankie said. "It's going to take the full cooperation and understanding of everybody."

Cafeteria food, prices are difficult to stomach for some

ALANNAH YOUNGHEIM
HARBINGER GUEST WRITER

The cafeteria food should be less expensive if it continues to remain at the same quality and variety. That's the opinion of 61 percent of Harper students and staff polled in the Spring Semester. Respondents said the cafeteria's prices are too high considering the portions and quality of the food and, 55 percent of employees polled said they would like to see a decrease in cafeteria prices with an increase in variety and quality. One hundred people (employees and students) responded in May to a series of 10 open-ended questions concerning the cafeteria. Questions covered the cafeteria's quality, service, price. Respondents also had an opportunity to add comments.

The survey revealed that students and staff differed in their opinions. Forty-four percent of the students surveyed think the best thing about the cafeteria is the food, especially the breakfast. Only 20 percent of employees said they like the food best. Twenty-five percent of students like the service the most, especially, as some termed, "the fast-liners."

Employees, however, have a different opinion. Only one percent say the service is the best aspect of the cafeteria. While 71 percent of the students said they like "being able to sit and relax" in the cafeteria, only one percent of the employees agreed.

In response to what's least desirable about the cafeteria, 28 percent of students said prices, followed closely by 23 percent of employees who think "prices are out of line with the actual cost."

Fifteen percent of students and employees say the food is the worst aspect of the cafeteria. One student responded, "The main courses are always smothered in sauces and food is served cold."

In some areas, however, students and staff do agree. In response to a question that asked commented, "The cashiers are very friendly. I think the servers should take manner classes from them."

A decisive majority of students (72 percent) rate the cafeteria "clean and efficient," whereas a substantial minority of employees (13 percent) agree.

Both students and employees (55 and 31 percent respectively) prefer to see more emphasis on healthy foods as an alternative to greasy foods. Both groups prefer low-salt, low-saturated-fat selections in the salad bar. With regard to variety, one student said, "Many things seem to be swimming in butter and there are too many sauces" and another student said, "Too much of the same."

Employees and student responses also differ on the frequency of cafeteria use. While 24 percent of students visit the cafeteria every day a much higher 67 percent of employees do so there daily.

The survey indicated both students and employees spend a little over $3 daily on the average. "I buy very little because of cost and I never get a full meal," one employee said. The salad bar always looks wonderful, but it's extremely expensive. For a good salad it costs up to four dollars, if not more," another employee said.

The new cart in J Building illustrated a positive response. "I am very glad a cart has been put in J Building because otherwise, there are only vending machines. This offers another alternative. I'm sure as more people hear about it, they will avail themselves to it," one student said.

There were some other areas where students and staff saw the cafeteria through different eyes. Although 71 percent of students say the service is fair, employees say they are treated "very well to excellent." Specific comments from employee respondents included comments such as, "It depends on who serves you. One employee said, 'No one is particularly friendly, but nobody has been rude either.'"

The cashiers win first place with many people. One employee

HealthCorner FOR HEALTH THAT MATTERS

The Health Service, located in A302, offers students four medical services administered by registered nurses from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Monday through Thursday, and 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Friday. The following services are available:

Unusually

Vaccine and hearing deficiencies

Part-time physicians provide medical care for one and one-half hours per day during the fall and spring semesters and two hours per week during the summer semester. They diagnose and treat symptoms, in addition to prescribing medications, laboratory tests and x-rays as needed.

The Health Service is also the resource for all wellness programs on campus, including the Drug, Alcohol and Wellness Network (DAWN). DAWN is a comprehensive proactive drug and alcohol prevention program for students and other members of the Harper College community. DAWN provides education, programs, support groups, counseling, resource referral information and the Peer Advocates Listening to Students (PALS) program. For additional information, contact the DAWN office in A302, extension 3026.

Recycle Harper!

Recycling of disposable food service products has become an important environmental issue for the students and staff of Harper College. The Food Service and Environmental Club will "kick off" the dining hall recycling program. Special receptacles for polystyrene containers, glass, and non-recyclable items will be placed in the dining areas in addition to the present aluminum cans containers.

This recycling process is the end result of a two-year study by the Harper College Environmental Committee for the most environmentally conscious waste disposal program for the Food Service area. Several proposals were submitted to the committee. Use of China and flatware proved to be costly in terms of both water use, capital outlay for dishwashing equipment, and loss due to leakage or theft. A disposable system of all paper products would necessitate the consumption of approximately 60 trees and one million gallons of water per week by the Harper dining hall. The recycling of polystyrene would provide the best alternative for cost containment and preservation of the environment.

The Environmental Committee, a body analyzing campus issues related to health, safety and accessibility, and the Food Service Department have joined their efforts to encourage campus-wide participation.

Student Development helps students help selves

GRACE SAUER
HARBINGER STAFF WRITER

How many Student Development advisors does it take to change a light bulb? Just one, but it must want to be changed.

In 25 years of Student Development advising at Harper, "be one thing which has truly remained constant is change! Evolution, growth and adaptation are the points and purposes of Student Development and related services offered by Harper College. As much as these focal points are reached, they are also practiced.

According to Phil Troyer, a Student Development Advisor in Building D142, the community college approach to advising and counseling represents a change from the traditional "four-year school approach." This change goes back to the original concept of the community college that was born some 30 years ago. Troyer sees that at that time, one of the goals of community colleges was to have more staff assigned and easily trained for counseling and advising.

The reasons for this difference are many. In addition to being more accessible, knowledgeable and accurate, full-time counselors, employed at Harper, are trained and better able to meet the special needs of Harper students who will be attending for four years.

In Troyer's words, "The community college, per se, was started with a real commitment to academic advising and counseling services to students. And that has always been true at Harper, too."

Physically, the Student Development group has evolved from high school to a university campus to better meet the needs of today's students. Initially, the advisors were spread among the various departments; thus if you were a counselor that worked with the English Department, your office was in the English faculty. However, as the field itself grew and changed, this decentralized approach proved inefficient. At Harper, changes in the field manifested themselves in the physical organization of the Student Development services.

Today, there are many different offices in different buildings, but rather than being divided by subject or department, they are specialized and focused into groups such as career, academic and personal counseling.

That use of "counseling centers" at Harper also differs from the very centralized approach of having one counseling center, which is employed at some other community colleges. Troyer believes that Harper's approach increases both visibility and accessibility to the services offered.

Although many services are offered under Student Development, academic counseling is probably the most used service. The very nature of a community college as a transition point from high school to a university creates special needs. Those students who are anticipating transfer to another college, how far down the road, would do well to meet with an academic advisor and make use of the many "tools" they offer. Such tools range from skills and placement testing, to open lines of communication with transfer counselors at "destination" schools.

One tool of great value and particular interest is the Progress Report. The branch of Joanne Powell (Harper's career counselor) and her staff are the ones who begin an accurate perspective on their academic position. This tool is relevant to one's education and time consuming for both student and counselor) task to a few, simple keystrokes. Presently, the progress report must be requested by the student and generated by Student Development. Perhaps one day, with a request "on file," these reports could become part of the regular, end-of-semester, grade report mailings.

In addition to services for students intending to transfer, the Student Development and related departments offer a wealth of other services. The Community Counseling Center offers individual and group counseling in a wide range of areas. These areas deal with personal, individual needs, couple and family counseling, career counseling, relationships and a variety of other needs.

The Center for New Students exists to not only assist traditional students, but also returning adult students. The Center for Students with Disabilities works to provide individual needs, couple and family counseling, career counseling, relationships and a variety of other needs.

With all these "centers" dealing with various needs, scattered about the campus, it might appear that Student Development remains somewhat decentralized. According to Troyer, however, there exists open and ready lines of communication from one "center" to another. In fact, an important part of any counselor's job is to determine if a given situation is perhaps not within their area of expertise and to make referrals accordingly. Such referrals could be to another "center" or simply to another counselor within the given center.

The Student Development staff is quick to point out that a student's needs and a counselor's abilities do not always match. And that a student never hesitates to request a different counselor or to "shop around."

At the end of each semester begins (the first semester for the twenty-first time), the folks in Student Development are busy studying and waiting, sometimes like MASH units amidst the academic bloodbath, for the new semester to begin. Through the mist and maze of requirements, regulations, and still other times silently standing as a refuge from the many problems that life seems to take at us all.

EDITORIAL

Twenty five years ago on a large grass filled prairie, a small painted white sign appeared it read "Future sight of William Rainey Harper College" If we can use a line from a familiar movie we can almost capture the excitement of 1967. "If you build it they will come" and they did come. Harper enrolled 1725 students in 1967 and today it has over 28,000. Striving to meet the demand of an ever growing enrollment, Harper college moved out of Elk Grove high school and into 16 contemporary buildings and soon we will expand to 17 after the completion in 1993 of the new I Building. I am very proud to dedicate this issue of the Harbinger to all the people who have made Harper College what it is today. Let us hope that our faculty, Administration, staff, and students carry on the legacy of a Harper Education. In the words of The Harper President Paul N. Thompson, "Promising futures begin at Harper. The quality of our programs and services will be important to you in your college years, your career and your personal interests for years to come."

Fruits of knowledge ready for harvesting

George Simon
Harbinger Staff Writer

Another semester begins and the sweet fruit of knowledge is once again ripe and ready for harvest. Indeed this thing, we call knowledge possesses many of the same qualities as those products of trees and vines.

Often enough we reference the "tree of knowledge" without due consideration for the symbolism it holds. To us as practically, it is not the school itself like the tree? A solid, tangible representation of the life and potential contained within. The most visible and enduring parts of the tree, trunk, boughs and leaves are more vehicles for the true purpose of producing fruit and perpetuating the species. Such is the nature of a school.

Like the botanical counterparts, the fruits of knowledge stand to be utilized in many ways. Ripe and ready for consumption, they may be harvested, prepared if necessary, and consumed as is or be immediately useful to the individual. Or they may Farmer, merchant, or consumer. Each reaps the harvest but utilizes the fruit in different ways. The consumer harvests the fruits of knowledge for his or her own consumption.

The merchant, on the other hand, reaps the harvest, carefully selecting the best and most desirable produce for exchange in the open market.

Finally there are the farmers...of knowledge. The fruits they reap will be sown and dispersed. They are teachers and philosophers, but they are also merchants and consumers. For many people have their own little "golden plot" of knowledge.

The "farmers of knowledge" serve not only to perpetuate various species, but also to create hybrids and ensure a degree of diversity. Such farmers usually understand the "natural selection" that occurs with knowledge and respect the fact that new varieties of thoughts and ideas may spring spontaneously from established strains.

Another has one of the "famous" is to retain some of the older, more resilient varieties. "Seedbanks of knowledge", the farmers usually understand that whole fields and forests can be held in one's hand in the form of seeds. And so, this true (Harper College) once again bears fruit and we come ready to reap the harvest. One tree, with many fruits, our school offers three yields per year. Some may believe this to be sufficient for growth and nourishment. But the fruit of one tree, diverse as it may be, provides only partial sustenance. With due in mind, we must be ready to reap other "fruits of knowledge" wherever they may sprout. From an unending looking path of "woods" may come a subtle and important spice and such is the same for knowledge.

So, harvest well this season from the bounty of knowledge. Susanne and I, and all of which grow forth from the cornucopia of wisdom and knowledge. Understand that, while the fruit of the tree may not yet be ripe, the yield of the vine may be mature. In knowledge, as in nature, there is always something to be harvested.

Jugglers to perform at Harper

A comedy juggling team, "The Passing Zone," will perform at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, September 17 in the Building J Theater of Harper College in Palatine.

Seen in the hit movie "The Addams Family," The Passing Zone won the 1989 International Team Juggling Championship and holds several Guinness World Records.

The two-man team juggles flaming torches, knives, balls, clubs and rings, toilet bowl plungers and bowling balls. They combine their juggling skills with antics on six-foot unicycles, using acrobatics, music and comedy.

The Passing Zone show kicks off the Fall 1992 Family Entertainment Series. Tickets are $5 for adults, $2 for children 12 years old and under, and $1 for Harper students and senior citizens. For tickets and information, call 708/397-3000, extension 2547.

Program Board Presents:
Toad The Wet Sprocket

Tickets are on sale now for the hot new band, "Toad the Wet Sprocket." They will appear in concert, 8 p.m. Friday, September 11 at Harper College in Palatine in Building J Theater.

The band, which has borrowed its name from a Mervyn Pytheon skit, has a hit single, "All I Want," and numbers one on Billboard Magazine's Hotnewseers chart. The four-member band from the Santa Barbara area has recorded the albums "Pleasant And Cruel" (1989), "Talk" (1990), and "Fear" (1992).

The opening act for Sprocket will be "Crim. Blossoms" from Tempe, Arizona, whose sound has been described as a "Cross Between the Byrds and Husker Du" by "sims of Perry and RSM." Lead vocalists Robin and Wilson offers his description, "It's like a big slice of American cheese."

General admission tickets for the concert are $25 and $5 for Harper Students. Because of the limited number of tickets available, Harper officials suggest reserving seats soon by calling 708/397-3000, extension 2547, VISA and MasterCard are accepted.

Author to speak on September 16

Author Jay McInerney, whose book "Bright Lights, Big City" transformed him into a pop icon, will speak at Harper College in Palatine, 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, September 16 in the Building J Theater. McInerney will speak of his journalistic experiences when he wrote the screenplay for the movie of "Bright Lights, Big City," starring Michael J. Fox.

Again on the bestselling list with his newest novel "Brightness Falls," McInerney chronicles fast-lane New York lifestyle prior to the 1987 stock market crash.

For tickets, $7 general admission and $5 for Harper students and senior citizens, please call 708/397-3000, extension 2547.

Bookstore woes? It could be worse

By Robert Seder
Harbinger Staff Writer

Books, some students have 'em and some don't. The bookstore, once again, is the focus of the annual textbook shortage. At least in the eyes of some faculty members.

There does not appear to be a rhyme or reason to the shortages, and no one division appears to be affected more than another. A quick survey of selected faculty members revealed that the degree and incidence of shortages is as wide and varied as the subjects taught.

Faculty members within the same division reported shortages as high as 33% and in other cases virtually 100% satisfaction. Ironically, the 33% shortfall occurred in a class where the book order had been placed during mid-semester of the spring term and at least one satisfied faculty member had plus of his order "tag."

Charles Norris, Chairman of the Anthropology Department, indicated that while he had selected a new textbook for his recently developed Archaeology class, the bookstore was accommodating and prompt with availability of the required book.

Conversely, Susanne Harle, Coordinator of the Journalism program, said that, although the same textbooks were used, some students have been unable to purchase texts or classes that have been previously offered.

Dr. Ronald Stewart, Professor of Sociology, said that while some of his students did not have textbooks, the bookstore had assured them they would be in within a week.

This would appear to indicate that either the Harper College Bookstore has become a "Mecca" for students of other schools to purchase their textbooks, or that students are not selling back used texts, or there is a problem with part of the ordering system. Given the diversity of responses it is most likely a combination of factors.

A telephone call to the bookstore offices and a resulting interview with Richard Seder, Bookstore manager, brought to light a whole different side than that of dissatisfied students and faculty. Seder confirmed that there are some problems this semester but they are apparently no more widespread than in previous semesters.

Seder said the system is a "long process of educated guesses." The process begins with estimated enrollments provided by departments and includes estimated buy backs of used texts, estimated withdrawals by students and increased enrollment factors. To cover such events, a 20% overstock

Grads say they're happy

A local follow-up study of Harper Career Alumni indicated that career alumni are generally successful in obtaining employment with an 83 percent employment rate. A good number of career graduates work in areas that are related to their majors.

Most work in areas within the state, and only a few work outside of the state. More than half of career alumni are currently attending school either at Harper or at another educational institution. Of those who transfer to a four-year institution, most attend Northern Illinois University.

Most transfer students report they are attaining GPAs that are comparable to those received at Harper.

The average alumni salary of $25,255 represents a five percent increase from those reporting from the 1988 alumni. Also, the majority report they are generally satisfied with their jobs. About 78 percent of them report they are in jobs that either are starting professional or better.

The follow-up study of the 1980 Harper Career Alumni produced a response rate of 77 percent.

Sexually abused males are often overlooked 15-20% of boys are sexually molested by age 18

By Court Moore, Psy.D.,
Student Development Coordinator

The past decade has brought a dramatic increase in awareness of the extent of childhood sexual abuse trauma. In the United States alone today, an estimated 12 to 24 million women have incest histories.

It's estimated an additional 250,000 to 500,000 females are added to those millions each year. Yet the male sexual abuse victim has not as yet been the subject of adequate investigation. One of the few reports attempting to estimate the prevalence of male sexual abuse estimates 15 to 20 percent of all boys are sexually molested in this country before they reach 18.

Experts say this is a conservative estimate. Research and clinical information are only now accumulating because male victims are even more reluctant than female victims to report the abuse or to seek help.

A male victim's shame of having been victimized, not being able to protect himself, having been sexually abused, believing the sexual abuse was not victimizing or had no effect, his fear that he'll not be believed or will be blamed and believing no help is available all contribute to non-reporting.

And victims often block out abuse memories for decades or forever because it's so psychologically devastating. "Since I was a young, helpless child, I didn't have enough knowledge to know I was sexually abused," said one Harper student who has sought help to overcome the effects of the abuse.

"Because of this, I led a life of complete denial. As I got older and more knowledgeable, I knew there was something dramatically wrong. There were times when I wanted to tell someone, but my feelings got in the way. I didn't want my family to think I was bad boy."

Who molesters boys?

The majority of child sexual abuse is perpetrated either by a family member or someone known to the child.

Females are more likely to be abused within the family and males, outside the family.

Often, the offender is in a position of authority over the boy (e.g., teacher, minister, baby sitter).

When a boy is sexually abused, whether within or outside the family, he's much more likely to be abused by a man than by a woman.

Though it's true some gay men molest young boys, it's more often true that boys are abused by heterosexual men or older boys.

Often these men have abused many boys over a long period of time. They may not discriminate between the sex of their victim and will choose wherever is most vulnerable and/or available.

Offenders attracted to boy victims report they're attracted to or repulsed by adult homosexual relationships and find the young boys' feminine characteristics and absence of secondary sexual characteristics, such as body hair, appealing.

Same sex abuse often results in even more damage to the boy since it can cause confusion and anxiety regarding his masculine identity and sexual preference.

Research shows 20 percent of sexual abuse of boys involve older women. A boy faces a particular form of confusion and isolation when he's sexually abused by a woman. If he enjoyed the experience physically, then he may think it's not abuse and, if he didn't, he may conclude he must be homosexual.

In this culture, it's shameful for a man to admit to not having enjoyed any form of sex with a woman. The victim is faced with the expectation that he should enjoy his victimization.

Effects of the abuse

Because sexual abuse occurs during the victim's childhood (usually around the ages of eight and nine), it drastically influences development.

For many, these experiences influence and become integrated into their personalities.

"I had guilt, embarrassment, shame and a concern about my sexuality. As time went on, the pain got stronger and I didn't know what to do with it. I bottled it up for 11 long years until I finally let it out and received help," said one student victim.

It's a myth that boys are less traumatized by the abuse.

THE BEE HAS LOST ITS' STING

Ken Dillard
Horbinger Staff Writer

Power to the people. Crippe a chance. Burn baby burn. Yes it sounds as if a time machine has been turned on, and we are back in the late 1960's. But the sayings have more meaning than that. They represent that people, particularly young people, cared about the world around them. They let future generations know that they wanted to make a change, however minute. Fast forward to modern day America. No more massive demonstrations against public policy. No more voting not against what we feel is wrong with our country. We, the next generation, have yet to let the world know how we feel about any major issues. Our voter turnout is among the worst in the country.

Participation in government activities is minimal. Do we just not care anymore? Do we just not care about each other and how we all are affected by rules and policies, whether we agree or disagree? Why? Somewhere along the path of involvement a U-turn was made and we have been knocked. It doesn't take much to get involved. Call local politicians and let them know how you feel about a bill about to be argued. Get petitions together to voice your collective opinion about any number of issues. We just have to get involved. Then maybe we can make that one word that the rest of the world keeps talking about, happen change.

Get Off your s!!!

A recent study has revealed that many students, staff and faculty possess an excessive amount of epidemics upon their gluteal region.

While this phenomenon is not limited to Harper College, the study did reveal both the contagious nature of this phenomenon and the extent to which virtually all of us are affected. In humans, the primary vector, proximity and repeated social contact serve as breeding grounds.

The study, involving both survey and observation, was conducted last August by the Spurious Center for Pseudo-Scientific Research. The findings are still under analysis, but it appears a rampant lack of risk taking and involvement has led to "gluteal-epidemic neoplasm," an excessive growth of skin on the hindquarters.

The study revealed a strong correlation between the condition and gratification of physical senses. Satisfaction of hunger, pursuit of physical comfort and avoidance of mental challenge were indicated as strong contributing factors. It is hypothesized that material wealth, the relative thickness of one's pocketbook can reduce friction and thereby contribute to the condition.

While no physical deaths are attributable to the condition, some advanced cases showed symptoms of imminent brain death.

Most people have at least a little extra skin on their butts! The cause is obvious. We aren't getting involved with each other and the outside world. Too often if something does not have some direct effect on us (pocketbook, comfort, etc.) we simply write it off. "No skin off my ass." We've heard it, we've probably all used the phrase at one time or another. But the phrase is fast becoming an attitude. Apathy runs rampant in our society and we accept mediocrity as the status quo.

What are you going to do about it? If you've read this far, at least you've thought about apathy and mediocrity to some extent. But, what are you really going to do? Will you take a chance? Will you wander off with the rest of the sheep to the slaughter, too busy growing skin on their butts to realize their heads are about to be chopped off, or will you jump the fence and pursue life?

The fact is, "no skin off my ass" just doesn't work. Sooner or later we are affected by everything. Like it or not, we cannot escape the world in which we live in. Whatever we give, we get back. This is especially true when we give nothing... that is exactly what we get back.

Who Ya Gonna Call? ...Public Safety

LuAnn Avery
Business Manager

Public Safety is continuously monitoring all the lots. If a lot is full they will put orange cones or signs that read "lot full" in the entrance. Please proceed to the next lot over. If you are confused there is usually an officer in the area that you can ask where to go. Do not park in the visitor lots. They are for visitors only. All students are subject to a fine or having their vehicle towed if they refuse to follow policy. Lots #3, #4 and #11 are usually open and provide ample parking while still being close to most of the buildings.

During the high traffic hours officers are stationed at the main entrance on Algonquin Road to control traffic. Be sure to pay strict attention to them. Flocking around and trying to get out faster will only cause accidents and delay you longer than ever. If you have any questions regarding parking please call Public Safety at

They are responsible for: alarm, traffic, safety issues, traffic control, lost and found items, crowd control and making sure things run smooth on every day details and holidays. They are on duty 365 days a year, 24 hours a day. So, they are always available to assist you. They are trained professionals. If you have a question or concern, please feel free to address it with an officer. They are on duty undernosed, under paid, and over worked.

esteen and feeling of being different and isolated are the major aftereffects of the abuse. Self-destructive ideation and behaviors, emotional reactions of extreme anxiety, guilt or shame, anger, nightmares, sleep problems, and flashbacks of the abuse are very common.

Male victims report a higher frequency of difficulty relating to men and report feelings of betrayal generalized to their ability to develop and maintain intimate relationships often are cited.

The survivor might cope through sexual withdrawal or through identification with the traditional male stereotype and macho sexual behavior.

How to get help
"After I realized I'd been sexually abused, I knew I needed help. I definitely had to talk to someone.

"I didn't know where to start," recalled the Harper student who shared his experience.

Unfortunately, his dilemma is common. Male sexual abuse victims are an underserved group.

But help is available. Harper's student development division has individual personal counseling available to students.

The division would like to start a support group for male victims.

Call ext. 2577 for more information on how to get help or to participate.

process linking enrollment to textbook ordering was discussed.

One additional service that the bookstore provides is the employment of a "special order system." This system is available to all students who find their textbooks unavailable. By filling out a simple form, the bookstore personnel will place a special order for the needed text and follow up by contacting the student when the book is available. About 500 such requests are processed each semester but unfortunately many students simply leave without completing such a form when confronted with an empty shelf.

There are many steps involved in the process of bringing a textbook to the shelf and there are many reasons for students not to have their textbooks.

Despite the input and dedication involved, shortages occur and steps must be taken to remedy the situation. In such instances, textbooks are often shipped, at significant expense, via second day services to meet the needs of both students and instructors.

Presently the methods employed to remedy shortage situations are manual and time consuming. Enrollment figures are reviewed on a regular basis and inventory is adjusted based on any significant changes in the numbers

Harper Intramural Program E x p a n d s

The Harper Intramural Program will expand its activity offerings, and provide for day time changes when students are available to participate. The changes come as a direct result of a student questionnaire that was taken last semester which indicated student preference for activities and the time that they had available for these activities.

The new intramural hours this year will be as follows: Tuesday and Thursday from 1 p.m. to 10 p.m. along with Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Although a primary schedule has been developed for the first semester a number of times are available during this period to include additional activities students may wish to participate in. Those students or groups seeking the inclusion of an activity should contact Mr. Jim Ryan, Coordinator of Intramurals, Room 202a Building M-Fri. 2963. Mr. Ryan will be available during the posted intramural hours.

Tour de Harper coming soon

Kim DeLard

Harbinger Sports Editor

It may not be the Tour de France, but Harper College is sponsoring a bicycle tour of its own at Rock River Valley the weekend of September 18-20.

For a fee of $15, beginning bikers or marathon cyclists have two different choices each day. Saturday offers the option of either a 15-mile course or a 55-mile course, while Sunday has both a 15-mile course and a 60-mile course. The price also includes motel lodging for two nights, at two people per room, a Saturday dinner and a Sunday breakfast, maps, and guide sheets designed to help out persons wanting to know where they are. Two experienced bicyclists will be lead-

Any doubts about fatigue, bike problems, or thirst along the course have already been solved. A signpost with the contact info provides assistance when needed on things such as spare parts, Gatorade, and medical attention should anyone get hurt.

A meeting will be held prior to the tour to go over any other questions that participants may have, in addition to an information packet that is mailed to the participants before the event.

A total of 24 persons are needed to take the tour. As of stand now, 11 are registered. Anyone wishing to register may do so by calling 387-8000 ext. 2592 and asking for Mr. Jim Blasko, or call ext. 2544 and ask for Mr. Jack Dettels, both of whom are participating.

Recycling program: Something old Something new

KENNETH DELAND
Harbinger News Editor

Aluminum can recycling, available for some time on campus, now is only one part of Harper's expanded recycling program.

Recycling has finally arrived at Harper. Thanks in part to the efforts of the Environmental Health and Safety Committee, students can now recycle plastics, aluminum, polystyrene and glass.

Representatives from companies that are part of Harper's recycling effort meet with students to explain the benefits of recycling. Students, staff and faculty are asked to sort their trash in appropriate bins.

In an effort to lower cost, bins have been installed at both ends of the dining area of the cafeteria for students to put any recyclables.

The project has been in the works for the past two to three years. All possibilities were looked at.

The program now being implemented has been proven to be most cost-effective.

It helps lower cost of garbage hauling that the school has to pay.

It also is being financially beneficial to the school.

The company that takes away the recyclable product pays the school.

In an effort to further reduce cost, the cafeteria is now buying recycled napkins and paper towels from Wisconsin Tissue.

Trustees approve '92-'93 college budget Education fund increased 7.33% to allow instructional technology upgrades, employee costs

The Harper College board of trustees formally adopted the 1992-1993 legal budget for the college.

It has been available for inspection to the public since June 25 through the public meeting on August 27.

The 1992-1993 operating budget is $51,768,500.

It reflects the board's attention to fiscal responsibility and to the current economic climate.

Through the board's self-imposed five percent tax cap, the college will receive less revenue than the allowed legal limit.

The legal budget consists of 10 separate funds. The two primary operating funds are education and operations and maintenance.

The education fund increased 7.33 percent over last year, a result of necessary technology upgrades for instructional purposes and increased employee costs.

Operations and maintenance budgets increased 3.46 percent.

After the budget resolution was approved, Chairman of the Board Molly Norwood said, "It [the budget] reflects the realities of today's economic and affirms the board's commitment to prudent management of taxpayer's dollars."

"On behalf of the board, I hope we can continue being frugal with our dollars, careful in managing college assets and diligent in requiring administration, faculty and staff to be responsive to the needs of the community."

Law makes colleges accountable

Gov. Jim Edgar signed into law a bill for the state's community college districts. House Bill 3739 provisions include several additions to the current duties of the Illinois Community College Board.

They allow the board to:

- Discontinue programs that fail to reflect the educational needs of the community being served.
- Approve or disapprove cooperative agreements between community colleges and other educational institutions.

■ Establish uniform financial accounting and reporting standards by July 1, 1997.

Another measure taken by the ICC to increase accountability was the start of educational guarantee programs.

The programs guarantee employee proficiency levels will be achieved by students in participating occupational programs or the students can return to take courses at no cost.

Student senate is revolving door No participation, no representation

KENNETH DELAND
Harbinger News Editor

Harper's student senate will be busy shaping the course of the new school year at its first meeting.

It will be held Friday, Sept. 25, at 1:30 p.m. in the board room.

With no one to run for the Liberal Arts division, the senate will appoint someone to fill the vacancy. They also begin the nominating process for club representatives, which will have four instead of the usual three.

Jeanne Pankaus, the director of student activities, is "...encouraging all interested students to attend the first senate meeting."

Student senate candidates give statements of goals

Prashant Rawal Technology, Mathematics and Physical Sciences Division

Prashant Rawal, engineering major, steps up to become senate representative for the Technology, Mathematics, and Physical Sciences division.

Currently in his second year at Harper, Prashant has previously been an officer in the Hindu Students Association.

He would like to see more flexibility and more classes for the engineering and math courses.

"I want to have more time flexibility and increased classes for engineering and math."

Eddie Balderas Latinos Unidos Division

Starting as a founder, Eddie Balderas takes over the role as representative of the Latino Unidos division of the student senate. Eddie who feels that minorities have some trouble being accepted, feels that Harper could use "more cultural diversity." This is the first time he has participated on any form of student government. He is currently in his second year at Harper as an English education major.

"The Harper students need a minority point-of-view."

Hardeep Komal Academic Enrichment and Language Studies Division

An engineering major currently in his second year at Harper, Hardeep Komal is the representative for the English As A Second Language division this year.

Previously having served on a student union, Hardeep feels that, due to bureaucracy, many students have a hard time being admitted to Harper.

"I would like to improve the English as a Second Language exams."

Lisa Smith Physical Education, Athletics and Recreation Division

With previous experience as a treasurer, and student trustee at Harper, Lisa Smith now begins the year as representative to the Physical Education, Athletics, and Recreation division.

For the last two years, she has played a crucial part of getting a men's soccer team to Harper. As representative, she would like to bring a women's soccer team and try to improve the intramural programs.

"I'm very interested in corporate sponsorship for programs in the division."

Jagtaron Singh Life Sciences Division

While Jagtaron does not have previous experience in the student government, he is most interested in providing a voice for minority students. In respect to the impact minorities make at Harper College Jagtaron also believes that there must be changes in perceptions and expectations of minority students.

"I would like to make a change with allocating resources to impact students. Last year there was no financial backbone in supporting students."

Melinda Neuhauser Student Ambassador

Melinda Neuhauser is running for student ambassador.

She is enthusiastic about meeting people and being involved in different student activities.

The anticipation of College nights at local high schools (college ambassadors promote) is an especially exciting project, as it helps promote Harper College to possible freshmen recruits.

"I think it's important that students be a part of the decision making process of the college."

Christine Boydell Business and Social Sciences Division

With three years experience as an ambassador for the Business and Social Sciences division, Christine Boydell now attempts to assume the representative role.

Christine, who in her previous experience has become familiar with all sorts of student problems, feels that she would be a good asset, since she is familiar with all of the new procedures recently enacted.

"The main concern for students is that there must not be any student activity fee increase..."

Dalvinder Saini Business and Social Sciences Division

Dalvinder Saini, a Physical Therapy major, is also running for the role of representative in the Business and Social Sciences division.

Unavailable for comment, Saini, according to his application for candidacy, would like to create a program that could successfully be implemented involving business and social sciences students. He also is willing to "readily listen to any student questions..."

Monthly nursing information sessions set

Each month Harper College offers information sessions and for individuals interested in the RN or LPN programs and for LPNs interested in the completion program to prepare for RN licensure.

The information sessions are held on the third Wednesday of each month at 1:30 pm in building E, Room 106 at the College, Algonquin and Roselle Roads, Palatine. The next session date is Wednesday, September 16, 1992.

For admission information and application materials, call 708/997-3000, extension 2206.

Harper offers insurance certification programs

In order to sell insurance in the State of Illinois, you must obtain an insurance producer's license by passing a state exam. The Illinois Department of Insurance requires training before taking this exam and for four years after obtaining a license. Harper College is now a certified provider of license exam training. Experienced instructors present a practical approach to help launch a successful insurance career.

Course offerings include Property and Casualty prelicensing courses which must be taken to qualify for the state exam. They are Fundamentals of Property Insurance, Fundamentals of Casualty Insurance, Fundamentals of Life Insurance and Fundamentals of Health and Accident Insurance.

Harper also offers continuing education classes for those who have received their insurance producer's license.

These courses prepare the working professional for subsequent exams in the area of property/casualty or life/health.

For the insurance agent who wishes to complete courses leading to the designation of Certified Financial Planner (TM), Harper offers the necessary series of courses.

The fee for each course including study materials is $100. For dates, times and registration, please call 708/3000, extension 2853.

Tom Thompson named director for center for students with disabilities

Tom L. Thompson, former coordinator, was recently appointed director of the center for students with disabilities by the Harper board of trustees.

Thompson, who has been with Harper since November 1980, administers student development part-time staff members.

Their mission is to create a comprehensive accessible environment for people with disabilities and to provide the services necessary for students to pursue in all aspects of campus life.

Auditor Agresta earns CIA

Theodore C. Agresta, CIA, was recently named as a Certified International Auditor by the Institute of International Auditors (IIA). The CIA designation is awarded to internal audit professionals who have met the requirements of the IIA's CIA program, including a four-part examination, as well as character and experience requirements.

Agresta joined Harper College in May 1991 as the internal auditor. He performs all financial, operational and compliance audits and was one of 25 honorable mention candidates.

Agresta will receive his Certified Internal Auditor Certificate from the Northwest Metro Chicago Chapter.

Resources For Women offers workshop on career choices

Harper College Resources for Women will offer the workshop, "Career Fit: Identifying the Right Job for You," on Saturday, September 19, 9 am - 3 pm, in Building A, Room 241, 1200 W. Algonquin Road, Palatine.

Enlightenment must be postmarked by September 30, 1992.

A new concert opens October 1, 1992.

As the job market becomes increasingly competitive, workers need to direct their careers. Identify what jobs are right for you and learn how to evaluate companies, the economy, demographics and your personal work values.

Tuition is $40.00 plus a $10.00 fee. To register, please call 708/997-3377 and specify course number LWW067-001.

Attention Poets

The National Library of Poetry has announced that $12,000 in prizes will be awarded this year to over 250 poets in the North American Open Poetry Contest.

The deadline for the contest is September 30, 1992. The contest is open to everyone and entry is FREE.

Any poet, whether previously published or not, can be a winner. Every poem entered has a chance to be published in a deluxe, hardbound anthology.

To enter, send ONE original poem, any subject and any style, to the National Library of Poetry, 11419 Crownridge Dr., P.O. Box 705-2K, Owings Mills, MD 21117.

The poem should be no more than 20 lines, and the poet's name and address should be no more than 20 lines, and the poet's name and address should appear on the top of the page.

Entries must be postmarked by September 30, 1992.

A new concert opens October 1, 1992.

Resource program helps women sort life choices

AMANDA MCDOCK
Horbinger Staff Writer

Karen is a fictitious person, but her story is real. Like many women, she was a victim of domestic violence. For years, Karen suffered at the abusive hands of her husband. A mother of three, Karen never held a job and she never attended college. Because of her situation, Karen felt she didn't have the financial support or the emotional strength to leave her husband.

One day, Karen's life changed. The frequent beatings became one too many. She took a risk and left her husband.

Accompanied only by her two children, Karen faced the rebuilding of her life. She had the courage to walk away, but she lacked the support she desperately needed to stay away.

Fortunately, Karen learned about a Harper College program—Resources for Women. This program became the helping hand for Karen and other displaced homemakers.

Today, Resources for Women has an extensive program that assists a woman with choices about her lifestyle. It helps a woman balance her family, career, personal relationships, finances and personal growth.

The program evolved in the 1970s from an innovative group of women who understood women's unspoken needs. Formerly known as program grew.

Currently under the direction of Dianmarie Reed, the program still manages to anticipate the upcoming needs of women and to provide services to meet those needs. Reed's job is not an easy one, especially low. As the number of single-parent families, to does the cost of tuition, child care and transportation.

Reed has dealt with many cases of abuse. She has been able to reach out to help women achieve their Women in "Women and Self Esteem." This workshop consists of lectures, discussions, group activities and a self-discovery assignment. The workshop is designed to guide women toward higher self-esteem. Men are encouraged to attend.

The courses cover all aspects of a woman's life. Topics include women in the workplace, women as parents, and women on the homestead. The program cover all the aspects of a woman's life.

Important issues such as health, finance, and personal growth are discussed.

The staff here of the courses and seminars are not only formally trained, they are also caring women and men who strive to make a difference.

Today's lifestyle is extremely demanding. People must face their own challenges.

Whether that challenge is returning to the workplace after a long period of time, or discovering one's own potential and achieving it, Resources for Women is there to assist.

Although it's named for women, men are always welcome.

For information on counseling, financial aid, or available courses and seminars, contact Resources for Women at ext. 2560.

FOR HEALTH THAT MATTERS

Be sure to mark Wednesday, September 16, on your calendar and be a part of a life-saving effort! You can save blood between 8:30 am and 1:30 pm in A-242.

People, every day, everywhere, throughout your community need blood and blood products! You probably thought that there were enough people donating to take care of these needs and that you need not be involved. But, you are needed to help alleviate a chronic blood shortage!

One in five of us will need a blood transfusion before age 70. We can't create synthetic blood. It can only come from a volunteer blood donor. Without an adequate supply of blood, many surgeries would not be possible. We could not help people with aplastic anemia, or leukemia, or cancer, or people who need an organ transplant. Our upcoming Harper College blood drive gives you a chance to help blood in need during this blood shortage. If you've never donated before, or even if you have, ask one of your friends to join you in taking this opportunity to help someone in need.

Let's hit this blood shortage like a tornado!

'Ask Jim' has the answers

Jim Walsh
Horbinger Columnist

Now you can ask Jim. Ask anything you want. Have you ever wondered who put the parking lots so far away from the buildings at Harper? Or maybe you'd like to know just what they put into the cafeteria food (then again, maybe you don't).

If you'd like the answers to these or any other questions you have that pertain to Harper College, submit your question along with your name, home phone number, and status at Harper. Please note in the message if you wish not to have your name used in the newspaper. Drop off Building A, room 379 (the Horbinger office) addressed to "Ask Jim" anytime.

New scholarships offer $2000 in aid

Donors honor 25 years of excellence in education

The Dorian Thompson: Friends of Harper Scholarship

The Dorian Thompson: Friends of Harper Scholarship has been established through the generosity of the Friends of Harper and Harper College staff.

The scholarship award will be used toward tuition, fees, books and educational supplies.

Jazz banjo is one smooth musical treat

Pat Frazzomone
Harbinger Staff Writer

This recording was purchased in the jazz section of a local music shop, but I have to admit I had some reservations regarding jazz banjo. That's right, folks, jazz banjo! But my reservation proved to be unwarranted.

The music is hot, tight, innovative, and to say the very least, unconventional.

The music was performed live in the studio. That means that there was no overdubbing or sequencing. Levy did play keyboard and harmonica, simultaneously.

There are four band members. Beta Fleck on acoustic, steel, electric and nylon string banjos. He also composes 11 of the 12 pieces on this recording. Roy Wooten on synthase drummer; Howard Levy on harmonica, piano, synthesizer, penny whistle and saxophone; Victor Larnone Wooten on four-string, six-string banjo, five-string fretless banjo, and stereo banjo.

Each song has a distinctive flavor all its own. On both "Home's Dream" and "The Yee-haw Factor" there is a very definite bluegrass influence. "Bonnie and Clyde" offers some distinct flamenco motifs and "True North" has its roots in Celtic folk music. "Sonata" is definitely bluesy, played with Spanish overtones.

It has been said that jazz is the only really American music form. Then Beta Fleck and the Fleckson play jazz amazingly well, having presented a recording that blends multi-cultural roots with a fresh and unique style. "Jazz con banjo" is indeed a one of a kind musical experience.

Hawking film gives viewer a brief glimpse into the infinite

Pat Frazzomone
Harbinger Staff Writer

"A Brief History of Time"

Stephen Hawking is a "searcher." The disease that has made him a prisoner in his body has left him mind free to explore the stars. Hawking is a victim of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS). This degenerative disease attacks the central nervous system.

It has left him confined to a mechanical wheel chair, his body unable to respond to any commands. However, through the use of a specialized computer software system, he is still able to communicate.

For those of us lacking the mathematical gymnastics necessary to understand the theoretical mechanics of Hawking's "self-contained universe," this film offers an easily assimilated alternative to his books.

The film director, Errol Morris, gives flashbacks of Hawking's youth as seen through the eyes of relatives, friends, and peers, interperred with interviews of his fellow scientists. While we watch the history of his life unfold, he is presenting the theories behind his revelation regarding the history of the universe.

Yet the viewer is left to wonder whether Hawking would have made the science of cosmology his life's work had it not been for the disease itself. For although his genius became obvious early on, what was equally apparent was his lack of direction. He readily admits he found nothing of sufficient interest to make of it his life's work.

The film's auditory and visual imagery is both startling and thought-provoking. We hear Hawking's voice as it is now produced by a voice synthesizer and we see his face reflected on the monitor of the computer that has become his only link with the real world.

The famous naturalist John Muir once said, "the power of imagination makes us infinite." Hawking has certainly proved this statement to be true. For through the power of his imagination alone he added plausibility to the theory of a closed universe, but has left his mind free to contemplate the infinite.

"A Brief History of Time," is shown daily at the Loren's Fine Arts Theatre in Chicago.

Modern Jazz Quartet to appear September 12 at Prairie Center for Arts

The Schaumburg Prairie Center for the Arts opens its 1992-1993 season with the world-renowned Modern Jazz Quartet, appearing at 8 p.m. on Saturday, September 12.

True to its name (although pianist John Lewis says the origin of the group's name had nothing to do with the description of the music), the Modern Jazz Quartet remains at the forefront of contemporary music today. The ensemble recently celebrated its 40th anniversary, making them the most enduring group in jazz. Over the years, pianist John Lewis, vibraphonist Milt Jackson, bassist Percy Heath and drummer Connie Kay have played together with symphony orchestras and touring quartets at universities, on TV commercials and on film soundtracks. The Modern Jazz Quartet's most recent Chicago appearance was last spring at Chicago's Orchestra Hall. Unlike the large halls, popular quartet has become accustomed to playing, the Prairie Center concert will allow people to hear the MJQ in a more intimate setting. The ensemble will be performing an acoustic concert in the theatre's four hundred twenty-two seat state-of-the-art auditorium.

After 40 years, the Modern Jazz Quartet has become one of the most accomplished and revered musical acts today. They continue to sound forever young and inventive. As the New York Times accurately wrote, "they've reached a point where every show is special."

Tickets for the Modern Jazz Quartet are $24 for adults, $22 for students and seniors. Tickets can be ordered by calling the Prairie Center box office at (708) 894-3630 weekdays, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Prairie Center for the Arts is located at 201 Schaumburg Ct., Schaumburg, IL. (Next to the Schaumburg Municipal Center at Schaumburg Rd. and Summit Dr.)

Noon concert features 'One' Ice cream sundays on Wednesday

A hard-rock music and reggae, "One," will perform during a free concert at 12 p.m., September 16, during the Harper College 25th Anniversary Ice Cream Social in the Student Center Lounge, Building A.

The Toronto-based group is best known for their reggae treatment of a Rolling Stones song called "You Can't Always Get What You Want." The group is known for their combinations of musical style like Jamaican and English ska, (an upbeat form of reggae with horn accompaniment).

The nighttime concert is free and open to the public. Ice cream sundays are available for 50 cents. For more information call the Student Activity Office at extension 2242.

Don't vote!!

We are not only on the edge of a national election but also a student senate election right here on campus.

But, PLEASE, don't vote!

Remember your lack of action allows those who know best to have their way. Your vote could well impede progress and prevent someone from acting in your best interests.

Too many voters, that is the problem here. Too much input on issues tends to blur and diffuse the needed structure. What we really need is more uncontested elections. For example, this fall only eight of 11 student senate openings even have candidates running. And, only one is contested.

For what it is worth, your voice is small! Insignificant and not in the least influential. Maybe that's why only about 500 students of more than 20,000 voted in the student senate elections last fall. If you think for a moment that your vote really counts, look at the world around you.

What do you see? The result of YOUR votes? Or rather your lack of votes! Apathy runs rampant on campus and in society. Apathy has been voted in by the majority and apathy is in control! Your lack of vote for a candidate of any office is a vote for apathy.

So, DON'T VOTE. By not voting you too can help maintain the status quo. Why rock the boat? Maintain the steady-state of comfortable apathy.

George and the boys singing an old tune

Pat Fitzsimmons
Harbinger Staff Writer

Family values, that's what this country needs, a return to family values!

President Bush and all of his cronies would like to see us return to the America of his childhood, back to the '60s and '50s.

Wake up Mr. Bush! Beaver Cleaver has grown up. He's now a recovering drug addict, and can't find a job. Just Cleaver is a widower and can't survive on his Social Security check.

The pension benefits the gets from Ward's company only helps to defray the costs for the additional medical coverage she must buy, and the medication that Medicare doesn't pay for. America, it's time to close the door on the new barn in the '20s, sure they had a tough time. They live through the Great Depression and World War II.

But it's just for that reason that we need to move on now.

The Depression and the war twisted their minds, big time! It colors their judgment still. "Moore is power" and "America first" are their slogans.

Only this sort of mindrot could allow a President to say that the homeless issue is not as severe as the liberals would have you believe and therefore not worthy of initiating any sort of significant economic policy to deal with it.

It also allowed him to deny for months the very existence of a country-wide recession.

It's time to elect a President and Vice President who grew up in the '40s.

It's time to elect people who made the really "hard choices", the group that looked at all that had been and said "No!"

In the words of Abbie Hoffman, a vocal representative of the '60s and early '70s, and a native of my hometown, Worcester, Massachusetts - "We ended legal segregation.

We ended the idea that you can send a million soldiers ten thousand miles away to fight in a war that people do not support.

We ended the idea that women are second-class citizens. We were reckless, arrogant, silly, and headstrong - and we were right."

Vote in November.

'Eye on the Hawks' preparing for changes to sports

Jim Wallace
Sports Editor

There's someone new calling the shots on the Harbinger Sports page this semester. I'm Jim Wallace, the new Sports Editor at this newspaper, and I plan to make some changes while I'm here.

First of all, I want everybody reading this to realize something

The Harbinger is a STUDENT RUN newspaper, written and edited by the students, for the students, and I would like to see the students get involved.

In these articles, we missed last semester you would like to see on the sports page now? How about interviews? What teams would you like to see given more (or less?) attention? Tell me what you think. Notes can be dropped off at the Harbinger office, building A, room 379 (please address to "Sports").

One change that has already happened is the size of the sports staff. I have more than twice as many writers working with me now than the last editor had, and I plan to use them all.

If I am given a good reason to write multiple stories on a given team in an issue of the Harbinger, I'll do so without question. However, I need to know that somebody (or some team) is worthy of extra coverage.

One more change I would like to see happen cannot be made without the help of others. Last year, the coaches from many Harper sports teams found very little reason for talking to Harbinger writers. I do have one word of advice for those who fit this description: the more you talk with us, the more people will hear about you. If you want publicity for your team, you need to work with us, not against us!

Maybe I'm wrong, but I don't think I'm asking for a whole lot. All I'm trying to do is make a sports page worth looking forward to each week. With a little help from others and a good deal of my own time, I hope to give Harper Sports fans a sharp eye on the Hawks.

Harper football opens season on high note vs. COD

Jim Ferguson
Harbinger Sports Writer

The Harper football team opened another promising season with a 21-12 victory over the College of DuPage. Saturday's game pitted two teams destined to battle it out for the NAC and Region IV championships.

Harper got off to a quick start, scoring touchdowns on their first two possessions. The Hawks were helped out by the Chaparrals on a bad snap on COD's first punt attempt. DuPage's recovery didn't give up the ball on their own 9 yard line. It didn't take long for Harper's John Wiergalla, a freshman running back, to punch it in from the 1 yard line.

The Hawks didn't waste any time on their second possession, either. Trevor Rogers, a sophomore running back, scored on a 17 yard touchdown pass.

From that point, both teams seemed to lose momentum. Harper and DuPage traded punts until the Chaparral end of the field, ending the first half.

The scoring resumed in the third quarter with Jason Puccini scoring on an excellent pass from COD's quarterback. Their point after attempt was blocked wide left, leaving the score at 14-6.

Harper appeared to be in trouble after a couple of wrong runs by COD's Dwayne Gray who finished the day with 207 yards on 26 carries. Even with a five yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter, the Chaparrals remained down by two.

COD regained the ball on their twenty yard line with 5:12 remaining. Looking to make the game a little interesting, Harper's defense withstood the challenge, stopping a fourth down quarterback sneak at the 10 yard line.

The Chaparrals came up strong on defense, forcing the Hawks to attempt a 30 yard field goal. The kick went wide left, but Harper was saved by a penalty flag. COD had twelve men on the field, giving Harper a first and goal from the 6 yard line.

On fourth and inches, QB Eric Stackton took the snap and squeezed into the end zone to put the game away with 39 seconds left.

This was the second regular victory over COD in the last two years. The two teams met in the Region IV State Championship last year with DuPage winning 21-11. Judging from the way they played, it looks like deep vs. all over again come November.

Harper stays on the road with a trip to Grand Rapids, Michigan on September 12. The Hawks will return to their roots with a game against Moraine Valley on September 19.

Campus to receive new building

HARPER WILL GET ITS OWN 'L'

Joanna T. Newman
Assistant News Editor

Harper College Board of Trustees, Administrators and Faculty gathered together Friday evening for the official ground breaking ceremony celebrating the construction of the new Liberal Arts Classroom Building. Construction is scheduled to be completed in December 1993.

The new Liberal Arts Building, called "L", will be located between existing buildings P and F. The 91,000 square foot building will include 21 Classrooms, 34 Faculty Offices, three Art Studios, a Liberal Arts Divisional Office, Bookstore and Learning Desk. Construction costs are estimated at $14,000,000.

Molly Harwood, chairperson of the Harper Board of Trustees, said, "I am proud that the Board of Trustees and the staff at Harper have been able to effectively and carefully use our resources and set aside the capital budget necessary to undertake this type of building plan."

This building is the first of a multi-phase construction strategy at the Palatine campus. Rather than "stand alone" structures, the new building is designed as a vital connecting link between the library and other campus buildings. Students will be able to walk indoors between buildings and enjoy a new exterior quadrangle courtyard framed by the new structure. Along with the Women's and ESL (English as a Second Language) programs, current academic conditions have increased a demand for more learning programs.

Although Harper College has been providing these programs in recent years, it has been difficult to inflicting the demand. The new Liberal Arts building will provide needed increased classroom capacity and administrative areas, which will be more effective for current demand.

During the construction phase, students are encouraged to use parking lots three, four and five, which are located on the northwest side of the campus. A protective fence has been placed around the construction area for the safety of the students, staff and visitors. A celebration recognizing contributions made by village, past, school board and many non-profit organizations.

Meeting of the minds set

The Harper College vice president of student affairs, Dr. Bonnie Henry, would like to meet with seven or nine different Harper students each month.

Henry would like to interact with interested students to learn their opinions and for input regarding determinations the has to make during the course of his job.

The next luncheon is Thursday, October 8, from Noon to 1 p.m. The discussion will be informal.

All students are eligible to participate, but only one will be allowed each month.

If you know a student who would like the opportunity to meet with a senior administrator and enjoy a free lunch at the same time, contact Susan McClary or Bonnie Pinkston in the Student Activities office (A336) at extension 2242 for further information.

Apathy wins! Again!!

The total of votes cast in the Student Senate elections last week was 86. That's out of 22,000 possible voters. We were going to write an editorial about it but decided not to bother.

He had average looks, an average personality, and he made the average amount of money anyone working as a stockperson can make. But for some reason he just didn't fit in. He had been the way his whole life. In grammar school, he was considered a nerd. In junior high, he became a loner. And in high school, he lived the worst fate anyone can imagine—he was simply invisible.

Never talked to him or even cared that he existed. He spent every lunch period sitting alone at a table watching everyone else be happy with their friends. For four years of living hell, he tried desperately to make friends but never succeeded.

Finally, college came. Willie thought, "Now that I'm an adult, I'll finally find my niche." He enrolled in his local community college figuring that with 20,000 plus students, someone would let him into his or her life. The odds were with him.

The end of the first semester was slugging for Willie—no friends and his grades sunk. He was at a loss for what to do next. Fortunately for him, his parents were strong people, and they encouraged him to go back to school and try it again, with some changes, namely, his image.

So, again, Willie enrolled. Under a new name and wearing new clothes, he had a new idea on how to meet people. He was going to stand up and talk to the nearest person, regardless of who it was. He was going to make people like him. After the first week, when the campus had settled into its normal routine, he went for it.

In between his classes, he would sit in the main building and try to make eye contact with people. As soon as he thought he had made it a connection, he would grovel and talk to the person. It was the greatest plan he had ever thought of. "You had a date!" work.

From the main floor, to the reception room, to the library, to any place else where people gathered, Willie would continuously fail in even making eye contact with anyone. And on the rare occasion he would make contact, the person would give him a cold shoulder. Another semester down the toilet.

During the following summer, Willie contemplated what next. He was approaching the end of his rope. How many guys spend their free time watching reruns of "Three's Company"? And how many had never even had to happen next to a female? Something had to happen next time, or he wasn't sure what would happen to him.

The new semester began, and Willie was back. This time, he took only two courses and decided to declare his major as undecided. The plan for this year was to be a junior. He was going to join any club on campus to try and meet people. From health awareness clubs, to religious clubs, to the health panic club (although he was a General), he tried it. And in each club it was the same thing.

No matter how outgoing he tried to be, no matter how many people he became acquainted with, at the end of the club meeting was over, so were the friendships. People just didn't seem to have time or energy about making friends. Willie was repeatedly turned down on offers to do something on a Friday or Saturday night. No matter how hard he tried, he couldn't carry over campus acquaintances into real, lasting friendships.

Willie couldn't take it anymore. His grades sucked, he had no sense of career direction, and he still had no one in his life. He just could not see going on like this. Then came the final straw.

The morning came his work place to close down, and Willie was without income. If he couldn't pay his insurance, he would lose his car. This caused him to snap. Getting onto the expressway, Willie drove like a maniac toward the Wisconsin border. No one's sure of what he had planned, but before he was able to execute any sort of plan, a tall truck jumped out in front of him. Swerving into oncoming traffic, his car slammed into another head-on, causing both to explode in flames. Willie was dead. And adding insult to injury, all the recognition he got from the school was a little two-paragraph column on the third page of the paper.

The moral to this story is simple. People have got to start giving their attention to people in life. If the people Willie had met would have been more open to friendships, he'd be alive today. All he wanted was to know someone to do things with, or just hang out with. He had hoped to someday acquire a girl friend too. These are not huge things to ask for.

Society somehow singled Willie out saying, "You're a misfit. You don't look like a model, you're not rich, and you're not cool enough." It was not a conscious decision on anyone's part, but because people were so wrapped up in planning how to make their millions someday, they forgot what really counts in this life. It seems if you don't have some majorly original quality about yourself, no one wants anything to do with you. It's almost a form of discrimination.

It's time we all make a change in how we interact with people. When you see someone sitting alone, don't be afraid to talk to him or her. If someone comes up to you, be open and listen to what that person has to say. Be willing to make friends with new people every day. If we all try, we can eliminate the hundreds of Willie stories we can pass today. Just take a look around next time you're sitting in the lounge in Building A. Any person you sitting alone could, in fact, be a Willie. Trust me, I know Willie better than anyone. It's a horrible burden to bear.

COMMENTARY

It's a sad, sad world for the Willies

Craig Wilson
Harbinger Commentary writer

Willie seemed like the typical 20-year-old college student. He had a typical job to assure. He drove a typical beat-up car. He made the typical judgment errors concerning life. And he was to your typical community college. Only one thing in his life was not so typical. Willie did not have one friend in the whole world.

You're probably thinking, "The Willie character must have been a world-class loser!" But this wasn't so. He actually had just about everything going for him that most young adults do.

He had average looks, an average personality, and he made the average amount of money anyone working as a stockperson can make. But for some reason he just didn't fit in. ## Science fair bonanza

Last year over 650 undergraduate science and engineering majors found the answers to many of their questions regarding graduate school by attending Argonne National Laboratory's Fourth Annual Graduate School Fair in Science and Engineering. These students had the opportunity to talk directly with faculty representatives from over 145 of the finest graduate school programs in the United States.

The 1992 Fair, scheduled for October 3, promises to be even bigger and better. Approximately 160 faculty representatives will be in attendance.

The University of Illinois, Princeton University, Yale University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Northwestern University, Georgia Institute of Technology, California Institute of Technology, and Carnegie Mellon University are just a few of the universities sending faculty to the Fair. Fields which will be represented include chemistry, physics, biology, computer science, engineering, and mathematics.

The day's activities will begin with a number of brief field-specific presentations on a variety of topics, including: how best to prepare for graduate school, how to choose the graduate school which is best for you, financial support available to graduate students and what career opportunities await you once you have obtained your graduate degree. For the remainder of the day, students will be able to meet, one-on-one, with the university faculty representatives to discuss graduate programs.

Undergraduate participants will also have the opportunity to take brief tours of a number of different Argonne research facilities.

John Manja, Faculty and Student Program Leader at Argonne and coordinator of the Fair, points out that enrollment in science and engineering graduate programs in the United States have severely declined over the last two decades.

The percentages of B.S. degree holders in these fields who attain Ph.D.'s has fallen from 12% to approximately 6% over that time.

Projections indicate that this decline, combined with the increasing demand for technology-based science for highly trained scientists and engineers, will lead to serious manpower shortages in the 1990s. This means, of course, that there will be excellent employment opportunities for those students who obtain an advanced degree.

Not only juniors and seniors, but sophomores and freshmen as well, should attend the Graduate School Fair and be planning a future which includes advanced study.

Argonne National Laboratory, a Department of Energy facility, is located 25 miles south-west of Chicago and can be reached by taking Interstate 55 west past the 294 Tri-State Tollway to the Cass Avenue South exit. The morning presentations will begin at 9:00 a.m. Discussions with the faculty representatives and tours of Argonne research facilities will start at 10:00 a.m. and conclude at 3:00 p.m.

For more information or a list of the university graduate departments attending the Fair, write or call Ms. Christine O'Brien, Division of Educational Programs, Argonne National Laboratory, Argonne, Illinois 60439-4845 (Tel: 708-252-9378).

Melee at "C"

Four Harper students were involved in a fight. One student was taken to Northwestern Community, where he received stitches for injuries to his head and side.

Two other students received minor injuries in the Sept. 9 incident that occurred at "C" building.

According to witnesses, at about 11:44 a.m. the students, each in groups of two, started to have some words exchanged between them from a previous off-campus party.

Blows were then thrown and one student was apparently thrown through a window.

Campus Public Safety arrived shortly after the fight started and managed to keep the students from continuing the skirmish.

A student conduct hearing will be held to determine disciplinary action.

Interior Design students receive 2nd annual awards

Harbinger Photographer

The Interior Design department hosted its second annual freshmen interior design awards on Tuesday, September 15.

Dianne Bettsall presented first-place awards to Patti Argente and Susan Haller, second place to Susan Orlov and third place to Kariina Cronin. The competitors, recommended by instructors, submitted a project that included a floor plan, furniture layout, fabrics, finishes, elevations and a perspective. Each instructor was limited to choosing five projects per class. Judging was done by five independent from professional design organizations: Mary Anne, Nadine Harris, Jane Ivin, Christine Butler and Mary Weaver. The judges made their decisions based on design concept, design solution, creativity and presentation of the student's work.

MAP grants available for qualified first-year applicants

The Monetary Award Program (MAP) grants will continue to be awarded to qualified freshmen applicants through Oct. 1, for the 1992-93 school year, as a result of action taken by the Illinois Student Assistance Commission (ISAC) at its Aug. 17 meeting. Corrections to previously submitted applications will also be accepted.

ISAC, the administrator of MAP, is faced with the second straight year of record numbers of applications for MAP assistance.

After experiencing a nine percent increase last year, MAP application volume for the 1992-93 academic year is currently running 5.6 percent ahead of the number of applications at this time last year.

Lacking funds to meet this sharply increased demand, ISAC had temporarily suspended submitting MAP awards for all applicants on June 20. This represents the earliest suspension date in the history of the MAP program.

At its Aug. 17 meeting, the Commission re-examined the action it took to limit and voted unanimously to release suspended 1992-93 MAP applications for freshmen applicants who apply prior to Oct. 1, 1992 and for corrections applicants who submitted their initial applications prior to the June 20 suspension; these corrections applications will be processed through Nov. 15.

The cost of providing grants to the additional 5,000 students expected to receive MAP awards as a result of this action is projected to be $6 million to $9 million.

To meet this cost, the Commission may need to reduce the spring term portion of all announced MAP awards. All 1992-93 MAP award letter. In order to prevent any immediate financial disruption, the fall term portion of students' grants will not be affected. Illinois, like many other states, is experiencing severe budgetary problems, which have serious implications for the financial aid programs administered by ISAC.

Though ISAC was fortunate to receive a substantial increase in MAP funding for the 1992-93 academic year, the additional dollars provided were consumed almost entirely by tuition increases.

With spring term award reductions likely, MAP grant recipients should begin preparing for the cuts immediately by economizing now to cover the upcoming additional expenses. Also, recipients should consult with the financial aid office about alternative sources of financial aid (i.e., work study, loans, other grants).

The Monetary Award Program, the second largest state grant program of its kind in the nation, is a need-based financial aid program that will award over $200 million to over 40,000 Illinois students during the 1992-93 academic year.

U2 still has 'Desire' to put on a good show

Steve Davis,

Herald Staff Writer

September 1992. Fifty-two weeks packed with high-tech video and early rolled into the world Music Theatre in south suburban Tinley Park.

For three nights, the stage is illuminated with 1200 tons of audio and visual equipment, including flashing message boards and a host of other electronic gadgetry.

Five giant video screens and 35 smaller monitors televise the event—U2's Zoo TV tour—rightly dubbed, "Outdoor Broadcasts."

The show has expanded into a larger production since U2's first live of the tour last winter.

Zoo TV clicks on the video screen. George Bush is seen chanting in a clearly altered news video clip of "We'll Rock You" as the Edge roars into the opening number, "Zoo Station."

Suddenly a figure is dancing a platform, dwarfed by a huge, money video screen. It's Bono, dressed in black leather and wearing his infamous fly sunglasses. U2 is back!

U2's bassist, the complex with flashing messages like, "Everything you know is wrong," and "Everyone is a racist."

The band paused briefly at the end of "The Fly" as Bono grabbed a remote control unit and flicked through several of Zoo TV's stations. He ended up at the Home Shopping Channel, an appropriate place to begin the supercharged, "Even Better Than the Real Thing."

The U2 set consisted of video

It's Bono, dressed in black leather... U2 is back!

ally all!" Achtung Baby "plus a few surprises. One of the highlights of the evening was Larry Mullen Jr. singing a love from Irish song and Edge performing the Ben F. King classic, "Sundown."

U2 brought the roof down with stirring acoustical versions of "Angel of Harlem," "When Love Comes to Town" and "So Cruel." Lou Reed's "Satellite of Love" shocked the world as Bono himself sang and lived (thanks to video technology).

On the big of the tour, "Bono" is exchanged for a couple of "War" songs like "New Year's Day" and "Sunday Bloody Sunday." During the latter, someone handed Bono an Irish flag and he proceeded to use it as a political bludge.

An emotional version of "Run-ning to Stand Still" was performed precisely as the Edge struck the guitar chords with chilling clarity.

"Where the Streets Have No Name" (reworked from Bono's fading harmonica on "Rattle and Hum") was accompanied by explosive of $1 bills floating across the first 15 rows. Bono was dressed in silver, imitating Elvis Presley and his gold suit. Bono preached money and politics and even made a call to the White House operator, but he couldn't get through to President Bush.

"Love is Blindness" closed U2's TV Tour, whereas "40" had always been staple in U2's live shows since "War" was released.

Big Audio Dynamic II and Public Enemy opening the Zoo TV Tour with scorching sets in Chicago.

Now that U2 showed the world the riches of their success, it will be interesting to see what happens next.

It wouldn't be a total shock to realize that U2 lost some fans since the dawn of this new technology. But it's like the song, "Heartland," states, "Dawns changes everything."

Writer McInerney tells all at Harper visit

ALISA CULLEN
Harbinger Staff Writer

When Jay McInerney passed his first point in the age of sex, he knew he wanted to be a writer. However, success did not come easy.

The road to the top was paved with hardship. McInerney worked as a reporter, fact checker, editor, teacher, bank farmer, bartender, waiter and liquor store clerk before catapulting to fame.

McInerney discussed his encounter with Hollywood to a tentative Harper College audience last week.

The year was 1984. Random House released its first original paperback, the Vintage Contemporaries series.

The book, McInerney's "Bright Lights, Big City," provided an unusual look at the publishing industry, world of fashion, party scene, controlled substances and self-discovery.

A month before publication, McInerney was working in a drug liquor store in Syracuse, N.Y., for minimum wage. One night, a drunk manhole and drunkenly demolished a bottle of Wild Irish Rose for a mere dollar price. But McInerney was too busy to notice; he was too busy to notice the line offering him a novel deal.

The caller claimed to be a vice president from Paramount Pictures. "I figured he was calling from Los Angeles because he said 'Jay Babe' a lot," McInerney said. "I wasn't sure if this guy was serious. The drunk started screaming about the bottle of Wild Irish Rose. Then he fired some in and started beating me as I was trying to talk him down to Los Angeles. The vice president said to me, 'What's this noise? Where are you?'

"I was so embarrassed because of my sexual circumstances. If he knew I was working in a liquor store he might not be interested in my book. So thinking very quickly, I said, 'I'm at a party.' And he said, 'Jay, Jay, I read your book, of course you're at a party.' That was apparently the right answer."

The executive

said McInerney would receive first-class airline tickets and inquired where he would like to stay. McInerney said, "I don't know any hotels in Los Angeles." The vice president said, "How about the Chateau Marmont?" I said, "Is that good?" He said, "Is that good? I believe it does!"

With a novel deal, McInerney arrived at Tinseltown, he met with a Paramount executive and had him in an office with white walls and furniture. "There were ray guns on the coffee table," McInerney said. "He periodically picked me up and tossed it at me. He said, 'I'm a musical with a production number.

My people will call your people.' Later McInerney heard the executive was fired.

Other imagined story concepts were "The Graduate on Campus," "The Catcher in the Rye for the '80s," "A WASP's Portney's Complaint," "Rocky Business Part II," "Saturday Night Fever with Drugs," and "Flashdance without the Dancing."

"Bright Lights, Big City" was eventually optioned by Columbia Pictures. McInerney was asked to write the screenplay. He wrote three drafts. The first time he was picked up in a limousine, the second time in a Town Car, and the third time he was asked to call a cab.

At the size of the vehicle, he thought to do his role with importance to the studio.

Two years and six writers later, Columbia released "Bright Lights, Big City." McInerney back to write a screenplay based on his first draft.

He said he liked the movie "It felt limited by the medium."

"Only a fraction of the story or dramatic material in the novel comes across on the screen," McInerney said.

"The novel is a page-turner. He can't carry his characters and readers over vast distances of time and space with a flash of a pen or a key of a word processor. The budget of the literary imagination is unlimited in a way that makes even the biggest movie budget seem kind of frugal."

With a first novel and movie to his credit, McInerney wanted for fame to knock on his door.

"I thought the world as I knew it was going to change," McInerney said. "It was not quite what he expected. I learned about the press, and how America's previous dreams and pack-age personalities. They make heroes in this country and then try to knock them down."

His book eventually graced the best author list due to favorable reviews, the release of the movie, word of mouth and celebrity.

McInerney proved he isn't a one-hit wonder by subsequently crafting the well-received novel, "Ransom," "The Story of My Life" and "Bright Side Falls," as a natural evolution. "It deals more directly with social, cultural and economic issues," McInerney said.

"I'm not a kid in rebellion any more. My characters grew with me."

McInerney's work is not limited to novel writing.

He periodically writes articles for Esquire, the New York Times, Vanity Fair, Rolling Stone, the New Republic and Vogue.

McInerney said writing is not for everyone. "It is always appealing when I meet people who want to be writers and have limited knowledge of what's been done before," he said.

"Anyone who hasn't read Shakespeare, Jane Austen or Flaubert shouldn't presume to speak for his own times."

"There are three things that prepare you to be a writer—reading, writing and experiencing life."

McInerney said, "Writing a novel is hard enough. Publishing it is not a day at the beach."

A bright-looking Jay McInerney cap lives as a Harper student with a novel about how he became one of their own and famous.

Non-motorized transportation the only way to go for some Harper students

ALISA CULLEN
Harbinger Staff Writer

Along with getting registered, buying books and paying tuition, every student must find a way to get to school. Two creative Harper students solved this dilemma by picking the bicycle as their mode of transportation.

Much less expensive and healthier than harmful buses are owned, the bike is fast becoming an alternative means of transportation for budget-conscious college students.

Ann Krawinkel rode her Raleigh Mountain Bike from the University of North Colorado, in Greeley, Colo. "I go everywhere on my bike," she said. She considers the Raleigh her regular means of transportation to school and her two jobs. When asked about ge-ing shopping, Krawinkel said she uses her backpack to carry groceries.

Living close to Harper was an advantage for her.

At Harper, she

LUTHERAN GENERAL HOSPITAL/CLINIC

Though Illinois has required insurers to cover screening mammography since 1990, as few as ten in seven eligible women are taking advantage of this lifesaving early detection procedure.

Those were the findings of a recent Blue Cross and Blue Shield Illinois study, which found that only 14 percent of insured women, 40 and older, filed claims for mammography examinations in 1990 and 1991. Similarly, the survey showed that just 16 percent of insured women older than 50 filed mammography claims during those two years.

"This study is very disturbing, especially since mammography is more affordable and accessible to women than ever before," said Helen Jansen, Chairman of the N.W. Subchapter S Unit of the American Cancer Society. "We are hopeful that, as women and their physicians become increasingly aware of the benefits of this lifesaving test and improved insurance coverage of it, more women will have screening mammograms as part of their routine health regimen."

During the 1980's, American Cancer Society volunteers lobbied for the law that now enables screening mammography coverage by private insurance in Illinois, as well as by Illinois Medicaid and Federal Medicare. Previously, mammography was covered for diagnostic purposes only.

A mammogram is a simple, low-dose x-ray that can detect breast cancer before a lump can be felt, when the survival rate approaches 100% and there is an excellent chance of saving the breast.

The American Cancer Society recommends an annual mammogram for all women age 50 and older. Those between the ages of 40 and 50 should have a mammogram every one to two years, and women should begin mammography by age 40.

Many mammography facilities will offer reduced-price mammograms during October in observance of Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

For a list of these facilities, as well as a roster of all local ACR-accredited mammography facilities, members of the public are invited to call the American Cancer Society toll-free at: 1-800-ACS-2345.

U2 brought the roof down with rousing musical versions of "An-

On this leg of the tour, "Bad" is exchanged for a couple of "War" songs like "New Year's Day" and "Sunday Bloody Sunday." During the latter, someone handed Bono an Irish flag and he proceeded to use it as a printed headline.

An emotional version of "Running to Stand Still" was performed primarily as an Edge wreck the guitar chords with chilling clarity.

"Where the Streets Have No Name" flowed smoothly from Bono's fading harmonica on "Raining in Your Heart." The concert included "Drunken" and was accompanied by explosions of 81 balloons floating across the first 15

rows. Bono was dressed in silver, imitating Elvis Presley and his gold suit. Bono preached money and politics and even made a call to the White House operator, but he couldn't get through to President Bush.

Students beware of illegal solicitors

The Public Safety Department has received several reports from students about magazine sales representatives approaching them on campus, using deceptive tactics to pressure them into buying magazines.

At least two students have actually given the representatives cash for magazine subscriptions. These sales representatives are not approved by the college and are not authorized to sell magazines on campus. Direct subscribers to magazines from these people will have given them cash for magazine subscriptions.

If you are approached by these high pressure people, please call the Public Safety Office immediately at extension 2380 or 2491 to report their location on campus.

All selling on campus is prohibited by college policy, except as approved by the Student Activities Office.

Those vendors approved by student activities are limited to a table in the center of building "A."

Veto allows new club

KENNETH DUBOIS
News Editor

Dr. Dennis Henry, vice president of students' affairs, recently vetoed a student's request to disavow the Gay and Lesbian club at Harper. The club was in response to actions taken by the previous student senate during a meeting last spring.

The senate voted against recognizing the club and Lesbian groups.

There is no official school club. They instead decided on giving acknowledgment units members as a special group through their own efforts.

With all the requirements met to become a school club, a verbal approval was filed earlier this fall.

Dr. Henry had made the senate aware of the amendment before last spring's meeting, and decided to overrule the vote.

"I wasn't too surprised if it was," the said, referring to the possibility of negative criticism. "I've had both positive and negative feedback on the issue."

The only possible way to overturn her decision was to appeal directly to the president. "It appears unlikely right now," she said when asked about a possible overturning of her decision. "This club has the right to exist on campus."

Intercultural week to provide diversity for students, staff

Annual event provides opportunity to experience different cultures

Harper College will be representing its fourth annual intercultural week October 12-16, giving students the chance to learn about different cultures.

A variety of activities have been planned to bring a mixture of cultural experiences to Harper students.

Monday starts off with a 9 a.m. lecture in A241 on Arab music, by Dr. Haman Haddad. Following that, at 10:30 a.m. in A242, a discussion will be held on economic survival headed by Dan Seik, a professor at Harper.

Shortly thereafter, a video will be presented on the Plains Indians with questions taken afterward and by Dr. Helmut Pahl in A215 from 12 noon through 1 p.m. Issues in Spirit will perform and discuss Native American issues at 1 p.m. in room A242.

Monday's activities conclude with a presentation held by John Koper on social and business days and weeks with the Japanese.

Tuesday begins with a discussion held by John Koper, professor of art at Harper, in room A241 at 9 a.m. on oriental carpeting. Next is a world religion lecture with two sub-divisions: at 10 a.m. Islam is scheduled, followed by Sikhism at 11 a.m., both in room H102 and home held.

by Mona Qutub, Ph.D. Islamic Information Center, and Jaeger K. Jeng, Sikh Religious Society.

At noon, folk dancing will be taught by Susan Longtin, folk dance teacher, in room A242. From 1:22 p.m. to 2 p.m. in room A242, Dr. Pahl, instructor at Harper, will present aspects of the American Civil War, held in room A242.

At 2:30 p.m. in the building "J," theater on rotating screens.

Wednesday, a Festival of Nations presentation will be conducted in the building "A," student Center from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. Exhibits will be among the highlights, as will the Palatine High School Gospel Choir, as they perform at noon.

Thursday starts off with education to contractors in Hollywood movies held by David Gray, film critic, for the Daily Herald. This will be held in building "B" in the TV studio beginning at 9:30 a.m.

Madrigal East culture starts at 11 a.m. in room A242 for those interested in learning about the music and manifestations of Middle East culture.

About 11 a.m. Dr. Washington Howard, a Chippewa from Isabella, River view, will focus on Native American song and culture in room P208.

From 1:22 p.m. a video will be shown on the influence of ancient culture in today's society in room A315. At 2 p.m. Bob Paul will give those who couldn't attend the first time, a second chance to learn about the American Civil War in room A242.

At 3:30 p.m. in the building "J," theater a film entitled "The Double Life of Veronique," a foreign film that gathered Academy Award nomination as well as the Cannes Film Festival in 1991.

Friday is highlighted by the concert appearance of Sister Carol, a reggae singer well known for her version of the classic rock hit "Wild Thing" which was seen during the end credits of the movie "Something Wild."

Most events are free and open to the public, although some may have an admission price. A full list of which ones have a cost can be found in the pamphlet available on campus.

Those wishing to order tickets can call the Harper College Box Office, 319, at 393-3000, extension 2347. Tickets are charged a $100.00, MasterCard or Discover.

Intercultural week is designed to make students aware of the many different cultures that help make up the world.

Former Czech tells of life in Slovakia

Among the more unique of the presentations taking place during intercultural week involves Professor Ed Liska.

He will be presenting "My Czechoslovakian Adventure" on Monday, October 12, 10:31 a.m. in building "A," room 241 and C. Student Development Professor Liska will give a brief history of Myxan, Slovakia (formerly Czechoslovakia) and share his insights while living and teaching English to English teachers this spring semester.

Education for Democracy, Mobile, Alabama, sponsored Dr. Liska's teaching and learning opportunity.

Another student includes the Palatine High School Gospel Choir. They will be performing at noon at the student center in building "A."

They are a well respected group of young kids who share their love

COLLEGE NEWS UPDATE

Transfers Sessions set for 4-year colleges

The four-year colleges listed below are scheduled to visit Harper to answer student questions regarding transfer.

Visits marked as "Transfer Session" indicate that the college will be conducting a more formal presentation to a group of prospective students rather than simply setting up a table in the hallway. No reservations are necessary to attend a "Transfer Session." Your help in making students aware of these opportunities is appreciated.

Questions can be referred to the Student Development Academic Advising and Counseling Center at 1-117-4232.

Student Leaders meet with VP

The Harper College Vice President of Student Affairs, Dr. Bonnie Henry, would like to meet with 7-9 different Harper students each month.

Dr. Henry would like to interact with interested students to learn their opinions and for input regarding the college she has to make during the course of her job.

The next luncheon is Thursday, October 8, from 12 p.m. to 1 p.m. The discussion will be informal. All students are eligible to participate, but only one will be allowed each month.

If you know a student who would like the opportunity to meet with a senior administrator and enjoy a free lunch at the same time, contact Susan McCleary or Jeanne Park on the Student Activities office (A336) at extension 2242 for further information.

The next luncheon discussion will be on Friday, November 13.

Essay awards worth $60,000

COMPUTERWORLD magazine, the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers (IEEE) Computer Society, and NCR Corporation hope to capture the imaginations of college and university students around the world by asking them to participate in a $60,000 "New Ways of Computing" Essay Competition.

Beginning this September, the competition challenges students from the U.S. and overseas to envision the world they will inhabit and help to shape.

"We believe that his competition will foster new ideas and breakthroughs through new perspectives," said Genneppe Bassant, IEEE Computer Society president. "These students represent the business leaders of tomorrow. The essays could offer novel insights into new ways of computing."

A total of $60,000 in prizes will be awarded to the three top winners by the contest sponsors. Selected, award-winning entries will be published in Computerworld, a student magazine for up-and-coming engineers and computer scientists.

Undergraduate and graduate students worldwide are eligible to enter. The grand prize winner will be awarded $10,000 in cash and a NCR notebook computer. Second prize is $5,000 in cash and a notebook computer; third prize is $3,000 in cash and a notebook computer. Professors or faculty advisors who work with and encourage the three winning students will also be awarded NCR notebook computers.

Because the essay contest's scope is so broad — encompassing virtually any aspect of the future of information technology — the sponsors expect to receive entries that range from the role of information technology in corporations to essays on social and ethical issues that may arise because of pervasive computer technology.

Judges will be looking for essays that provide an imaginative, well-thought-out vision of the information technology environment that these students will become part of in the near future.

Specific judging criteria include: social, technological and business implications; creativity and originality; clarity; and skill in presentation.

Entries will be judged at the state level by volunteer committees comprised of NCR employees, IEEE Computer Society members, and leaders from business and education. The "winning" essays will be selected by a blue ribbon panel of nationally recognized leaders by May, 1993.

Essays must be original, unpublished work, not to exceed 3,000 words. Entries must be typed, double-spaced, on one side of 8 1/2 inch by 11 inch bond paper.

A separate sheet should list the student's name, school, home address and essay title, and specify the student's level in school as either an undergraduate or graduate. Pages should be numbered and include the essay title in the upper right hand margin.

All entries must be postmarked by December 15, 1992 and received by January 1, 1993. Entries should be sent to College Entry Contest, Manning, Salvage & Lee, 77 Madison Ave., New York, NY 10016. Questions regarding the contest should be addressed to Susan Glynn, MSAI, (212) 213-7192. NCR employees and family members are not eligible for the contest.

Graduation petitions due Oct. 18

Students who qualify for a degree or certificate for the fall 1992 semester need to petition for graduation by October 17, 1992.

Graduation petitions may be obtained at the registrar's office, A213.

EDITORIAL

Education is more than
'just the facts Ma'am'

Just what are they trying to teach us?
What is this thing called education?

A concerted effort by a number of individuals to transfer knowledge from themselves to others... some willing, some unwilling.

Let's dig deeper. What is knowledge? It occurs on many levels and often what seems to be the objective is merely the means to the end.

What we are learning is not so much subjects. Not so much facts, figures and other data. Rather, it is the sum total of humanity from the dawn of humanity to the present. Sure, we are expected to perform and show proof of our effort by any number of test devices. But the real lessons take place at a deeper level.

What we are being taught is ways of seeing. Ways of thinking. Ways of being. Along with the facts and details that accompany any subject, we also are taught the philosophy of the subject and, in many cases, the subject itself as a "way of thought". Sometimes this is a conscious effort by the instructor and other times it simply comes "with the package".

If you think for a moment that you can go through a whole semester without being influenced in some way by the subjects you learn and the people who teach them, you are wrong.

You are immersed in this fluid thing called life. You are your world and your world is you.

Letter To The Editor

Four more years? Oh my!

Dear Editor

In the Chicago Tribune a few weeks ago I read a startling story I feel encapsulates the heart of the problem our country faces today. It told of a study recently completed by Harvard and Columbia University researchers, discussing the shift in the percentage of total wealth in the U.S. held by the wealthiest 1 percent of our population since the American Revolution.

The story was an interesting one—the actual study might be more so—but what struck me most was the statistics that came out of it. In 1789, the percentage of wealth held by the nation's top 1 percent doubled from 18 percent in the 1770s to 36 percent in the 1790s, the only year they found better than the 36 percent figure was that of 43 percent right before the Stock Market Crash of 1929.

Can you imagine nearly half of the national wealth held by 1 percent of the population? You may not have to for long. How about imagining what the top 5 percent might hold today? What does that leave for the rest of us?

In 1980, when I was 21 and naive, something just didn't seem right about the idea (then called "supply-side economics") of giving all the money to rich business people in the faith they would use it to create jobs and spend it wisely on worth causes. Twelve years later I see my intuition was largely correct: Rich business people have "wisely" and selfishly kept a good chunk of the profits they've made at the expense of the working people they employ and market to. This may be further evidence, but what I think I've seen happen is, through flashy advertising, big business sold the idea everyone needed to borrow more and more so they could have lots of things they don't need and enjoy. "The rich life," you see.

Now most people are up to their eyeballs in debt and can't afford to buy anything. The demand for products has gone down, so companies need lots of help and are laying off the workers who need their jobs to pay for the glut of spending which made the interest rates go down and so do the prices of property. Then the rich buy up all the property with low interest rates and become richer, and more powerful.

The further complications we haven't been able to trust large industry to take care of the ecological destruction of the properties they have received. Sure, some companies are shifting to healthier products and environmentally safe packaging in response to growing intelligent demand, and a few small one even care.

However, if the current administration had its way, consumer information and protection would be virtually cut off so as to "not" be an impediment to commerce. During the Reagan/Bush period, the profit motive has had a way of taking priority over preservation of the life support system the wealthy, as well as ourselves, need just to survive and be able to argue about all of this.

The environment includes not only the trees and air, water and animals, but the human beings that inhabit our country and this planet. You may find that unhappy and unhealthy people make for a very miserable atmosphere. The tragedy is the people in control don't even realize they kill themselves when they kill us and our planet. We need to realize that by participating in this scam we are also killing ourselves. What good is an education if you have no future in which to use it? I say start using it now. We can't afford four more years of this. We need a government of the people, by the people and for the people now more than ever. Get out there, open your eyes, get involved and VOTE FOR CHANGE!

Coming up in A&E Ain't Misbehavin' appearin'

Ain't Misbehavin', the music of Fats Waller comes to the Schaumburg Center for the Arts at 8 p.m. on Saturday, October 17.

With a derby hat and rascally sense of style, the famous Chicago pianist and bandleader that danced across the key-board, Fats Waller captivated his audience during the last years of the 30s and 40s.

His such as "Ain't Misbehavin'" "Honeydripper" "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Love" and, of course, the show's namesake tune, "Ain't Misbehavin'." was heard from Harlem's Cotton Club during the Depression to Hollywood during World War II.

First produced on Broadway in 1928, the hit musical, Fats Waller's music was shown Tony Awards including Best Musical of the Year.

Now touring nationally, "Ain't Misbehavin'" is performed by the St. Paul based Truett Aronson, which is also responsible for such long running hits as "Milk and Honey," "Thoroughly Modern Millie," and "The 1940's Radio House."

Tickets for the show are $16 for adults and $14 for students and seniors. They can be ordered by calling the box office at (708) 894-3600 - weekdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The Public Center is located near the Schaumburg Regional Center on Schaumburg Road and Sunset Drive.

Volleyball heads to N4C tourney

Cole Peterson
Harbinger Sports Writer

The Harper Ladies' Volleyball Team continues to show improvement as they continue their run to win the N4C Tournament. They have been busy playing in several meets over the last few weeks.

On September 22, the team competed against Joliet and Kankakee, here on campus, winning one and losing one. The same week on Thursday, the women traveled to Dixon, Illinois, where they won one and lost one against South Valley and Carl Sandburg. On Monday, September 28, the team won two meets in Chicago, playing Wright College and Daley College, but came home on Tuesday, and lost two against Rock Valley. The team's record as of September 29 was 10 wins and 10 losses overall, and 2-1 in conference.

Head Coach Renee Bismuth stated that her team continues to gel and come together as a team. "They played well. Every game they play, they continue to get better. There are several tournaments on this team, unlike last year. When you work well, you play well." Despite the fact that there are no standards, Bismuth is very pleased with the progress of senior Becky Schmidt, who continues to display her talent every time she goes on the court. "I'm very pleased with her (Schmidt's) improvement," said Bismuth. "When she plays well, so does the team."

Although there are many bright spots, Bismuth admitted that a few things need to be worked on, especially after Tuesday's losses to Rock Valley. "The team will need to work hard for their next game. We have a week before our next game, so the team will be fresh."

The rest of the road will be important to the team. According to Bismuth, "We have one conference game left. With COC losing recently, it looks like the season may come down to the conference tournament."

The conference tournament is scheduled for October 24. In the meantime, the Lady Hawks will travel to Illinois Valley for a conference meet on the 18th, and their final conference game will be here at Harper, October 13, against Morris Valley.

Harper College sports bits

Tennis wins!

It was time to celebrate. Harper's tennis team has been going up against all comers long. Their jitters each time out. That's why Tuesday's win over Joliet was as greeted with much fanfare. The 4-1 victory was the first victory of the underdog team.

"There were good handicappers all the way around," said Harper tennis coach Martha Lynn Roth. "We really went into the match juggling for Nick Leguizamo. Everyone on the team had won except for her. She just kept her head in the game and played steady."

Leguizamo went there, sets with Joliet's No. 1 player Dana Popick. The Hawks' sophomore prevailed 4-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Janica Brunner added another victory at No. 3 singles. The freshman broke 6-1, 6-3. Kristen Reese

Volleyball insight

In search of 50 perfect passes, Harper's volleyball team is struggling with an passing game. The Hawks dropped a four game match at N4C opponent Rock Valley on Tuesday.

"Unfortunately, we just weren't passing well," said Harper volleyball coach Renee Mucklenburg. "We have ourselves. Every once in a while, we play great. It just seems something happens between practice and the game."

In practice, the Hawks work on making 50 perfect passes in seven minutes. One player doing the job passing in sophomore Monica Patten.

"She's doing an incredible job," Mucklenburg said. "She's an excellent passer and she plays great. The faster she's learned to hit now with her left hand. And I don't think she's had a hitting error with her left hand. She's improved so much from last year."

On Monday night, Harper topped both Wright and Daley. The Hawks went three games with Daley, 12-15, 15-10, 13-4 and dropped Wright in two, 15-6, 15-7.

Becky Schmidt has settled into the setter's position. "She gets frustrated when they can't get the ball within 100 feet of her," the coach added. "But she's doing well at a new position."

Mucklenburg also applauded the work of freshman into Kuro

Intramural V-ball

The Intramural Department is scheduling a structured Sunday volleyball program to be played during the winter months. League play for men, women and co-ed play at all skill levels is planned. Open play throughout the month of October will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The program is available without charge to all students that are currently enrolled at Harper and have a student activity card. Cards are issued at the Student Activity Office on the second floor of the A Building.

Band Fall Ball

A semi formal evening of ballroom dancing to the big band sound of Vito Buffalo and his 10 piece orchestra will take place on Saturday, October 17, 1992 from 8:30-11:30 p.m. in the lower level of Building M on the Harper College campus, Palatine.

The event is co-sponsored by the Physical Education Activities & Recreation Division and the Student Activities Division of the College. Tickets are $7 per person in advance and $8 per person at the door. Tickets may be purchased by phone, 708/997-7000, extension 2567, or in person at the Harper College Box Office.

Chadmandu, da' sporting fool, left with a 'sick' taste in his mouth

CHAD HUNTER
Harbinger Sports Columnist

I am sick today. Not from any cold or flu, but from the misfortune of watching the last quarter of last Sunday's Bears vs. Vikings contest. Oh, yes, everything was a sickness.

There, as sick in the head as I, I had a strange thought before the fourth quarter began. Gen. with the Bears leading 20-0, maybe Minnesota could still score their touch-downs.

And all it took was a Harbaugh, by name, sick some in his mind, to call an audible so he could pass to RB Neal Anderson on the flat. Minnesota intercepts for a touch-down. Delta means Monday murder at Harbaugh (a first in a long time, all right, but Mike), and my "ESP" makes me feel even weirder. The onslaught was on, for every Bears, and soon Bears fan, so too, and Minnesota recorded its best comeback in franchise history.

Against the Bears.
Gee, what a surprise that has been this year, huh? Well, when you're outscored 100-34 in the second half, it's time to pass the harbaugh around, and for once, in a long time, left disgruntled for the Bears.
I mean after the first game, as all felt "unconcerned." A couple of weeks follow, and then we're "sick red!" A week after that, the words are "short-term," and after this week, the word is "disgraced!" As in "Bears, we, the loyal fans of Chicago, are disgraced with you!" How can you make us feel this way? From if you led 100-0 after three quarters, you would still make the first period like a close scoring basketball game. Not time Ron Pivot started running again for President Hovey I, in the immortal words of Galt Aigler "Oh like I was gonna hurt!" All of you are no home for this "sick" taste in my mouth, as with every other Bear fan.

Well, I must go now. For there is what staff to write of here. But don't worry too much, Bears fan, next week will be better. I promise you. The Bears can't lose.

Why, you ask?
They have the week off. But the week after, against Tampa Bay, be ready with your harbaugh, O.K.?

And now, with the premiere act of "Chadmandu, Da' Sporting Fool," we also have "Chadmandu's Pick," picking the winners in football, basketball, baseball, ice fishing (ICE FISHING?), by that sage of the press spread.

(actually, if you have a really good sick taste, but shhh! don't say anything!)

Last week I picked the Bears, Bills, and Saints to win. Now you know why I really feel nauseated as

Hawk football team loses to Ellsworth 28-2 at home

IAN FRASERSON
Harbinger Sports Writer

Okay, I have an apology to make for week's ago I suggested that people should come out and meet for our Hawks in their football game against the Ellsworth Panthers. The reason was better, but the team's performance was not.

Harper lost 28-2. Statistics for the Panthers gave that they were held to negative yards rushing.

Maybe I should place the blame on the team. Aside from some blocked kicks on what turned out to be 39 yards, just before for a touch-down, they played rather well. The offense came up big several times, while the defense just couldn't put points on the board.

Harper seemed determined to run the ball right into the Panthers' 4-4 defensive alignment. There were opportunities to put the ball in the air against Ellsworth's man to man coverage, but Harper QB Eric Sackison had no luck finding the open man.

I don't want to second guess the coach because this reporter is a horrible Monday morning armchair coach, but didn't it seem like Coach Hovey was watching the same game as this reporter was?

There isn't much to say about the Hawk's scoring because the only two points came on a penalty-sided safety.

The Ellsworth QB had dropped back into his own offense looking to pass. Harper's defense began to close in so he dumped the ball into a vacancy on the field. He was flagged for intentional grounding, giving the Hawk's a safety.

Harper comes home on the 10th of October to play NAC in at Trion at

Barring a freak snowstorm or sub-zero temperatures, if you are a football fan you should head your but out and root for your Hawks!

Eagles are rolling high, and claim that this will be their year. I might disagree with that statement, but I do agree with them... so win.

Presentations offer new look at diverse cultures

GABRIEL BALDIAS
Harper College Reporter

Harper College celebrated the different cultures that attend the school with Intercultural Week Oct. 12-16. It presented clubs and organizations that showed their different cultures and traditions in public to show how and why they work.

Michael Nymus, director of the student activities center, and Frank Salinas, director of the multicultural affairs office, were in charge of planning this year's activities.

Salinas said the biggest improvement made this year has been the publicity. The college approved funding through the college marketing account. In addition, the Access Channel ran a TV spot and the Chicago Tribune ran an article on the week.

The celebration started on Monday. Performances on Indian Nations in "Spirit" drew Native American women descendants, who delighted students with songs and dances about the preservation of the old times and the struggle for the acceptance of individuals without the stereotyping them because of their differences.

The second day, Tuesday, William Rainey Harper's bust was adorned with a black, long wig with Indian accessories, while a group of students handed out activities related to him.

Our friend Bill grows his dreads in the spirit of Intercultural Week.

On Wednesday, during the festival of dances, the clubs and organizations set out tables with typical things from their traditions and sold items as well as items for sale.

Some of the tables had items like the cases of the Latino Union Club that had Mexican and Peruvian Indian ornaments in addition to the thoughtfully visitors' interest. The Latino Club had a replica of Michael Angelillo's Prize from St. Peter's Church in Rome.

Coffees and desserts were sold in the lobby of building "A" while the highly acclaimed Gospel Choir of Pastor, Mark's Church performed for a sometime crowd.

Even with bad weather, Thursday still offered the Campus award-winning film, "The Double Life of Veronique." Friday closed with a concert by reggae rap artist, Sista Carli, who sang Intercultural Week for another year.

Halloween scary to some

COURTNEY PERKINS

Halloween, a 2,500-year-old custom, began when the ancient Greeks, in England, Ireland and France, built bonfires and evoked the spirits of dead ancestors to come with them. Evil relatives were un- welcome, and scary masks dis- couraged their presence.

While the Oct. 31 holiday is taught for most college stu- dents, others find it troublesome, even traumatic.

Some fundamentalist Christian students find evil spirits, witches and goblins too light matter, while others have such a deep reverence to the teachings of Halloween that they don't get a sense of fest that day.

"It's called samhain, a Celtic festival, a fear of Halloween," reports Dr. Donald Disney, founder and presi- dent of the Public Institute of Los Angeles. "Samhain was the god of the dead. Some people who are volun- teers are completely normal, but for a real photo associated only with Halloween."

Talk radio

Tune in the Harper College To- day, a new weekly radio show fea- turing interviews with faculty, staff and students at Harper College. The show, which airs every Wednesday after the twelve o'clock news, is designed to present information about education trends, job training, and all the pro- grams and services that Harper has to offer.

Many times our diverse stu- dents tell us that they don't know about some of the courses and events offered at the College. The radio show is another way for us to get our message out and also to spend a little more time on particular programs and services. We are unable to do that through our regular mailings. "I commuted to Party Roberts, (Barrington), Media Relations Spe- cialist and co-host of the twenty minute show."

The show is broadcast on WRMN 1410 am radio in a lively interview format which gives guests and host an opportunity for an interesting ex- change. Anne Frost, (Rolling Mead- ows), Editorial Supervisor, Publica- tion and Communications, acts as co-host. The show is taped in the Harper TV studio by Tom Kunkel (Hoffman Estates), TV production- rator, with the help of Steve Lottino (Addison) and Rick Will (Palatine).

Harper offers counseling and career guidance

Harper's Community Counsel- ing Center provides psychological and career guidance services to non- resident community residents, as well as to Harper students. The center offers personal and career counsel- ing to community members at a mod- est fee hourly rate.

With the help of Harper's Student Development Director, the Com- munity Counseling Center has de- veloped a group counseling pro- gram. The groups, led by experienced mental health professionals, help identify, address and resolve issues that cause emotional distress. Group counseling professionals recognize that members of groups can offer support, direction and encouragement to each other.

Groups are free to students with these needs hours or more, and there is a charge of $12.00 per session for non-students.

Empowering Catholics in Health Relationships meets Wednesdays, 8:30 p.m. Often times in life people feel unsure to trust and confused as to how to get their needs and wants met, how to feel good about themselves and how to have the impact that oth- ers have upon them.

This group identifies dysfunctional behaviors and teaches healthy ways of relating to others.

Healthy Eating is a group de- signed for individuals who have struggled to lose or maintain weight.

The focus of the group is on psy- chological issues and emotional out- put. This group meets on Mondays at 6-7 p.m.

Female Victims of Sexual Abuse group meets Thursdays 6:30-7:30 p.m.

Childhood sexual abuse has profound effects on its victims that last into adulthood unless addressed. This group looks at how these past experiences are affecting its members in the present and how to begin healing.

Women's Support Group meets on Saturday mornings, 9:10-10 a.m.

This is a psychotherapy group for women who are making some transitions in life and wish to explore the issues that have been holding them back.

The goal of the group is to gain self understanding and improve in- terpersonal relationships.

Self Esteem Group for Women meets on Wednesdays, 6:30-8:00 p.m. This group will help women to identify what prevents them from feeling good about themselves and what they can do to change this. The goal of this group is for members to feel more competent and accepting of themselves.

Male Victims of Sexual Abuse meets Wednesdays 8:30-9:30 p.m.

Men that have been victimized often have members to go for help. This group is for men to get together to support each other, understand how these experiences continue to affect them and how to begin to change unhealthy patterns and im- prove the quality of their lives.

Parenting With Adolescents and Pre-Adolescents, meets Saturdays 9-10 a.m.

This group will provide infor- mation, discussion on parenting skills and family issues.

It will also provide parents the opportunity to share concerns and experiences with other parents as well as explore the personal diffi- culties that may come with parenting adolescents.

For more information about Harper's Community Counseling Center, call 708/997-3000, ext. 2177. The Center is located on Build- ing A, Room 347.

COLLEGE NEWS UPDATE

Procrastinators to get help Oct. 29

Palatine Public Library will host "Procrastination: Reasons, Remedies and Relief" on Thursday, Oct. 29, at 7:30 to 9 p.m.

Laura M. Parks, career and program coordinator of Synchrotron, a time-management consulting firm in Mt. Prospect, will present the program.

This program explores the differences between creative and problem procrastination, the side effects of delaying important tasks (including stress and low self-esteem), some of the common reasons for lack of procrastination, individual areas of anxiety and delay, techniques that work to break the "putting things off" habit, and finding relief from the negative behavior patterns.

Since space is limited, registration for the first program is recommended.

Early registration opens Nov. 9

Beginning Nov. 9, current or past Harper students may register early for spring credit courses.

Students interested in taking classes spring semester may call the Student Development office, ext. 2393 or 2522, for registration times, procedures and to schedule an appointment for academic advising and transfer course selection.

Loyola to hold radio conference Nov. 12-14

The 23rd annual Loyola University radio conference will be held Nov. 12 through 14 at the Bismarck Hotel, Chicago.

This three-day conference registration includes admission to all conference sessions and exhibits and the opening reception at the Museum of Broadcast Communications Radio Hall of Fame, Thursday night.

The Friday media tours, the Marconi College Radio Awards Ceremony and the Radio Hall of Fame Induction Ceremony are scheduled by the Museum of Broadcast Communications are not in 111 W. Randolph St.

Seminar sheds light on new tax law

Beginning Jan. 1, a new tax law will apply to lump-sum pension payments. It may allow the government to reduce your distribution by as much as 20 percent.

A financial consultant will go over five- and 10-year averaging, rollovers (RAs), special tax treatments and will perform an analysis of individual retirement needs.

The seminar will be held Saturday, Nov. 14 from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Palatine campus. Cost is $35. To register, call 397-3377.

Workshops on performance slated

Harper's Career Transition Center will hold two new workshops for enhancing performance in November. Both will be held on the Palatine campus. The first, Improving Self-Esteem and Self-Efficacy for High Performers, (UTC010-001) offers ways to gain control over events, take larger risks, and bigger goals, and remain more resilient in the face of adversity.

This class meets on Saturday, Nov. 7, from 9 a.m. to Noon, in A343.

High Performance Thinking Skills: Natural Creativity, (UTC011-001) focuses on the techniques and tools that enhance creativity to find solutions. This class meets on Saturday, Nov. 21, 9 a.m. to Noon, in H221.

Each workshop costs $40. To register, call 397-3377 and specify the course number. For details, call 459-8233.

Career workshop to test style, skills

The college will offer a career options workshop Thursday, Nov. 12, 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., at the Career Transitions Center, 1375 S. Wolf Rd., Prospect Heights.

This workshop is for those who want to assess their decision-making style and how it relates to career choice through the use of the assessment career anchor. Participants will learn which resources give the information they need to verify the occupations they have in mind. They'll learn how to identify and evaluate alternatives.

Tuition is $40. To register, call the center, 459-8233.

Personal career planning session set for Nov. 21

An all-day Personal Career Planning workshop will be held Saturday, Nov. 21, 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., at Harper's main campus, A347.

Participants will have an opportunity to complete a personal profile, identify career objectives, learn goal setting and decision-making skills, assess workplace trends and create an action plan. Students will complete a personal assessment that will be interpreted during the session. The workshop is sponsored by the Career Transitions Center.

Tuition for the workshop is $75. It includes lunch. To register, or for more information, call 459-8233.

Celebrate New Year's in London

A London study tour will run Dec. 27 through Jan. 5. It will allow participants to earn humanities or continuing education credits. The cost is $999, from Chicago.

For details, call the Liberal Arts Division, ext. 2255.

Call for Playboy fiction entries

Playboy magazine will accept entries in its eighth annual Playboy college fiction contest until Jan. 1, 1993.

The annual writing competition is open to all registered undergraduate and graduate college students.

It is the only college fiction contest sponsored by a major national magazine.

For details on this competition, contact Mark Healy at (212) 688-3030.

Comedian Don Reese will perform Nov. 2

Comedian Don Reese, "harrier class geek" rather than the class clown, is an Iowa who likes to poke fun at his native state and himself as he batters in his slightly off-kilter style of humor. Reese, looking a lot like Uncle Fester of "The Addams Family," and described as a "visually gifted," will entertain Harper College audiences at a live sometime show Nov. 2, in the Student Center Lounge, Building A.

For more information about Reese's appearance, call the Student Activities Office, ext. 2342.

Harper's one-week ski trip planned to leave Jan. 7

'Champagne powder' for the advanced and intermediate skiers

A ski trip to Aspen, Colo., is planned by the college, announced James Parkinson, director, student activities.

THE DEAL. The low price of $279 per person includes eight days and seven nights' lodging at a luxury condominium, round-trip air transportation to the Aspen airport, and five full skiing days with lift tickets.

THE MOUNTAIN. Aspen actually includes four mountains; Aspen Mountain, Buttermilk, Snowmass, and Aspen Highlands. The five-day lift ticket is valid at any of the four these mentioned.

THE LODGING. Woodbridge Condominiums offer panoramic mountain views and scenic vistas. Six-person units have two bathrooms.

THE TOWN. Aspen is not considered an average ski town. There are over 100 restaurants in Aspen and Snowmass. There's a video about Aspen available on the student activities office.

To join the Aspen trip, from Jan. 2 through Jan. 15, make reservations early, as last year's trip sold out in October. A $100 deposit is necessary to secure your reservation. Payments may be made by cash, check, Visa, or MasterCard.

Please contact Parkinson at ext. 2547 or 2549 for more details.

Cultural arts film 'High Heels' will be screened Oct. 29

"High Heels," a Spanish film and the second in Harper College's Cultural Arts Film Series (for 1992-93), will be shown at 7:30 p.m., Oct. 29, in building I Theater. Directed by Pablo Almodovar and starring Victoria Abril and Maria Ramon, "High Heels" is a tongue-in-cheek meta-drama about a lonely mother, neglected daughter and people in love with them. The 115-minute film, in Spanish with English subtitles, has a surprise ending.

Tickets are $3 general admission, $2 for students and seniors. For information call ext. 2547.

Schaumburg Jaycees haunted house operates Oct 22 to 31

Assortment of scary soundrels and ghouls

Good-bye to an inspiration

"You got a smile so bright, you know you could've been a candle."

The voice that sang those sweet words has left. Eddie Kendricks, former lead singer for The Temptations, died Oct. 5 from lung cancer. He sang lead on such Temps classics as "Just My Imagination" and "The Way You Do the Things You Do."

"I'm holding you so tight, you know you could've been a handle."

The way he sang left an indelible mark on music as we know it. Such groups as Boyz n Men and Color Me Badd have often remarked how they were influenced by the Temptations, as have Hall and Oates.

He brought to the group a unique style and vocal ability that set him apart from most of his competitors. He also had the most successful solo career of any former Temp, scoring a number one hit with his song "Keep on Truckin'."

He appeared on stage with David Ruffin again in 1986, along with Hall and Oates, to lead a medley of Temptations hits.

Just before his death, he had been in the process of recording another album.

Eddie Kendricks will be sorely missed. Few people can say they haven't heard a song with his lead vocals on it. Friends, family, and fans alike, and they are many, will continue to let his music live.

COMMENTARY

Political scene resembles fable

Cost White

Harbinger Staff Writer

Once upon a time in a quaint little kingdom, there was a structure of government unlike any of its time. Though it was long before the common people were allowed to vote, the government did have a crude form of democracy. The ruler of the land was an elected official of the Knights of the Trapezoid Table. Every four years, the kingdom's top knights would gather and appoint two of their own to compete for the position of Supreme Ruler. Usually, the choice of the knights was reflective of the common people, so whoever was elected became quickly accepted by the people of the land.

This year seemed to be just like any other, at first. The two opponents were the incumbent and another knight. The incumbent, Sir Bushabot, was a conservative man who felt the best way to run government was to support big business at all costs.

His competitor, Sir Cinnabot, was more liberal-minded and thought it was better to put money into the hands of the peasants. Both were respected and well-decorated knights, and both had long histories of service to their kingdom.

Until the last month before the election, the campaigning went as usual. The two knights worked day in and day out to prove that each was the better person. At first, it was a close race between the two, but in the last six weeks or so, Sir Cinnabot was gaining in popularity at the expense of Sir Bushabot.

The kingdom's town crier, Sir Bushabot, certainly seemed to be the two candidates about their stances in different areas and reported weekly polls on how they were faring to the common folk.

Sir Bushabot saw his popularity dropping, he began to question Sir Cinnabot's loyalty to the kingdom he cause Sir Cinnabot didn't fight against the Serfs in a war fought 25 years back. Looking for anything he could to keep his position as ruler, he would continue to promote family values and military strength. All of his efforts continued to fail. The kingdom's widespread recession and Sir Bushabot's choice of the village idiot for his running mate seemed to be too much for him to overcome. The Knights of the Trapezoid Table felt it was time for a change in the leadership of the land, and it seemed almost a sure thing that Sir Cinnabot would win the election.

Then came a man from the commonsfolk who challenged the established system of the Knights of the Trapezoid. Roush Percech, a man with big ears, a big nose, and a very large mouth announced his candidacy for Supreme Ruler. Arguing that the knights had "lost touch with the common folk," he felt he could do a better job bringing the kingdom back to its feet.

The two competitors were unfazed at first, reasoning that a mere common man could not have any effect on the Knights' decision. Surprisingly, though, some knights agreed with Percech's ideas and sided with him. While there was not as many supporters needed for him to win, Percech would play the role of a spoiler in the election. This caused the two main competitors to take notice.

Sir Bushabot tried desperately to get answers from Percech on how he would handle things once in office. Yet, Percech rebuffed every question with another question. Eventually he just said to read a scroll he had written and the answers would be there.

Although the scrolls were not highly publicized, the information in them was shocking. Percech wanted to put a 50 shilling tax, per bushel, on home food. Figuring every common-folk had to buy about 8 to 15 bushels a week, the kingdom would make up its deficit in the surrounding kingdoms in no time. Though it was proposed as a temporary tax, the people knew it would become permanent just as the toll-dut roads did 30 years previously.

Despite his excessive attitude, Percech's support grew large enough that the election was a dead heat between the other two candidates.

Finally election day came, and the results were in. The Knights of the Trapezoid Table gathered together to find out who won.

Did Sir Cinnabot salvage enough votes to start his plan for change? Did Sir Bushabot maintain the majority and win another four years?

The end of this story is left open. You, the registered voters of this country, will decide the ending on November 3. But there's something to think about before voting. Be sure you know who you're voting for!

You and I are the Knights of the Trapezoid Table. The fate of this kingdom of ours is in our hands.

STAYED FROM ALL OVER THE COUNTRY TO WORK. THEIR OWN PREFERENCES IN HOW THEY COULD ACQUIRE A CLUB OF THEIR OWN.

Butts, butts, butts

But, really! Butts are everywhere! Everywhere, BUT where they're supposed to be.

Walking from the north parking lot to attend class in A Building, I see cigarette butts littered outside like weeds planted in a garden. Only there will never be a bumper crop. The only bumper crop is a bumper crop of cigarettes.

The Macmillan Student

Dictionary lists the first meaning for butt as a person or thing that is the object of ridicule, scorn, criticism or sarcasm.

Smokers, do you know that Harper employees have to butt their butt picking up the butt people leave on the ground. Smokers, you could eliminate some of their work by picking up your own butt. How about it?

Football team splits two games at home

Lee Fosselman
Harbinger Sports

Greetings and substantial football fans! You may have noticed the Harbinger isn't coming out weekly anymore. Hopefully, we will be out about once every two weeks.

Well, let's get back to business, the Hawks have played two football games since our last paper. They played exceptionally well in both, but were the victim of poor officiating in one. They lost 30-20 against Tricon on the 19th and beat Johns convincingly, 36-14 on the 17th. Both games were at home.

Against the Tricon from Tricon, the Hawks couldn't get the officials to cooperate when they needed it. Whenever the Hawks got going, the referees flying, it seemed like the flag was called for every other first down that Harper made. Granted, the Hawks did hold, but Tricon was far from innocent. As far as this reporter is concerned, the refs are there to make sure the game is played fairly and evenly, not for flag throwing practice. Maybe they were trying to keep us busy by flinging all those flags around, but that's just what my eyes see.

The game was much closer than the final score indicated. It was 23-20, in favor of Tricon, when the Hawk's Danah (the last name spelled a g-u-n) and we're back to Tricon's 30 yard line. Harper picked up a first down at the 20 with 2:11 left in the game. Hawk's QB Eric Black's just missed the marmalade fingers of WR Ron Brown in the end zone. The next play saw Black scrambling for the end zone, but instead of going out of bounds, he tossed the ball up for grabs in the end zone.

The Hawks rebounded with continued running up 100 yards on the ground against Harper's real Jolt. Ed Farnfield and Trevor Rogers scored two TDs a game to lead the way for Harper. There isn't much else this reporter can say about the 36-14 winning of Johns, except good job Hawks and kick some ass next week against Rock Valley. Harper travels to Rockford for that game on 10/24 and to Ogleby to meet Illinois Valley at 7 pm on Halloween. Both games are chances to better Harper's 3-1 MAC record.

Let's see another conference title, Hawks!

Michael Jordan and his gambling debts, may they never meet

Craig Humes
Harbinger Sports Columnist

Usually, my column doesn't take as serious of a turn as it does today. Of course, this is only after one column that I can make such a claim. Yet what has happened to Jordan and his gambling debts makes me want to shed some light on a serious not so serious matter in sports today.

This story was brought out in the open a couple months ago. To refresh your sport-oriented memory, that was between the time Du Bulls won their second straight championship and the time the Dream Team returned into Function. Back then, however, Jordan and everyone else treated it as a debt from one friend to another as a normal golf game.

Now? Well, it seems the untamed side of basketball fans everywhere (Dennis Magic, making a "surprise" return) has struck in his facade. But even though I sound very harsh for the man's actions (hey, he's my favorite sport figure), there are worse cases than this one involving sport's stars and gambling.

For Ross for instance, Or how about Art Schlichter? In the early 80's, he was the Indiana Hoosiers (then Ball State) Colts steady QB. Now, after countless allegations against him for serious gambling on games, after being banned from the NFL (and possibly, the Hall of Fame), I believe he's QB of some Arena Football team (Don't you know?).

Or how about the poem sharing scandal of College Basketball in the early 90's? Or how about...?

The list goes on and on. Soaring, in fact, sports insurance has demonstrated a serious decline in the subject, even mentioning in one big issue about 15 years ago.

So anyway, getting back to Michael, I believe that in light of what he has done, we should still look at him as a problem in the NBA. History has shown us that the gambling issue and supervisors should be kept separate. Besides, most of us have gambled on something or other at one time in our lives. In Jordan's case, his time is magnified ten fold.

Through all of this, the gambling debt issue should be closed or resolved for all, and we should let Jordan get on with his hectic schedule. Just set him the way I do as a reporter, but also as a basketballing One that makes me like so.

CHADMAN'S PICKS
Last week: 2-4 (not including Pittsburgh over Cincinnati) I also picked Michigan and De'Beauvoir, but nobody saw those picks, so we're not picking them before they happen! Season Total: 6-4

Washington (4-2) at Minnesota (5-1): It'll be a slug of a game in the Metrodome when these two teams collide. Ryan and the Redskins will have a homecoming of sorts, since the last time they were here was in January against Buffalo for Super Bowl XXVI. But Garrison and his pair of receivers aren't getting in their division title, they're ready. There's no one has made the push they've made in the preseason, and every Redskins fan remembers the 50 yard line to the Vikes. Look out below, cause Washington is a tumbler down!

CHADMAN'S PICK
Minnesota

Miami (4-2) at Indianapolis (3-3): There may be only one area in pro football that's such a game and that's I think Indy will win. If it's not, that's 2 interceptions in one game against San Diego last Sunday. The Colts would be as good as their record. Besides, it's a close knit team, and that Indy usually doesn't have a pretty against Miami. (Remember, small UPS?) The Dolphins can't stay unbeaten forever, can they?

CHADMAN'S PICK (IN ANTI)
PICK, Indianapolis

Chicago (3-3) at Green Bay (2-4): All the grandiosity of all NFL franchises. There have been many memories of these two teams colliding, but not many of when Green Bay puts at QB, or running back, or for that matter, Head Coach? This is the third out of five new head coaches the Bears must face this year (three without the division), and the Bears better play rocky after last week's triumph against Tampa Bay in both halves! This Brett Favre (he's not me, it's harder to say he has last name than speed) might surprise the Bears a little, but Dan McGee will be in, or Bart Starr, for that matter.

CHADMAN'S PICK
Chicago with a margin. Don't with Chicago, as always with all, every about the outcome! See ya' next time!

Basketball trickster Spencer Johnson to visit Harper College

Basketball trickster Spencer "Seemey" Johnson will demonstrate his spinning and dribbling tricks as he presents his drug free message to Harper College students 5:00 p.m. Monday, November 2, in the gymnasium, Building M.

Johnson, who worked with the Harlem Children's Center and basketball stars Wild Chamberlain, Carly Neal and Meadow Lark Lewis, was music and audience participation with his basketball acts.

The program is free and open to the public. Area students and adults are invited to attend this program sponsored by the college's drug and alcohol awareness network (DAWN). For more information, call the DAWN office, 708/997-3000, ext. 2626.

Men's basketball is looking for a few good managers

With the tip-off of the basketball season right around the corner, the team would like to employ your help.

The Men's Basketball team is looking for several good students to help us this year as Coach's aids. These students (part time or full time) would help with both practice and game management. Their responsibilities would entail keeping stats and equipment inventory at practices and during games.

The Coach's aid is an important part of our program. If there are any male or female students who would like to talk to us about this matter, they can call Ron Cregar, at ext. 2485 or leave a message at the PEAR office in "M" building.

Thank you so much for your help and cooperation. I'll see you in the winner's circle!

From the editor - next week, look for the return of your Eye On the Hawks!

Voters send message of change

Clinton wins signals new direction in politics

Kenneth Dusek
News Editor

"Change" overcame "mist" Tuesday, as Bill Clinton became the 42nd president of the United States. Clinton won both the popular and electoral college vote. Approximate results indicate he received 44 percent of the total vote, followed by George Bush with 39 percent and Ross Perot with 19 percent.

The popular vote generated an electoral college vote for Clinton of 360, followed by Bush with 74, and Perot with no electoral votes. Clinton won by capturing such large states as California, New York and Illinois, and also won several swing states like Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan. Bush's largest electoral win came in his adopted home state of Texas.

Perot, who predicted he would win all 50 states, failed to win any, but had strong showings in many large states.

Clinton, who has said he wants to reform the current electoral program, gave a victory speech calling for people of all political parties to join together to help change the country. He sounded much like John F. Kennedy, noting the generational change. Clinton is the first president born after World War II to capture the presidency. The victory, coupled with the Democratic victories in the Senate, and the Democratic majority in the House of Representatives, gives Clinton a chance to prove the deadlock in government can be broken. Post-election analysis attributed the Republican defeat to a number of reasons. But the principal reason, according to the pundits, was the failure of the administration to react with a positive program to a sagging economy. In his concession speech, Bush promised his administration would go full cooperation with the incoming administration to assure a smooth transition of power.

Global Village presents challenge

Anna Kowalski
Harpington Reporter

Something is happening at Harper. Something new, exciting, interesting and very widely educational. It is a new distance studies course and it is called the Global Village. Primarily, the idea behind coordinated studies are free diverse courses that reflect and influence each other.

In this one class, biology, philosophy, psychology, English, and linguistics are all related by a class of 100 on Mondays and Wednesdays. The subjects are discussed in smaller groups, 20-25, on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

The Monday/Wednesday classes are full of presentations, lectures, field trips, community service, a new network of activities, writing, nature walks, explorations, personality tests, and critical thinking—thinking for yourself, not from a textbook.

The class does not have any sort of specific text book, but has a reading list. Some of the books on the list are:

"America: What Went Wrong?", "There Are No Children Here," "The Hardhearted," "Tale of Two Cities," "The Book of the Dead." Each of these are read and discussed in the smaller groups.

Since there are no texts or exams, it is a vital importance that everyone does the work so they can participate in the discussion. "There's no choice. You just do the work," said Rachel Nelson, Kathy Dusek explained that she didn't even know what the global village was when she signed up for it. "My course had told me to take it and it sounded good. Now I'm glad I took this class."

On October 25, Frank Aichele came to speak to the class about Nigeria. The class requested him to speak in consideration with the novel "Things Fall Apart." Another lecture presentation that the class heard was a panel of journalists, Sherry Aichele, editor of the Pioneer Press, and Tom Dieck, Assistant News Editor for WGN 9. Aichele news broke news about different fields across the world in the media.

and how the media is today. Suzanne Harvie, Harper's journalism coordinator, was the moderator, which she said was "very difficult."

Requirements for the class are at least one preparation for seminars, group work reports, a research paper, a journal, and a creative writing assignment.

A point was raised by Steve Adams that the people involved in the program don't interact with other people on campus. "We are in class these hours a day and that's it. I don't take any other classes because the class meets in 15 minutes. The favorable points of the program are interaction between students, applying critical thinking skills, and transferability. Philosophy professor Cullen Burns explains that interaction and colleges look for extra-curricular activities and community service. Since there are requirements for this class, colleges look favorably on those students who take it. Also, coordinated studies fulfill many of the general education requirements for bachelor degrees.

Some of the activities that people in the class have done for community service are working in homeless shelters, soup kitchens, AIDS walks, PEAK, which is a "big brother/sister" program, in an old home (yes, here) home and for PADS, which is a homeless shelter.

The reaction was overwhelming. Students who worked on the homeless project, who had no idea how bad the problem was, got a first hand look at the homeless situation in our nation.

The students who participated in this project were required to do a presentation for the class so that the class could learn from their experience. The requirement for community service is 10 hours a semester. Activities for the extra-curricular program get more creative. Students can attend lectures, write articles for the Harpington, attend nature walks with the biology professor Randy Schatz, K. If students registered to view this semester, they received 10 points credit. The coordinated studies program will be offered for the spring semester.

Warming planet is topic of forum

Global warming is the timely subject of the fourth annual international forum to be presented by the Harpington Branch of the American Association of University Women (AAUW). The meeting, which is free and open to the public, will be held on Wednesday, November 11 from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m. at the Barrington Park District, Legends of Park Trailhouse, Lions Drive in Barrington. Annually recognized as one of the most important AAUW events, the annual forum is a celebration of research, ideas, and action by the women and communities of carbon dioxide and other pollutants in the global atmosphere. Dr. Rick is the president of the University of Minnesota's outstanding achievement award for her pioneering work on the effects of pollutants on world climate. Members of the working committee for the AAUW international forum are Judy Miller of Palestine; Amy Buno, Wauconda; and Lorraine Tack, Loma. Engle, Terri Tepper, Carly Marie Allen, and Marjorie of Barrington. Catherine Quigg of Barrington, international status chairman, can be contacted at 708-381-6695 for further information.

Seminars, and conferences

Technology is rapidly changing the way students learn and the way teachers teach. To keep study teachers up-to-date, the professionals at Harper College and Northern Illinois University are hosting a four-day study technology conference, November 12-15, 1992 at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare. Harper Mathematics Professor Phil DeMarinis and Mercedes McGowan together with Northern Illinois University colleague Debra Whitbeck will co-chair the fifth Annual International Conference on Technology in Collegiate Mathematics. More than 1200 educators will meet to discuss the effectiveness of integrating technology into the classroom. For further information, please call 1-800-472-6284 and ask for the conference coordinator.

Important strategies for dealing with an ever-changing work environment and diverse workforce and practical tools for helping all employees develop their full potential are two of the benefits managers will receive by attending Managing Diversity in a Changing World. The seminar is being offered by the Institute for Management Development of Harper College in Palatine on Friday, November 20, 8:30 a.m. - 4 p.m., in Building C, Room 105.

Important topics to be presented by Linda Porter, management and international training specialist with United Airlines, are: how to work with change; how to develop skills which help effective communication with employees; how to recognize and resolve potential conflicts before they impact work-life quality and productivity; and how to encourage employees to use their talents while recognizing differences in cultural styles and expectations.

Cost of the seminar is $117 and includes materials and lunch. To register, please call 397-3377 and specify course number 13MM001001. For additional information regarding the Institute for Management Development, call 397-3000, extension 2291.

Racism can make those 'brown eyes blue'

Alex Coleman
Harbinger Staff Writer

Picture a society where people are discriminated against because of eye color. Individuals with brown eyes are regarded as superior while blue-eyed people are ostracized as inferior. There are no exceptions.

This society was reality almost 25 years ago for 16 third graders. Jane Elliott, a former teacher, implemented this exercise to teach her students about racism.

The students chosen as inferior were forced to wear fabric collars as identifiers. They were told they were not to cheat or snitch as the brown-eyed students. They were treated as inferior. And they adhered to this self-fulfilling prophecy.

They were unable to calculate simple mathematical problems. They forgot facts, figures and words they knew previously. They were disheveled, clumsy and afraid. Confusion and the desire to succeed were lost.

The so-called superior group excelled. Their mathematical and verbal skills were better than ever. They undervalued and ridiculed previously incomprehensible things. They acted superiorly verbally and physically abusing the blue-eyed students. "I couldn't believe how quickly my loving, thoughtful, kind students became malicious, arrogant, rude, overbearing, condescending, white, brown-eyed vicious people," Elliott said.

Elliott has repeated the exercise on children and adults numerous times over the years. The spoke here last month about her discovery. Her lecture allowed people to examine their attitudes, biases and stereotypes about other cultures and helped break down the barriers of prejudice. She said the exercise teaches whites about racism by showing them that they are what people of color go through daily.

People of color are subjected to injustice and abuse based solely on their skin tone, Elliott noted. They can't escape it; they have no place to go. Their white people were able to take all their collars to escape.

Racism is everywhere. "It's a racist," Elliott said. "If you want to see another racist turn to look at the person on your right. Don't you. Now look at the person on your left. If you're looking at a white person who was born, raised and schooled in the United States of America, you're looking at a racist because that's what education in this country is about."

"No people, you can have the finest multicultural, non-sectarian, particularist mural on the face of the earth, but if it is filtered through the mind and the mouth of a racist, you will have racist education in that classroom. Make no mistake about that."

"Racism is an artificial thing," Elliott said. "It is ridiculous. It is irrational. It is based on something so irrational that it is hard for me to understand how thinking, reasoning, adults can go along with racism today. But we not only go along with it, we help to perpetuate it by doing nothing to stop racism."

"The horrendous things that are happening in this society would not happen if we had not introduced racism. White people deliberately created racism based on skin color in this country. And the particular brand we exercise is deliberately used to keep white people in power as this country and to perpetuate the myth of white supremacy. It is time to get rid of it."

Elliott encouraged those who want to prove white people are superior to write her letter. However, they would have to do it without electricity, paper, clean cloth, ink, numbers or the alphabet because people of color were in some way responsible for their development.

And forget about making up pen names, wearing shoes, riding a bicycle, driving cars with rubber tires, taking superior receiving a blood transfusion using plasma because people of color are responsible for these inventions. "Now you have a problem," Elliott said. "You are going to be uncomfortable and you are going to live your racism."

Elliott said we need fair treatment and equity, not a colorblind society. "We need to celebrate differences, learn from those who are different and teach them about ourselves in order to make this a better society."

Alcohol is a major factor in sexual assault

Survey of college students reveals 5% of college males admit to rape, 9% say they've tried to rape

College Press Service

Men and drinking can be a potentially dangerous mix for women, researchers of sexual assault said recently at a conference on campus rape.

More than 500 doctors, faculty and campus security personnel met for three days to discuss sexual assault on campuses.

"Rape is an emotionally charged issue that colleges can deal with," said Bernice Sandher, who works at the Center for Women Policy Studies in Washington, D.C.

"Campus rape affects women who haven't been raped. All women are vulnerable."

"It also has an impact on men. They need to have better relationships with women," she said.

Many Koss, who works at the College of Medicine at the University of Arizona, presented statistics from a poll done at an upstate New York college. The survey found that 80 percent of the male respondents admitted to sexual assault. The majority of the men and had the attitude that some women look like they're "just asking" to be raped.

"Men are attracted to the idea of them being the sexual aggressor. Men negotiate relationships based on myths, not men on misinterpreted information," she said. "Rape is an intergroup. Rape can refer to a date or a date rape."

There are demographic characteristics on males who rape, including being hostile to women, being sexually aggressive behavior, drug use and being a dangerous driver, she said.

In studies Koss did, 75 percent of the perpetrators had been drinking when the date rape occurred and 50 percent of the victims had been drinking.

Alcohol itself won't lead to sexual assault, Koss said. It's a depressant, she said, rather, it builds the expectancies of men.

A man who is drunk is likely to be directly aggressive with a woman, and after a rape occurs, blame the alcohol, and not his own actions.

Of 440 men Koss surveyed at the University of Arizona, 50 percent said they had raped a woman. Nine percent said they had tried.

What is important to remember, said Jay Friedman, in a lecture on how the media depict sex, alcohol and power, is that "rape is never, never, never the woman's fault."

"Men will force a woman to have sex to prove he's heterosexual. Men become more physical when their hormones rage. Women were emotional and verbal aggressors," he said.

Although alcohol is a factor in date rape, Koss said fraternities are not filled with potential rapists.

"The place of residence does not predict sexual aggression. It is people who are aggressive and not the environment," she said.

However, an environment that does cause sexual aggression in sports, she said, especially such revenue sports as football and basketball.

Athletes tend to feel elite and special, and live in an environment that "reinforces dominance on another person. They can be insensitive to body size," Koss said.

Sanitizing colleges and universities are at legal risk if there are no policies regarding rape and sexual harassment.

"Rape is a felony that must be handled different from other campus judicial procedures," she said.

Schools must develop and publicize educational programs dealing with rape, have explicit rights posted for rape victims and work with the court system and police in rape cases, she said.

ARTS AND ENTERTAINMENT

Night and the City

By far, NOT one of De Niro's best performances

Ann Kowarsky
Harbinger Staff Writer

Night and the City, starring Robert De Niro, Jessica Lange and Alan King, opened Oct. 23 and is playing at a theater near you.

All Harry Fabian (De Niro) wants to do is to be a star. He, for reasons, wants to be the next big thing. Unfortunately, he doesn't take into account that he is extremely naive and naive to the point of almost comical.

Harry Fabian is a money-hungry lawyer who would go to trial like the plague. When representing others, he suddenly is struck with the idea of taking a shot at the big time and getting into the boxing business. Right from the start, he's over his head. The king of the "boxing" circle, Bowen Bowen (King), naturally goes on him with threats.

Fabian does his homework and gets Bowen Bowen's brother on his side to help him make his dream come true. Now, we see the movie in Fabian. Not only is he in boxing around with his best friend's wife, he is borrowing money from him. And his. And some of his "friends."

Melanie Neumann (Lange), the wife, also has dreams. She desperately wants to leave her husband and start her own restaurant and her end result is a comedy of her life. She is in love with Fabian and will do anything for him.

Maybe I just don't like movies about boxing, people pulling rank and doing whatever they can to make a buck. Many times during this film, I felt a strange feeling of déjà vu. Big bad movie-type guy in charge of big money-making industry. The movie has very little plot, aside of ideas that we've already seen.

Another thing that bothered me was that when major turning points in the film did take place, I just thought "Oh, Well, I guess that is so important."

Fish, ex-lead vocalist of Europe's rock trio Marillion

Steve Gomez
Harbinger Staff Writer

While not gaining support with American audiences, Fish's music is definitely worth listening to. Loyal followers of Marillion clamor like Songs for a Jester's Tear, Fragile, Wings, On the Border, and Brave New World quite a change lyrically and musically with Fish's solo work.

In his first solo project Wag the Dog, Fish explores the political and social consequences of America and the world continuum. For past his Marillion days of What Bizarre and Fragile with songs like Big Wudge and Songs of Mind Fish pulls the listener into very climatic, anti-American political and social themes, just one glimpse at the album jacket and the individual notes the dedication of material wealth. The cover shows a man and

What I did like about Night and the City was the sound editing. In the beginning of the film, Fabian is in his friend's bar, talking about money. When he mentions a large sum of money, the cash register rings. Another is when Bowen Bowen comes into the bar, the door creaks is amplified for effect. That is a remarkable. That's about it. Yes, this is a waste of time and money.

women preached high steps a mountain of material goods. Hence, the song View From A Hill sums this up. Fish dives for the heart of family concerns in powerful, yet sad Family Business, a song which deals with physical and mental abuse of individuality. The album closes with Circles, a love song that denotes the listener is an ocean of heartful attitudes.

Fish's music, and most recent release Internal Exile explores "a collection of a boy's own music."

The album opens with Shadowplay, a song that demonstrates Fish's poetic excellence. "Hunched Forward in the corner of my soul, my fingertips are bleeding from climbing up the wall, that time you hurt me right down to the core and I'm desperately trying to find a reason to forgive you for it all." Or how about the song (on video), but it seemed so familiar. I found it to be boring and predictable. This is one of Robert De Niro's better characters. Perhaps it's the script. Maybe the director. Maybe the character. I wasn't impressed. Very little impressed me about this film.

If you do decide to see this film, here are a few things that will make it more interesting. Pay attention to the

Fish's diary continues to unfold with songs like Dear Friend, Paradise, Shower and especially on Tongue.

Fish has found himself well suited for continued success. His next work Suits is due for release in early 1993. Fish, especially in his Marillion days was very absent in his writings. He wanted his audience to think deeply as to what he was trying to express in his music. That is why Marillion was such an innovative band. They were afraid of losing living communication.

Since Fish's departure from Marillion in 1981, Steve Hogarth has taken the reigns of lead singer. With the release of Seamus' End and Hold Days In Eden, it's quite obvious the spirit that made Marillion an excellent, influential band is gone. Long live the Harbinger, enough said Fish!

sound and what soundtracks they use for what scenes? I.e. audience chemistry in the gym. Look for the two ex-claimers by Deborah Williams, who plays the "mom" (look at the window in her hair).

What the hell, are the movie (and not, don't pay full price) and tell why they chose the title Night and the City. I can't seem to figure it out.

YOUR DEGREE COULD BE CLOSER THAN YOU THINK.

Roosevelt University's Arlington Heights Campus requires fewer hours for graduation—travelling hours, that is. Not only do those hours add up, but so does the money you save, because you can live at home. What's more, our accommodating mix of weekday, weekend and evening classes permits you to make classes working part-time or even full-time. Each semester, more than 2,500 students enjoy these advantages while pursuing a degree at Roosevelt.

You can earn your bachelor's or master's degree entirely at our Albert A. Rabkin Campus in a variety of subject areas including Business Administration, Education, English, Public Administration, and History.

So when you consider which four-year university to attend, remember you can go a long way further in your education when you don't have to go a long way to your campus.

Farce, plot collide in school play "The Miser"

BOB DOMINI
Harbinger Reporter

Rehearsals are in full swing for "The Miser", which is to open here on campus Nov. 13.

"The Miser" is set in Paris in 1668. This 17th century comedy, written by Moliere, is about a scheming miser named Harpagon, who loves his money more than his life, his children, or anything else.

All of Moliere's plays have shown people who have obsessions that are absolutely out of control. In the case of the miser, it's a man who is out of control with a desire to accumulate money.

As a playwright, Moliere was always trying to poke fun, in a gentle way, at people who have outrageous obsessions that take over their lives. It was his intention that people see, this sort of obsessive compulsion, think about it in their own life, and change.

"The Miser" is high comedy at its best, with a touch of farce and slapstick.

Typical of these plays, you have the sets of young lovers, whose father stands in the way of their happiness and they have to scheme with the servants to get around the father in order to get married.

In "The Miser", Harpagon decides that he is going to marry a young girl. Turns out that his son has already seen her and falls madly in love. The young girl is in love with the son as well.

When Harpagon announces that he will marry the young girl, Mariane, his son, Cleonte, becomes frantic. In his desperation, Cleonte, together with his servant, finds out that Harpagon has hidden his money in the garden and steals it.

Cleonte holds the money as ransom to force his father to choose between Mariane or his money. Of course, Harpagon chooses the money.

One of the things that a high comedy does is that it demonstrates characters who are trying to work out their place in society. Inevitably, the characters in a high comedy, like "The Miser", are wealthy people.

So there is a certain style that the actors have to learn. "The rehearsal is a challenge, but it's a lot of fun to work on," said director Mary Jo Wilkins.

One of the things we're working very hard on is a posture. Now that may sound crazy, but the costumes the actors will be wearing requires posture be absolutely excellent.

Costume designer Anne Giering, is a former Harper student who has been working on the costumes full-time for over a month.

"We're down to the last week now, and we've been working almost 24 hours a day to get these done." The costumes are characteristic of the 17th century. Women will be wearing low-cut, long-flowing gowns with full puffed sleeves. The men will be wearing knee-length stockings with knee breeches. Most of the men's coats are cut full and to the knees. The men will also be wearing wigs.

The fabrics chosen for the costumes are richly-hued brocades and tanyer weaves in bright shades of blue, rose and aqua.

The cast has 14 members. Eight of them are Harper students and six are community residents. Of those six residents, four of them are former Harper students. For the past 16 years, Harper has opened its fall production to the community, in order to involve them in the theater.

Wilkins expressed her gratitude and deep appreciation for all who helped to make "The Miser" possible. "The cast members are very spirited. They work hard. They have their own creative ideas, which makes it such a delight for me as a director. I'm very fortunate to have such talented and gifted people as part of my staff. I think we are so fortunate here at Harper because people are extraordinarily cooperative and eager to help."

She also noted "For instance, the food service people are doing the Dinner Theatre. The Horticulture people are supplying the plant materials for the set. The Fashion Design program is always cooperative. The people in the L.R.C. (Library Resource Center) helped us with research on how the set should look. We could not do what we do here without all of the wonderful support of the campus."

The play will be presented Nov. 13-15 and Nov. 20-21 in building 1, room 141. Friday and Saturday performances are at 8 p.m. Sunday performance is at 2:30 p.m. and is signed for the hearing impaired. Ticket prices are as follows: $5 for Harper students and staff, $6 for other students, and $7 for general public.

YOUR DEGREE COULD BE CLOSER THAN YOU THINK.

Roosevelt University's Arlington Heights Campus requires fewer hours for graduation - traveling hours, that is. Not only do those hours add up, but so does the money you save, because you can live at home. What's more, our accommodating mix of week-day, weekend and evening classes permits you to make money, working part-time or even full-time. Each semester, more than 2,500 students enjoy these advantages while pursuing a degree at Roosevelt.

You can earn your bachelor's or master's degree primarily at our Albert A. Robin Campus in a variety of subject areas including Business Administration, Education, English, Public Administration, and History.

So when you consider which four-year university to attend, remember you can go a long way further in your education when you don't have to go a long way to your campus.

A Roosevelt counselor will be visiting your campus Thursday, November 12 from 6:00 p.m.-8:00 p.m.

The debt is a problem that won't leave

A letter in the October 8, 1992 Harbinger had an interesting letter (on the distribution of wealth) by Robert Loren (Student) which raises some questions. Robert states that he obtained his information from the Chicago Tribune (a few weeks ago) and this is what he found: "The percent of wealth held by this nation's top 1 percent doubled from 18 percent in the 1970s to 36 percent in the 1980s."

Compare that to what I read in the New York Times on May 19, 1992 from page "In the continuing debate over the distribution of wealth and income—the richest 1 percent of America's families owned 36.1 percent of the nation's wealth in 1980, up from 30.1 percent in 1970. If both articles are correct, then the top 1 percent tripled their holdings of wealth in just ten years. Yes, I recall reading in another article that of all this wealth were confiscant, there still would not be enough money to even balance the budget... and that taxing the source of the ultra-rich (at a higher level) would not significantly solve any of our problems. (Sorry, I do not have that article, and I cannot be more specific.)

I did, however, plot our national debt (4.2 trillion dollars) on a chart alongside such smaller figures such as our budget deficit, etc., which are only in the billions. Well, if you place billion dollar figures on the same chart with trillion dollar figures, the billion dollar figures hardly show up.

It is interesting to note that all our balance of trade figures (since 1975) add up to a deficit of 1.3 trillion in money that never reached American business, and consequently resulted in a great loss of jobs. How come our politicians avoid mentioning this as a major cause of our economic woes?

I have not heard one workable solution to our national debt of 4.2 trillion.

It amounts to a debt of 17,000 for every American man, woman, or child, that is a tremendous amount of money, the interest payments alone (about 250 billion dollars a year, or $1000/year for each man, woman, or child) will keep us poor for as long as we manage to exist, the total debt obviously cannot ever be paid back.

A good question is, "To whom do we owe this money?" and, "What would be the consequences if we just declared bankruptcy?"

Why do our presidential candidates talk with such assurance, as if they could repay this debt, with just some minor adjustment in economy? It cannot be done. Vote for the lesser of three evils??? Never!

Bush's loss our gain

There will be a change in the leadership of the United States. And while Bill Clinton didn't receive a majority of the popular vote in last Tuesday's election, he slammed President Bush in the electoral count.

Bush broke too many promises. He wooed voters in 1988 with promises of more jobs, protection of the environment, increased educational opportunities and no new taxes. Each of those promises was broken.

His contention the U.S. economy is the envy of the world must have seemed a lie to the unemployed and underemployed, particularly to college graduates in those categories (estimated at 5.8 million in 1990, up from 3.6 million in 1980).

In the end, enough voters ignored Bush's "trust me" plea to elect Bill Clinton.

Now Clinton has promises to keep, some of them very similar to the ones of the outgoing president. They involve an improved economy, an improved environment, and middle class and lower income exemption from tax increases. In addition he has promised a health care plan that will embrace everyone.

We have dismissed a president who at one time enjoyed unprecedented popularity.

Let's hope that four years from now we have reinforced reason to trust Bill Clinton and that the electoral process is not simply an exercise in inviting more broken promises.

Litter causing frustration for some people

Dear Editor,

I want to express my concern and frustration with the amount of litter I see around the parking lots of Harper College campus. There's never a day that I don't see a garbage problem, and I commend the recycling program used in the cafeteria, however eating and drinking can see litter everywhere! I feel that everybody is at fault. I do recall seeing a maintenance personnel cleaning up the parking lot at one time, but I do feel they could do more. If we, the students, administrators, and faculty would use the garbage cans, and THROW OUT the cigarette butts, nobody would be needed to clean up OUR trash in the first place.

I do realize that our tuition supports the maintenance department, though I do not think that justifies littering. I ask you why they should be responsible for our irresponsibility.

Tim Aumiller,
A concerned student

Sports writing by Heather Carroll, finally with respect

Heather Carroll
Harbinger Sports Writer

I never realized how hard it would be to become a female sports reporter. The day I decided to be a reporter, I was told to get a job at the local paper. I was hired without a resume, as a junior in high school interested in becoming a reporter.

The editor at the McHenry Star/News was pleased to see me in his office to talk about the production of the paper and my role as a sports reporter.

Here's part of the conversation during the meeting:

"Have you had any previous experience covering sports before?" he asked.

"No. But I do know a lot about different sports and what I don't know I could learn." I guess it was as good as any answer without lying. Then the big question hit.

"Do you know about football?"

"Yes." The only thing I really knew about football at the time was that men in tight pants run up and down the field with a ball beating up on each other. I know about most of the game. "He was so excited that I could never football but wanted to make sure that I could. So that night he assigned me to watch the Bears game on TV and write a story on it. Now it's so time to pass. After our little talk I rushed straight over to the library and checked out every book that they had on football and spent four or more hours reading, glancing, and viewing the game's progression. I thought I had the whole football thing down until I got a call. He needed me to cover, at the last minute, a city council meeting. That sounded easier.

It was at that article, my first one, that I made the front page of the paper. What a relief, but after that he kept me on football for the high school.

Today I feel that I got the job because I was young and enthusiastic about journalism and the field. Maybe they felt that they couldn't find me to write the way they wanted and so they gave me only they knew.

The editor who hired me at the time became a good friend and teacher. Then one day the paper was bought out by another company and everyone but four staff members and I were fired. The editor was one of the few. They kept me on to see what I could do.

One day when I started to do things in a different manner after attending a K&RPA Photo Journalism Workshop they suddenly didn't like the way I wrote. They began to combine my stories with other people's words and gave it a whole byline. After several weeks were by my articles were changed enough that they said it didn't require a byline. After that I quit.

Upon attending my first semester at McHenry County College I joined the newspaper staff as a sports reporter. I, as usual, was the only female on the sports staff but that only made me want to work harder to prove myself which I tried to do and feel that I did my best.

While writing for the college's paper, the Torton, I decided to re-apply at the newspaper which I had already worked for. I had noticed that they had been advertising for reporters in any field for the previous three months. I went in and talked to a different editor.

He was only a couple of years older and like the way I wrote. But with being the youngest on the staff and, I suppose a female, I was assigned all of the seconds. There wasn't an assignment that wasn't within 60 miles or so. Half the time I didn't even get paid or my mileage wasn't reimbursed. This was due to the fact that the article wasn't printed.

The sports reporter would send me to one place and the general assignment editor would send someone else to the same place for the same article. Being that the second editor was over the editor my article wasn't printed. I still feel that it was as mostly because I am a female and they weren't sure I could do it. It was much like my previous time of employment.

The reason I left that time was because I had a chance to work for a bigger paper. The Northwest Herald, and was assigned to do a McPac West Tennessee article for both papers. I had to make a decision. Which was more important? Was a chance to move up in the world of reporting or stay with the Star/News and go nowhere more important to me? I thought it was. Anything would, I guess. When the article was printed the Star/News found out I was a sport. They told me in the future, summer or later, I would all of a sudden have to make a choice. So, I did. I left for the chance to move up.

The Northwest Herald offered me a job. Full time in the fall as a reporter. For the time I was not a newspaper. Everyone there was new and non-union and I felt right at home. I kept calling to find out when I would start and the sports editor kept putting me off. One day I walked in and asked when I would start and that I needed an answer right then and there. I may have kicked him off or something. He told me I no longer had the job due to cubicles. Should be out of here and I think that's it.

Being that it was time to move on I applied at another local paper, The Washington Independent. I am still there and love it. It's enjoyable. It is the first one of three papers that has two other female sports reporters, let alone one. I feel a little bit of relief when I think about it. The only thing is, is that they are only part time, where I'm part time. But it doesn't matter. It's experience without trying to prove myself as a female reporter.

I have had trouble over the past couple of years and learned to stand with both feet on the ground.

Being a female sports reporter is a tough job. But as the old saying goes, "Somebody's got to do it!" And I have.

Football team shows true colors in win over Joliet

Pete Branan

New this at Harper football. The Hawks dominated both sides of the ball on Saturday and overcame a losing streak of 14 straight games on the field for the first time since the NAC Conference crown.

"We are moving in the right direction," said Harper football coach John Elia. "For the third week in a row, we went over 400 yards on offense. The only thing I didn't like was our turnover on our first drive."

Harper (4-3, 3-1) overcame from an early fumble and some inaccuracy, the turnovers game as well, the Hawks intercepted Joliet quarterback four times. Defense had Joliet's offense led the way with two picks, but linebacker Damien Dickerson had the big one, a 32-yard interception return for a touchdown.

Running backs Ed Fairchild and Trevor Rogers each scored twice from short range. Harper's running game managed 309 yards on the day.

"Joliet is a freshman-dominated team," Elia said. "They are not terrible, they just don't have enough experience."

Harper was coming off a 30-20 loss to Triton last week. In the defeat, the Hawks committed five turnovers and had 159 yards in penalties.

"That was the difference today," Elia said. "We had a different group of officials and intercepted those five passes."

Harper got on the board in the air in the third quarter. Quarterback Eric Stockton (6-7, 79 pounds) found Ron Brown open for a 5-yard TD pass, that made it a 42-7 game.

Fairchild was the lone Harper back over 100 yards, but the team had balance with Paul Rogers gaining 58 yards and Rogers, 44 yards.

Harper plays its final two NAC games on the road. That Saturday, the Hawks travel to Rock Valley.

Volleyball trying to shock region teams

Pete Branan

You won't find Harper's volleyball team ranked in the region. Not yet at least. But that is due to only playing in the right direction. Harper (13-10, 4-2) took out of the NAC and NAC ranked teams in the region last week.

"Every game from now on is important," said Harper volleyball coach Mike McKinley. "We want to be on the top edge. We are all healthy now. We expect to win every game and we will have seven."

Thank the Hawks all five games to beat the No. 5 team, Moraine Valley and Triton. The Hawks emerged victorious 8-15, 15-8, 15-9, 11-15, 15-11.

On October 8, four giant killers dropped the No. 8 club from Illinois Valley.

McKinley said his regular starters like Eric Hanley, Monica Patten and Tim Ryan. The Hawks also got a boost from sophomore Julie Craven, The Barrington High grad in her first year of NAC competition.

"Julie made a couple of key kills against Moraine," McKinley said. "That was really the turnaround morale was. She's a real team builder."

Harper plays at Kishwaukee on Thursday.

Earvin 'Magic' Johnson re-retires from NBA to cool off conflict

Lisa Peterson

Harbinger Sports Writer

Earvin Johnson had never been one of my favorite basketball players, but I still enjoyed watching him play. He has one of my favorites after submitting the "straight" to admit his affliction with HIV. But the fact that he has AIDS.

I had never admired an athlete for his personal life. Magic decided to play for his country, his wife, and his children. He decided to play for his country, his wife, and his children. He decided to play for his country, his wife, and his children.

Eye on the Hawks

Joe Williams

Sports Editor

It may seem like a while since you've seen me, but don't worry, you're "Eye on the Hawks" is back with a good deal to say.

After a long hiatus, I'm back on the world championship team. That's right, the world championship team. With the name "The Eye on the Hawks" in their faces, the team were able to show what respect is, something Americans don't appear to know a whole lot about.

Next, I would also like to say thank you to Magic Johnson for all the memories he has given to basketball fans throughout the world. The man was in a no-win situation, and was forced to do what he thought others wanted, instead of what he felt was truly right.

I am the president of Stop AIDS. Harper, and for those people who are afraid of Magic, spreading the virus by playing basketball. I give this message: GET A CLUE!

The chance of another athlete contracting the AIDS virus in a basketball game (especially with the precautions taken nowadays) are less than your chances of winning the lottery this Saturday.

Enough said on that.

Our last message to Harper Hawk coaches, athletes, and fans in the past, I have asked for feedback from the readers on your feelings about the Harbinger sports page, good or bad. I've only received recommendations, both of them compliments, and neither of them from athletes or coaches.

I guess those of you in the athletic program just love the sports page, huh?

Coop program benefits student body

Anne Wagner
Staff Writer

Dorothy Kuski was planning to be a homemaker when her teacher told her about the Cooperative Education Program at Harper College.

After the talk with her counselor, she utilized the program and began working at Regis Chemical Company, of Mount Carmel, earning college credits for her work.

Kuski, who has been with Regis since August, 1992, works approximately 16 hours per week. Her supervisor, Dr. Christopher Welch, allows her to take time in various experiments. "I can make a better career decision," Kuski said.

For Linda Buzg, a film student majoring with Interiors Quality, the Cooperative Education Program was her opportunity to earn college credits and already employed full-time as a waitress, to which she continued the program.

"We have always been bad with cost accounting and we asked Mary to develop a simple study," said Lawrence Raymond, her supervisor at Interiors. He is a proponent of the program and feels it is a wonderful learning experience for students.

Another student, Jon Zgoda, took advantage of the program and gives tours to grade school children at Spring Valley Nature Center, Schaumburg.

Averse of his responsibilities, Zgoda will get his Asian rates in Science from Harper next semester and plans to attend Northeastern University, Chicago, to continue his studies in a different major.

He has not decided on a career choice. "At this time, I will either be a teacher or work in field studies," said Zgoda.

The Cooperative Education Program offered these students an opportunity to earn from two to five credit hours per semester by working for a company in their related field of study. The program is open to all career choices and there is no age requirement.

To find out more about this opportunity, stop by Building A, Room 347, Mary Ann Jank or Kevin Spence would be happy to explain the details. If you are unable to stop by, call 997-3000 ext. 2720 Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., for additional details.

Registration goes high tech this year

Students continuing or returning for credit classes at Harper College will be able to speed up the process through Touchstone telephone registration.

While Harper has offered telephone registration for students for a number of years, and will continue to do so, this year's registration process will be even faster.

The system will take classes through the registration process, providing a verbal confirmation of all information entered. Touchstone registration will follow the college's speed registration to limit periods that are more convenient for some students. Students will be able to register, make inquiries or changes to their schedules, arrange payment and request credit card approval.

Touchstone registration is available on September 1992 registration and begins November 10, 1992, from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m., Monday through Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., the phone number for Touchstone is 708/997-3000.

Students should call the Touchstone number, follow the prompts and enter their class numbers. After a successful registration, students will receive a confirmation letter from the Registrar's Office. Students should also check their schedules, which will be available on-line over the Touchstone database. If you need a copy of the schedule, please contact the College for New Students at 708/997-3000 ext. 2720. There is a non-refundable application fee of $15.00.

Harper prepares for winter weather

With the approaching winter, faculty and staff need to be prepared to follow appropriate notification procedures during severe weather conditions.

The following policies and procedures will be in effect for weather-related emergencies.

1. As long as it is feasible, the College administration during school will hours to provide necessary services for instruction. If it becomes necessary close the campus, an announcement will be made on the following system:

WCRB-FM 92.7

WGN-FM 94.5

WMGM-AM 670

WFLD-TV Channel 32

WHPA-AM 760

FM 96.1

Harper Cable Channel

WYCN-AM 720

WLS-AM 950/950.1

Unless you have an urgent reason to do so, please do not call the College switchboard to obtain this information.

2. If campus closing becomes necessary, be fore an official announcement can be made, supervisors and deans are requested to notify their area.

It is recommended that each area develop a telephone tree. Faculty members are also encouraged to develop a telephone tree for their classes.

3. Should it become necessary to close the campus during working hours, ample notification will be given to mail and students to allow for orderly departure from the campus. This decision will be communicated from the Office of the President and vice presidents.

If the campus will be closed for duration of hours, determination will be made by 5:00 a.m.

If the campus will be closed for the evening, and classes cancelled, all Harper staff, determination will be made by 7:00 p.m.

4. The above applies to the Northeast Center and all administration. Any exceptions will be noted in the announcements.

Administrators and supervisors should review these emergency procedures in the Administrative Services Procedures Manual and the Safety and Emergency Procedures Manual.

Dawn Morris, a student here at Harper, dashes off to class.

Loan defaulters face harsh fine

Unless student loan defaulters face possible loss of 1992 federal income tax refunds under Federal legislation that contains a very cautious but tax offset program.

The House Student Assistance Committee (ISAC) has for the eighth consecutive year urged an agreement with the U.S. Department of Education (ED) to assign certain defaulted loans for the potential offset of the borrowers' 1992 federal tax refunds.

Under the terms of the agreement with ED, ISAC will certify for offset any loans on which there has been no payment for 90 days by December 4. Borrowers were notified by letter on mid-September that their loans had been assigned to the U.S. Department of Education. The department will then assign the accounts to the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) for offset against any 1992 federal tax refunds that might be due the borrowers in question. If a debtor certified for offset responds to the letter by paying the loan in full or by entering into a satisfactory repayment schedule with ISAC, the assignment of the loan may be avoided.

Last year, ISAC assigned 74,630

accounts to ED. As of September 25, that assignment resulted in over 21,000 borrowers being offset for a total amount collected of over $18 million.

This year, ISAC has assigned 76,153 borrowers whose assigned loans total $39.2 million. The 1992 cutoff date (July 1, 1991) through June 30, 1992) was another record-breaking year for student loan collections as the State of Illinois, ISAC collected $57.4 million during the year. This continued success and success that many defaulted borrowers want to repay their student loans.

The offset program is an effective method to gain the attention of those borrowers who have continued to ignore the effects of the collection staff at ISAC. An ISAC, ISAC director of claims and collections said, "Borrowers who have defaulted on their student loans should be notified by letter to contact an account representative at 708-945-7040, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. For borrowers outside the 312 and 708 area codes, the telephone number is 1-800-WH-HELP (1-800-934-3572), Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m."

COLLEGE NEWS UPDATE

ITT Offers full tuition scholarships

Illinois Institute of Technology (ITT) is offering full tuition scholarships to two qualified full-time students transferring from each of 50 community and junior colleges. The application deadline is May 1, 1993.

ITT's Community and Junior College Transfer Leadership Scholarships are available to promising scholars who are nominated by their community or junior colleges. Preference is given to gifted students who, without this scholarship, would have serious financial difficulty continuing their studies at ITT. The scholarship is renewable for seven semesters or until graduation, whichever comes first, as long as the recipient is registered as a full-time student and maintains a 3.0 (B) average at ITT.

To qualify, applicants must:

- 1) Submit a Transfer Application for full-time study and supporting documents to ITT.
- 2) Be accepted as full-time students and have transferable and applicable course work of at least 15 semester units (25 quarter hours).
- 3) Engineering, mathematics, science and computer science students must have a 1.75 or better grade point average. Arts, business, design, and liberal arts students must have a grade point average of 3.0 or better on a 4.0 scale.
- 4) Submit all financial aid notices.

ments required by ITT.

The Community and Junior College Leadership Scholarship is a guarantee that a recipient's tuition is completely covered with gift assistance composed of university and any applicable federal and state funds.

ITT also offers partial scholarships of up to $4,000 to qualified full-time students transferring to ITT from community and junior colleges. Deadline for applications is June 1, 1993.

Additional financial aid is available from Arthur Sherburne, assistant director for transfer/admission at (312) 567-3025 in Chicago and (800) 468-2129 outside Chicago.

Fellowships for Professionals - East Central Europe and Baltic States

The Institute of International Relations (IIR) announces a new deadline for the 1992/93 competition for the Professional Development Fellowships.

Fellowships are available to Bulgaria, Croatia, Czech Republic, Hungary, Poland, Romania, Slovakia, or the Baltic States. Financed by the Soviet Eastern European Research and Training Act of 1983 (Title VIII), the program is intended to support young specialists in the fields of business and economics, law, journalism, public administration, and international relations. Fellows will travel as a capacity to deepen their understanding of our most forms and become familiar with the scholarly resources in their fields. IIR will assist with all necessary arrangements at host country institutions.

The competition is open to U.S. citizens currently enrolled in graduate or professional school with at least two years of training or recent graduates who are required to submit a detailed proposal of the study or research they wish to pursue and demonstrate how the project will be of benefit to their future plans and professional careers.

Fellowships are available for periods of three to seven months. Financial benefits include round-trip airfare, travel insurance, a monthly living stipend, health insurance, and an allowance for books and travel within the host country.

Fellows will be invited to IIR headquarters in New York for an interview in March, 1993.

The deadline for receipt of applications is February 1, 1993. For further information, brochures and application forms, contact:

COOPERATIVE EDUCATION PROGRAM

WHAT IS COOPERATIVE EDUCATION?

Cooperative Education allows you to gain on-the-job training experience related to your career goals in either a part-time or full-time position developed as a partnership with employers. It enables you to apply the theory and skills learned in the classroom. A formalized training plan is developed through a "team" effort by the employer, the Harper College Co-op staff, and Co-op Faculty Advisor.

- Transfer and Career: Students gain on-the-job training experience related to your career goals.
- Earn credit (2 - 5 hours per semester).
- Work full or part-time.
- Work with outstanding employers.

Prerequisite: Approval of the Program Coordinator/Department Chair and Cooperative Education Office. Program enrollment guidelines for major field of study or career programs must be met.

Cooperative Education is not a substitute for a required internship, externship or practicum and will not be applicable to certain career programs.

To learn more about Cooperative Education come to an Information Session in Building A, Room 347 on the following dates:

Monday, November 23 5:30 pm
Tuesday, November 24 12 noon

Applications being taken now for Spring, 1993.

More students, less money for pell grants

COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

More middle-class students will be eligible for Pell Grants, but there will be less money to support many of the neediest students. The new grant competition for fewer bucks.

A budget session was U.S. Senate last month approved a $100 reduction in the maximum Pell Grant next year, virtually ensuring final congressional approval of the plan.

Meanwhile, financial aid advisers are warning that broader eligibility for the grants, coupled with lower funding levels, means competition will be greater than ever for smaller amounts of money.

The Senate bill would reduce the maximum grant in the fall of 1993 from $2,400 to $2,300. Legislators blamed some of the problems on previous shortfalls in the program, and the commission that developed the bill said it "deeply regrets" having to lower the award.

Nonetheless, the $2.3 billion annual grant is far below the $3.7 billion Pell Grant enacted in the recent Higher Education Act reauthorization bill Congress passed last September. It will be less money to support many of the neediest students.

During the summer, the House passed the $100 cut in the maximum Pell grant, also citing budget constraints.

In addition to Pell reductions, the Senate bill cuts funding for several other higher education programs, including a small reduction in aid to historically black colleges and universities. But the Senate and House voted to keep the State Student Incentive Grant program, targeted aid for education by the Bush administration.

Coming on the heels of the HEA reauthorization bill, the Pell grant could substantially offset the nation's major student grant program. Under HEA, more middle-class families will become eligible for aid, but the commission that developed the bill said it "deeply regrets" having to lower the award.

"We know there will be expanded eligibility," said Dallas Martin, president, National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators. Yet Martin expressed hope that the program, with its limited funds, will continue to support low-income youth. "I think there's a commitment [in Congress] not to make access for low-income students," Martin said. "People who do the greatest need should get served first."

Still, he said a major goal of the expanded eligibility is to help the nation's poorest students. People who feel they have a stake in it, Martin said. "But if they can get even a grant of $200 or $300, people will consider it an important program."

About 3.6 million students will receive Pell grants in 1993, the Education Department said. The average grant award is $1,052.

HEA also created a new system to judge student financial aid. Some colleges have completed the new simplified analysis may have some students who lack family resources for college.

Martin said this year—and many others in the future—may be left out after the November election.

The Senate also approved a provision in the spending bill that would make part-time students eligible for Pell grants for the first time. Previously, part-time students could not qualify for the award.

The full Senate approved the bill Sept. 16 after three days of floor debate in which members talked about the merits of transferring more money from the Pentagon for use in education. Sen. Tom Vontes (D-Iowa) wanted to transfer $4.1 million from defense spending to education and human services programs. The transfer would have been used to increase funding for Pell grants, child care, health care and several other key programs, but the plan failed by a 61-39 vote.

Actual new money to a conference committee that will meet to resolve discrepancies between the House and Senate bills.

With both chambers in agreement on Pell grants, and no veto, the bill will be sent to the president.

Some school administrators are worried that the appropriations will not keep up with the growing number of eligible students.

Parviz Harris, director of the University of Texas Austin's Office of Student Financial Services, said the new bill will be a "double-edged sword."

"It means that a whole more students will be eligible for Pell grants, the total amount of money available per student will go down," Harris said. The Daily Texan.

"It does make the grants more available to middle-income students, but it does so at the expense of lower-income ones."

Others said the bill won't help the student who needs assistance the most.

"The government has to put its probe on appropriate programs for needy students," May Halday, director of the Ohio State University Office of Student Financial Aid, told the Ohio State Journal.

Lorenz A. Austin, director of the University of Illinois Office of Student Financial Aid in Champaign, Urbana, said that 10 percent more students who qualify would be eligible for Pell grants, "meaning more students will receive less money," he told The Daily Illini.

Students ask for repeal of tax on scholarships

JOHN WILSON
College Press Service

A House bill that would raise a 17 percent tax on graduate and professional students' stipends, scholarships and fellowships faces little chance of passing this year because of Congress' reluctance to eliminate taxes.

"It's all over for this year. The president is talking about vetoing any thing that looks like a tax increase," said Thomas Limery, director of government relations for the Council of Graduate Schools. "My fear is that this political season is open."

The 1986 Tax Reform Act put a 17 percent tax on all scholarships and other money awarded to post-baccalaureate students in graduate and professional schools.

The Internal Revenue Service is expected to begin actively enforcing the law this year, officials said.

Revenues from the tax was expected to produce about $550 million from 1986-91, if the tax had been fully enforced.

Scholarship money used for tuition and fees, books and supplies is exempt tax free, while money used for living expenses and travel is taxed under the act.

"We opposed the bill at the time because we knew it would be a hard sell on graduate students," Limery said.

"Congress, in its fervor for its tax reform, was cutting graduate students as privileged people. But we know graduate students live on very little money."

The bill, sponsored by U.S. Rep. Tom Lewis, R-Pa., and the National Association of Graduate and Professional Students (NAGPS), was introduced in May and has been scheduled for a hearing yet.

Proponents of the graduate students are wealthy. We aren't. I don't know if it's any students or what, but it's a tax," said Jay Ward, executive director for NAGPS.

"The tax is on a wealthy segment of the population. To tax the bottom population is absolutely ridiculous."

Ward, who said, there are more than a million students going to graduate school who can't rely on their parents for financial assistance, and they are competing for stipends, scholarships and assistantships from an ever-shrinking pool of available funds.

There are approximately 1.8 million graduate and professional students in post-baccalaureate programs.

There are no estimates available on the number of students receiving financial assistance through awarded money.

"There was a lot of funding available in many undergraduate students' rights away because money was available," Ward said. "We're seeing less going to graduate school."

Many graduate programs prohibit students from holding secondary jobs, so they either have to break rules or depend on loans, stipends and other awards.

That's why the 17 percent hurts, said Richard Knuth, who is working on his Ph.D. in sociology at Clemson University in South Carolina.

"It's a real devastation. There's no money on face, except just, I'm not going to support it, then I see one shipping over a second rate station as far as the nation goes," he said.

Knuth broke graduate school rules and held four part-time jobs last year. He said tuition, room and board at Clemson cost him $9,000.

He received a department stipend of $4,500, before taxes. After taxes, the stipend was reduced to approximately $7,300. Without outside work, that's all he had to live on.

"The rules say you can't have a second job if you're on an assistantship. Where does that leave graduate students? In my department, most students have second jobs," he said.

Limery, with the Council of Graduate Schools, said the rationale for the 17 percent tax was that if menial wage workers paid taxes, so should graduate students who are the most money for the education system.

But he said that they should be preferred, because these students will be getting a lot more money down the line and will be paying much higher taxes after they graduate," he said. "Without the tax, the extra money could be going to health insurance or helping to pay the rent," said Ward, at Memphis State.

"It hurts the people who are the ones who are going to help make the future, to help make the discoveries."

HealthCorner FOR HEALTH THAT MATTERS

Moderation is the key to happy holidays

The holiday season is often too much to handle for many of us. We spend too much, we eat and drink too much, and we expect too much!

To avoid financial woes

Plan ahead. Set up a realistic savings plan now for next year. Also, buy things during the year (or take advantage of post-holiday sales) for next holiday season.

Set spending limits and stick to them. Purchase fewer and less expensive gifts. Make a list and use it.

Pay with cash. If you use plastic, you know immediately how much you have to spend, how much you have left to spend. Only use plastic for convenience and pay the bill in full when it arrives.

Give of yourself. Most people like items that are made just for them. Useful crafts, artwork, food are always welcome. Vouchers for babysitting, yardwork or house cleaning spread the good cheer throughout the year. The less "needless" when you let your imagination run.

Gain too much over the holidays? Don't maintain an irregular physical activity program; try some of these strategies to avoid the average 6 to 7 pound holiday gain.

Don't skip breakfast the day of the party and eat a nutritious snack about an hour before to curb your appetite. Be moderate at the buffet. A little bit of this and a little of that makes your plate resemble Mount Everest!

Don't try to avoid all treats. Suitable eating does not mean deprivation. Take small portions—it's the amount that counts.

Drink plenty of low-calorie, non-alcoholic fluids. Alcoholic drinks, especially, contain high in calories.

If you drink alcohol—party smart. Maximize your enjoyment by drinking no more than one alcoholic beverage per hour—alcohol with a non-alcoholic drink. Unwind, talk, play games instead of drink. Eat low-calorie snacks instead of alcohol absorption. Don't drive impaired!—designate a driver, take a cab, sleep over.

Eat slowly. It takes 20 minutes for your stomach to get the message that it's full.

Don't hang around the greasy diner. It's too easy to grab "just one more." Move away from the table and enjoy the company of your friends.

Leave your leftovers at the party (don't bring anyone else's leftovers home).

Remember, experience stress during the holidays because our expectations are too high and our uncertainties. We set ourselves up for future disappointment by expecting our families, our gifts, our relationships, the weather and everything else to be perfect.

Keep expectations realistic. Remember that no family is perfect and existing conflicts don't disappear because it is the holiday season—in fact, they frequently intensify because of prolonged, close family contact.

Stay in control. You and your attitude are the only things that you have the power to change.

Choose to be happy. Replace negative thoughts, criticism, feelings, with positive ones.

Don't expect or attempt perfection. Settle for anything short of disaster.

Prioritize. Don't do those few things that are truly important to you.

Give yourself one night on time to sleep, time to shop, time to relax, time to enjoy family and friends, time to do things you enjoy. Do things with family and friends that build memories instead of stress.

Make use of these suggestions to enjoy your holiday season and build a sense of commitment and joyful anticipation.

What you don't know about heart disease may kill you.

Most women don't realize that aging, as well as smoking, diet and heredity, can dramatically increase their risk of heart disease. Every year, an estimated half a million women past 45 will have a heart attack. Nearly half of them will die. Making it the number one killer of women in America today. But it doesn't have to be. If women want to improve their health, there's a good chance heart disease could be prevented. What you don't know about heart disease may kill you. But what you do know may save you. ### Duo to perform concert for hearing impaired

Jeff Brudetich, world-renowned bass player and teacher at Northwestern University, and Josh Rucki Brudetich, pianist, will team up for a live music concert, Thursday, December 3, 12:15 p.m. at Harper College Building P, Room 208.

The pair, who frequently perform together, founded the first company to record music especially arranged and acoustically prepared for the hearing impaired, called Music For All to Hear. Their Harper concert is especially recommended for hearing-impaired listeners.

The main concert is free and open to the public. For more information, call the Harper College Music Department at 397-3000, ext. 2568.

Mentalist to channel powers to Harper Audience

Craig Kargis, who uses his mental powers to "read" the serial number of a twenty-dollar bill made an audience member's guess or to describe in detail a participant's "dream car," will appear at 12 noon, Dec 1. Using audience participation, Kargis performs feats such as reading audience members' minds and making predictions.

Kargis, who says he "combines the skills of a psychologist, a psychic and a magician," also makes tables "walk" on stage and then levitates them.

The nocturnal show, which will be given in the Student Center Lounge of Building A, is free and open to the public.

For more information, call the Harper College Student Activities Office at ext. 2242.

Newberry Library meshes holiday shopping with a cultural experience

The Newberry Library, one of the world's finest libraries, will offer one of the world's finest shopping experiences when 40 of Chicago's finest museums, cultural centers and other non-profit gift shops come together under one roof for Newberry's Very Merry Bazaar, Nov. 20-22. In addition to wonderful shopping opportunities, the Bazaar features holiday entertainment for the whole family, gift wrapping and shipping services, and a hot new cafe. The Bazaar will be open to the public Nov. 20, noon to 6 p.m.; Nov. 21, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Nov. 22, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is $1 per person with children under 12 admit and free. In addition, a 3-day pass for the Bazaar can be purchased for $5. For more information the public may call 312.643.9000, ext. 310.

Newberry's Very Merry Bazaar, now in its second year, is the perfect way to start the holiday season. Shoppers can visit off of the most unusual museum galleries in the Chicago area, all gathered in one convenient location. They will find one of a kind gifts and at the same time support Chicago's rich cultural community, as all sales benefit the participating organizations. "So many people told me last year how good they felt about spending their holiday dollars in a way that supported non-profits," said Brookfield Zoo's Jan Gibson. "It was really important to them, and with so many museums there they could find everything they wanted." Gibson helped coordinate Brookfield's participation in 1991.

The Bazaar will feature Holiday Entertainment and other services for shoppers. North State Parkway's St. Germain will operate a bakery and cafe offering pastries, coffee, and light lunches. The Box Shoppe, from North Avenue, will offer gift wrapping and shipping services. And the Newberry's Lobby, central to the Bazaar, will be the site of holiday entertainment for the whole family. Among the performers for the weekend are Bruce and Claire Newman's A Teatime, Steven Farnham's A1 Jive Music, the Adams Place ensemble, Doug O'Connell's Uncle Rag Puppet Show, Shura and Contrabasso's First Over children's Merry and Blythe Adams' Blue and Singers, and Michael Zyk-welski and Rami Hagan's Celebrity Songs.

For visitors who come from out of town it is important to remember the Newberry Library is located in the heart of Chicago's Gold Coast District. 1 Clark Drive, located on North State, is the official home for the 1992 Bazaar. The Library is offering a special seasonal package that includes daily and weekend tours, overnight parking, weekend passes to the Bazaar, and other amenities. For more information, the public should call the Chicago directly at 1.800.243.1258.

The participants in the 1992 Newberry's Very Merry Bazaar are The Adler Planetarium, the Art Institute of Chicago, Ballet Chicago, Pollock Museum of Lithuanian Culture, Brookfield Zoo, The Chicago Academy of Sciences, Chicago Architecture Foundation, Chicago Children's Museum, Chicago Calligraphy Collective, Chicago Children's Society, Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Chinese American Service League, Contemporary Art Workshop, Museum of Contemporary Photography, The David and Lucile Packard Foundation, DePaul Museum of Art, DuSable Museum of African American History, Frank Lloyd Wright Home and Studio, The Guild for the Blind, Hubbard Street Dance Company, Homebound Industries, Illinois Artisans Shop, Jane Austen Society, Kohl Children's Museum, Luntz Farm, Lincoln Park Zoological Society, Lyric Opera of Chicago, the Mexican Fine Arts Center Museum, The Morton Arboretum, The Nature Conservancy, The Newberry Library, Old Town School of Folk Music, Overland Institute Paper Press, the Ravenna Festival, Museum of Science and Industry, Shakespeare Repertory, Swedish American Museum of Chicago, Terra Museum of American Art, and The Textile Arts Center.

The 1992 Newberry's Very Merry Bazaar is made possible by a generous gift from The Civic Foundation with additional support provided by Citizens Publishing Company and Tatham Elvinsky.

Pre-school sponsors Belize fundraiser, cultural events

Last year the Harper College Learning Center and the Harper Preschool Program celebrated a pre-school in Sisseton Village, Belize as a sister pre-school. This year the Child Learning Center will be continuing this relationship with several programs.

Similar to last year, we will be collecting items that can be used by the children and the pre-school. As you may know, Belize is a very wealthy country and the items that were donated last year resulted in many letters of thanks from the children and their teachers. In addition, we will also be supporting a Women's Program in Belize that is serving to teach the women of that country more self-sufficiency and marketable skills. Attached are copies of some of the letters Kate received from the Sisseton Village and lists of some of the items that would be helpful to the children and women.

In addition to collecting items to send to Belize, this year we will be holding a pre-school enrichment program on Saturday, December 12, called "Our Friends in Sisseton Village." This will be a chance for both parents and children of the Harper College Preschool Program to learn more about the country of Belize. The week before, Kate will be spending time during class talking about Belize and the sister pre-school. Then on Saturday you can give your child an opportunity to learn about Belize, its geography, the people there, and their culture. We will also have the pleasure of a presentation by Dr. Jack Gallagher of Harper's Biology Department who has made several trips to Belize.

Finally, we will have a fund-raiser to collect the funds necessary to ship the donations we receive to Belize. However, this will probably occur in early 1993.

Please mark your calendars "OUR FRIENDS IN SITTETON VILLAGE" Saturday, December 12, 1992 10:00 a.m. to noon

25 years culminated in anniversary ball

KEVIN DELANE
News Editor

Harper College celebrated its 25th anniversary Halloween night, holding a "Silver Anniversary Ball" at Woodfield Hilton Hotel in Arlington Heights.

Approximately 120 people attended the ball, dancing to the sounds of the charts. 13 hearing-impaired students, Harper faculty and a wishing video that presented a humorous look at the school as its 50th anniversary.

Among those who were present include Harper College President Paul Thompson, Board of Trustees Chairperson Molly Kowalski, Executive Vice President of NRI International Chairman Jim Lawler and NRI International Foundation Director President Dudley Powell.

The proceedings started around 6:30 p.m. with cocktails and hors d'oeuvres served to guests. At 7:30 p.m. dinner was served and a raffle that included many tickets of beef and chicken franchises, food and wine with lobster sauce, fresh garden salad and the anniversary cake.

Lancaster began the evening with a welcome to those in attendance and a toast to Harper students, staff, and faculty from past to present.

Presentations were then made to former Harper Presidents Robert Latta and Jim McGrath by Thompson. They were given pinnales awards in recognition of their contributions to Harper.

President Thompson then presented the Harper Board of Trustees, to toast the Harper Board of Trustees, Foundation Directors, NRI and Mrs. Lancaster, Jessica Nicksa, Executive Chairman and the entire Harper community.

After presentations and toasts, the rest of the evening was filled for dancing.

Many decorations showed out during the night's events including the first tier cake, made by the college's baking students, the table centerpieces, designed by floral design students and the watercolor painting of the school by Tom Lynch.

The ball was considered a success due to the number of people that showed up and to the festive time that was had by almost everyone.

The ball was also a time to reflect on what the past 25 years will hold for Harper, when it celebrates its golden anniversary.

A sense of civility was present at the ball for every smiling guest, the school's look back at Harper from its beginnings in 1967 up to the present. The ball was a 50th anniversary celebration for the school.

Above all, the ball gave everyone a chance to get together and celebrate an important year in the history of Harper. It provided guests an experience of unity and commitment by all involved in consistently improving Harper and the students that it contains to achieve.

Harper College has grown as the community around it has. In 1967, the school was a small institution and five years of the school's history would have been a lifetime. In order to deal with the larger student population, the school recently began adding an additional building known as 3.

The school mainly serves the northwest suburbs and is divided into such villages as Hoffman Estates, Rolling Meadows, Wheeling, Arlington Heights, and portions of Buffalo Grove.

Harper has made huge strides during its 25 years of existence. It has given many people who would not have gone to college, the chance to receive higher education. The next quarter century looks to be as bright as the past.

Local artist puts talent into print

KEVIN DELANE
News Editor

The print of William Ranney Harper College on display during the ball has been the subject of many questions. It seems some people were unaware of who had painted it, or of this background.

Tom Lynch, a local watercolor painter, is the artist responsible for the print that was shown during the ball.

Lynch, who resides in Arlington Heights, has an extensive list of commissions to verify his talent in the world of painting.

Among those magazines and newspapers that have carried Lynch's work include "Reader's Digest," "Field and Stream," "America's Art Magazine," and the "Chicago Sun-Times."

He also hosts his own television series, "Fun With Watercolor I & II."

He also has credentials in the Society of American Impressionists and Who's Who in American Art. In 1980, in Paris, France, at the American Embassy, he was rewarded with a one-man exhibition.

Lynch also was the artist selected to work on the 1990 and 1991 U.S. Golf Championships.

Lynch is an artist who tends to look more towards what he is going to do, rather than what he has done in the past. His paintings have been described as having elements of romanticism, expressionism and having the feeling of the painting of time.

He uses a "faux" technique which is used by many other painters. Painting has been a significant moment for Lynch, who takes time to capture the viewer and the viewer's heart.

Lynch has had his style described as capturing more of a person. His work, according to some, have a sense of realism that just begs to be looked at and admired.

He has also been written up in such magazines as "The Wall Street Journal" and "America's Art Magazine."

Lynch has made a limited edition of 300 signed and numbered color prints available for sale to anyone interested.

The overall size of the print is 17" x 21" and is limited to 300 prints. The price of the print by itself is $75, while a print matted and framed sells for $140.

Anyone wishing to purchase either variations of the painting can do so by ordering it at the school bookstore.

"Dracula" proves itself art Vampire adds bite to movie

Ann Kossman
Staff Writer

This is a very artistic film. Some of the scenes may not be ready for this kind of work with this particular cast. Mina Murray is a name and is not necessarily linked to several films, but is definitely linked to several films. Dracula (Edmond Keane) is the plays Mina Murray (see: Murray), the "innocent" schoolgirl who is linked to Dracula (Edmond) by what I assume is a reincarnation—after all, she is a spirit of his last wife.

A few scenes came from the main once when Keane (Reece) character was introduced.

Reece plays Murray's fiance who is taken prisoner in Dracula's castle in Transylvania when negotiating real estate in London, England.

I have been looking forward to this film since October of 1991. I am, admit, a follower of Gary Oldman. I loved his performances in Sid and Nancy (Sid) and Reservoir Dogs and Goldeneye (see: Goldeneye) and JFK (see: Harvey Oswald).

Everything he does amazes me. Now, I know that the played Dracula.

Even then, I didn't recognize him. His performance, again, flowed me.

If you drive by Woodfield, you will see the theaters advertising Dracula and who is killed? Anthony Hopkins. Don't be fooled. He is the narrator and Dr. Abraham Van Helsing, the vampire slayer. He helped pull the film together with the explanation, in the beginning and end which wasn't there until three weeks before the film opened.

The novel is set up in journal entries.

When James V. Hart sat down to write the screenplay, his main objective was to keep the story pure and to follow the book as much as possible.

Throughout the film, there are images of journal entries and diary writing.

The film itself has many many scene overviews to give the film that one kind of a feel to it. On Harker's voyage in Dracula's castle, when he reads a letter from Dracula, his eyes are superimposed in the sky, as if he could see it. I copy.

One of my favorite scenes in the film is right in the beginning.

Harker and Dracula are going over paperwork and there is a map of London on an overhead, projected on the back wall.

Each of the characters are constantly walking in front of it.

Dracula's shadow does not match his movements and it is obvious that it is not his shadow. (I assume don't have shadow). Dracula discovers a picture of Mina and is disturbed by the resemblance to his late wife. As a vampire, his shadow was to be a dark shadow.

Overall, I really enjoyed this film. (I even saw it twice), but the draw back were that the characters were not developed at all. Mina Murray was a schoolgirl, right?

The only way we know that is by one line, "our love" (the seven practices) (I copied) is held on the public's family story with the story.

Anyone under 17 really shouldn't see the film.

Rated it was a gooder than the best, the other half will give them night more. The film is violent, but there is reason for it. The life of a vampire is not pleasant.

I like to use the star system. I don't see thumbs. I use a system of how much you should pay for your ticket.

This is a full price ticket on my book.

WARNING: this is not a fast drive movie.

Vampire, legendary night creature who drink the blood of victims to replenish their own life substances. They're part of our culture. Those words of movie, numerous books, plays, music and even recent their film.

Our fascination with a vampire is associated with tales passed down through generations based on literary and documented case studies of unusual deaths where villagers tried to punish. Some people believe the vampire love is in part an elaborate way of accounting for unexpected deaths and other unusual events. Eventually these legends spawned fiction. In 1847, Thomas Prescott wrote "Vampire of the Vampire." By 1858 it was so popular that the 220 chapters was sold as a separate penny dreadful.

The classic literary vampire of Bram Stoker's 1897 novel, "Dracula" is based on Vlad Tepes, a 15th century Romanian prince from the Order of the Dragon (Dracul). Known as Vlad the Impaler, this sadistic ruler spared neither his own men, women, children, nor his enemies. He is responsible for more than 200,000 deaths during his rule in Wallachia. There is one recorded incident when Tepes drank blood. He was never viewed as a vampire. The vampire mentioned him as a great warrior and hero. Over the years, the story of Dracula has been reinvented for new audiences of fans.

Last week, a new film version of "Dracula" hit theaters across the nation. Screenwriter James Hart wrote the screen adaptation of "Bram Stoker's Dracula." "I had always thought 'Dracula' was the best movie ever in bottom half of a double bill that you went to see and the things in your neck weren't worthmark this is worth it."

Hart said, "I read 'Dracula' in 1977 when I was flying back from London to New York, and I was overwhelmed by what a brilliant novel it was," Hart said. "I could not understand why all the films had to portray this great piece of literature. He wrote an adaptation true to Stoker's novel. The characters are as Stoker wrote them, the period costumes and language are flawless and authentic to the Victorian period and simple plotting is maintained throughout the story.

In "Bram Stoker's Dracula," the new film by Francis Ford Coppola, Vlad the Impaler (Gary Oldman) battles the Transylvanians. After returning home, he discovers his wife Eliza (Wanna Ryder) killed herself when she falsely heard of his death. A vengeful Vlad renounces God, aligns with the devil and must spend eternity as a vampire. Jonathan Harker (Keanu Reeves), a young attorney, travels to Dracula's castle to complete an estate transaction. Dracula (Oldman) uses a photograph of Harker's fiancée, Mina Murray (Ryder), a reincarnation of Eliza. He must have her.

Hart, in an effort to make the story more appealing to viewers, made an addition to the story. "The license we took is with the love story of Dracula and Mina. In the novel, Mina is the last victim. There is no romance. It was a choice I made to make this more of a woman's film and have the female character drive the story as opposed to men just being men guys killing the vampire."

Back in England, the vampire's hollow visage shows the normal looks overlooking his new homeland and his intended, Mina. Her best friend, Lucy Westenra (Sadie Frost), a rich vamp shows Mina trying to change her for her three sisters. Lucy is the vampire's first victim, a sensual seductress who becomes fast food for the beast.

Vampire hunter, Professor Van Helsing (Anthony Hopkins) stalks Dracula to destroy the evil creature and free the world from darkness. Hopkins' portrayal of Van Helsing is brilliant. He is a craved hunter, a human being with a conscience instead of a perfect knight. He gives sensitivity, intelligence, sensuality and substance to a challenging role. His vampire is believable, likeable and desirable.

"Bram Stoker's Dracula," a spectacular film, is sure to become a cult classic. During my second viewing, people in the audience quoted dialogue and chanted.

EDITORIAL

Who decides what is "politically correct"?

In the Oct. 22, issue of The Harbinger, an editorial cartoon ran that caused some controversy. It showed different people in line at Student Affairs waiting to form their own club endorsing sexual preferences. Some people were apparently offended by it and responded by writing the staff to inform them of their dislike of the cartoon.

The persons responding did not appreciate the paper allowing the cartoon to run; they felt it was a negative message. But where is the line drawn? If one person is not allowed to express his or her own opinion, or has to be "politically correct", doesn't that create a problem in itself?

People are going to be offended in one way or another by something in life. Nowadays everything we say or do is critiqued as to how sensitive it is to an issue. A fireman is now a fireperson; a deaf person now has a hearing disadvantage.

The whole idea of having to please everyone with the right words just doesn't work. It is not wrong to call a manhole a manhole, nor is it wrong to call a person who cannot see blind.

This is not to say that derogatory remarks are accepted and appreciated. But they have the right to be spoken. Censorship on any level is unacceptable. No matter how much it hurts, one person cannot be allowed to dictate how another person talks. You can educate them about your beliefs and try to persuade them to see your side of an issue. But you have no right to expect them to cater to your beliefs all of the time.

Here at The Harbinger, we let students speak their minds on the opinion page. That is what it is called, and that is what it is used for. If someone is offended, we apologize. But in no way can we disallow a point of view to be spoken. If someone is offended by something in the paper, write us and respond to it, but please do not expect us to censor anyone. It is their First Amendment right to speak their minds.

COMMENTARY

Cartoon causes controversy

I am very disappointed by the editorial cartoon shown by your editorial staff in printing this cartoon in the October 22, 1992 issue. The cartoon made me feel that your editorial staff had not reflected the positive nature of this institution. Students, Administrators, Student Development, Health Services and the Administration of Harper College have all given in their support to this way or another.

I am also disappointed that your publication would only reflect the attitudes of a minority of the Harper College community. I wish that your editorial staff realized that although people are entitled to their opinions, they, as editors, have a responsibility to portray both sides of the issue.

This paper is obviously a bad representation of Harper College, and the attitudes in community institutions.

Michael Delan

[Ed: We at the Harbinger have given favorable coverage to both sides of the issue. If we have offended any one we apologize. It is not our intent to alienate anyone. But we also feel that everyone has the right to speak his or her own mind. We respect your judgment, respect ours.]

Reader corrects article

While reading the November 5th issue of The Harbinger, I was extremely pleased to find an article by Mr. Gangel's excellent. Mr. Gangel and Fish have been largely ignored by the news media since their existence, so this exposure to a college audience should have been a good thing to stimulate people with the message. Unfortunately, Mr. Steve Gangel's clumsy written style is so misleading that it is a bit far from the actual situation, and is largely unconvincing.

The misrepresentation begins with the headline, which claims that "Marillion are after 'Satan' their new song." Mr. Gangel's article is dated in 1991 to the present, Marillion have been a quintet. I'm aware that it is most unlikely that the fault of Mr. Gangel, but it was a big enough mistake that needed to be corrected.

Early in the text, Mr. Gangel makes reference to a Marillion song entitled "What Reason." The line in question is actually titled "What Reason," the song, get it? Whether there may have been an incorrect type, it is the last time I will let the author off without scorn.

While talking about the "poetic excellence" of Fish, the author uses the song "Tangerine" as an example, specifically the line "your garb is a deep red." This line actually should read "your garb is a deep red." I find it fairly amusing we've expected to respect the author's opinions of a lyricist when he doesn't even know what that person is saying!

These mistakes could have been corrected had it not been for the final paragraph. Mr. Gangel writes that since the release of "Seasons End" and "Holidays in Eden," it is "quite obvious the spark that made Marillion an excellent, influential band is gone."

Quite obvious? How dare you completely step on the integrity of one of the greatest bands of our time with me offering the slightest iota of support. In my opinion, the two albums in question rank highly in the Marillion catalog; the superbly written music and unchallenged meaningfulness are main stays when discussing Marillion. As for new vocalist Steve Hogarth, he does a damnation that Marillion had been lacking an actual singing voice! While I am still a die-hard Fish fan, his high pitched falsetto cannot compare to the voice of Hogarth. If Mr. Gangel disagrees with this view, fine. However, it is an unfair attempt to make a derogatory statement like that and offer no support for his claim.

Mr. Gangel also states that Marillion are no longer "innovative" since Fish's departure.

He may be inclined to know that Fish's last album ("Songs From The Mirror," not "Satan" as he wrote) will be comprised of cover songs he recorded as a trio. If that's the type of innovation Marillion are lacking, it's safe to say they're better off without Fish.

Mr. Gangel's article could have been a catalyst to turn people on to a great great band. Unfortunately, it was an embarrassment to a small, but loyal group of die-hard Marillion/Fish fans. A written apology would be appreciated.

Sincerely,
Luke Halpin

Part-time faculty run into problems

Adjunct staff seeks voice

Anne Watson
Staff Writer

Members of Harper's adjunct faculty are seeking the right to union representation.

And Harper's personnel department is currently gathering part-time employee records requested by the Illinois Education Labor Relations Board. That information will be used to determine if adjunct faculty have the right to seek union representation.

"We have somebody working on it now, but it is taking time away from other activities. In time coming hopefully in the near future," said Larry Beckus, Harper's director of personnel.

Before the Labor Relations Board was the starting date both the Illinois Education Association (IEA) and Harper College will receive the end of a motion to order to prepare their cases. At issue is whether the adjunct faculty will be considered long-term employees.

Harper's adjunct faculty includes over 100 employees from Jackson Community College, for example, and many others. In 1990 about the possibility of organizing for the purposes of collective bargaining.

"They started working with the Illinois Education Association (IEA) in an effort to establish an election for representation. In October 1991, the labor board recognized the adjunct faculty's petition for representative election, but Harper College objected to the petition on the grounds that adjunct faculty are considered "short term."

A representative of the teacher's union said the Harper College Handbook defines adjunct faculty as part-time faculty who have a work load of less than 24 contact hours or require a time work load per academic year, that is for full and spring semesters.

He also said that community college academic employees who provide less than more credit hours of instruction per academic semester are considered as adjuncts for the purpose of collective bargaining.

IEA-NEA objected to Harper's decision saying the adjunct faculty are not "short term" and are repeatedly rehired.

The issue was taken before the Illinois Educational Labor Relations Board and a ruling was issued in favor of Harper College.

IEA-NEA objected to the ruling and the board requested information from the personnel department before hearing the case again.

"This is a long arduous process to be recognized by Harper," said Duane Thomas, Learning Resource Center faculty, who is at Harper. "The adjunct faculty in the larger employee group on campus."

University personnel said there is more information.

"The contemporary struggle will be to have a representative elected," said Dr. Richard J. Beckus, Harper's director of personnel.

IEA-NEA gives the Illinois faculty a union in their first year and a union in their second year. In the third year, they are considered as adjuncts and are not eligible for union representation.

"If the board finds them eligible to organize, we will follow the order of the board to have an election and the employees' right to have an election is their choice," Beckus said.

Refuse to call the department would probably have the information some time in spring, 1993.

Stress greater on part-time teachers

Nearly 40 percent of college and university instructors work part time, creating academic and professional problems for the instructors and their students, the American Association of University Professors said in a study released in early November.

Problems associated with part-time faculty will continue unless two and four year institutions are willing to cut back on the use of adjuncts and treat the part-time faculty more fairly and equitably, said Mrs. Molinsky, a spokeswoman for the AAUP.

The AAUP study found that 32 percent of all faculty are in part-time positions, with the largest group—52 percent—teaching in two-year community colleges. In comprehensive universities, 20 percent of the faculty is part-time, liberal arts colleges, 12 percent, and research universities, nearly 10 percent.

"We know a combined problem," said Mrs. Beckus, director of the AAUP's research division. "The AAUP's survey of the part-time faculty was prepared by the report. The report indicates that most part-time faculty who are not full-time members of the profession, and the other is the professional way in which those institutions treat their part-timers."

Adjuncts, it seems, are getting in from both sides.

Molinsky said that while many may be effective teachers, they also have limited or no office hours. They also may not know about available programs on campus and won't be around long enough to give references.

Part-time faculty typically make much less than full-time professors, receive fewer benefits, lack job security and stability, have little input in course content and material and aren't asked to help set academic policy. The basic salary for part-time faculty is $6,300 per year, and salaries range from $900 to $5,000 per course in most institutions.

The AAUP also found that women, who hold about 33 percent of full-time faculty positions, make up more than 42 percent of the part-time faculty.

Many institutions rely on adjuncts because of budget cutbacks. "The part-time faculty is growing," Pratt said. "It's an explosive group within the profession, lacking job stability and opportunities for advancing. We have to stop the exploitation of the people if we want to stop the deleterious effect on the quality of education."

The study suggests that institutions limit their use of adjuncts to no more than 15 percent of the faculty, and give them access to tenure, promotions, long-term contracts and make fringe benefits such as health and life insurance.

Harper welcomes new instructor

The Harper College Speech Team will be assisted by a new speech communications instructor, Patty Katsanos, Schaumburg, who will assist Speech Team Director Marcia Literna, Barrington.

The team, in existence for 17 years and under the leadership of Director Literna for the past 14 years, will be traveling to various colleges and universities as well as hosting a seminar in February. Upcoming competitions will be held at Illinois Central College in Peoria, Northern Illinois State, Elgin Community and Cermak College in Iowa.

Katsanos arrived at Harper with eight years of coaching and teaching experience. She serves as President of Mid-America Forensics League and also has been involved in community theater. She hopes to continue that involvement with a local group. She would like to see more students of all ages get involved with the speech team and emphasize the value of it as a source of stress to team competition.

The Harper Speech Team consists of 25 students who compete in categories including Informative Speaking, Poetry Interpretation, Persuasive Speaking, Prose Interpretation, Impromptu Speaking, and Dramatic Interpretation. It is Director Literna's hope to increase student involvement and awareness of speech team activities and to involve more students in the program.

"This year with Katsanos's help, I will be able to give more attention to recruiting efforts at the high school level," she commented.

For further information about the Harper Speech Team, contact Marcia Literna at 307.3800, ext. 2041.

Patricia Katsanos, new SLP Prospect, recently won a month-long scholarship from Harper. (see story pg. 21)

HARPER STUDENT RECEIVES FIRST MATH LAB SCHOLARSHIP

Frederick Harper of Mount Prospect was chosen to receive the first Math Lab scholarship given at Harper College in Palatine. Fred is a full-time student at Harper and also works 20 hours a week as a mechanic at B&K's Plus in Arlington Heights.

The $500 scholarship given by an anonymous donor was specifically designated for a student who successfully completes math lab courses at Harper. Fred started at Harper in the Fall of 1992 and has continued to receive A's or better in math lab courses for his performance. He is also doing well in his other classes which include English, psychology, geometry and management.

"The Harper Math Lab has enabled me to succeed in mathematics, an area that has given me trouble in the past. The lab environment enables students to work directly with instructors and to use a hands-on approach," said Fred.

Gang differences almost non-existent

JENNIFER THOMASON
News Editor

Differences between street gangs from major metropolitan areas and gangs from the north-west suburban high schools are beginning to narrow.

The average age of gang members is between 12 and 30 years of age. However, these people are from affluent, middle income and low income households. Some of the hard-core gang members are born and raised in the suburbs. The racial makeup of these teens is White, Hispanic, Asian and African American," said Detective Michael Bradley, of the Hoffman Estates Police Department.

Apparently, because the members began at such a young age, it is logical to think that elementary school students would be involved in activities such as hanging around on a school "Kids carry knives to school all the time, and it is very easy to buy a knife at school. They cost between $10 and $15," an 11-year-old said. These knives are usually displayed among a group known as "cool kids," sometimes resulting in the intimidation of other students.

"Older gang members, however, are said to be coming from the city to set up safe houses to warehouse guns, money and drugs. The term safe house is used because people that live in these neighborhoods don't know the gang members. Therefore, the gang members can set up house anonymously," Bradley said. "Some of these older members are sometimes family members of younger gang members," said the teen source.

One of the initiation rituals used by inner city gangs is now being used by northwestern suburban gangs (Rick Stanes, Gangster Division and the Vice Lords just to name a few). One of the initiation rituals is called "Blowing It."

This initiation involves the participation of a group of gang members, usually 6 to 12 people, who deliver several blows to a potential gang member's body and head. "Thirty to the head and 50 to the chest," a teen source said. If the person falls down during the beating, they must get back on their feet until the beating is over. If the person gives down, or "beat down," before the specified time period is over, the person does not get into the gang.

Female have a choice in how they become gang members, however. They may choose to be initiated in the traditional or have sexual relations with existing gang members. Apparently, females are chosen to be gang members if they have a boyfriend in the gang.

Some teenagers are recruited into joining a gang because of fear, intimidation and because they feel the need to be protected," says Bradley. However,

Bradley and the teen source agree that some teens solicit the gang, and are not intimidated into joining.

"Some kids join because they want to be cool and to be apart of a family, and also think that participating is exciting and glamorous," Bradley said.

"The lack of parental supervision (no interest in what their kids are doing, two working parents and latchkey kids) and peer pressure has had an impact on teen gang involvement," said Hoffman Estates Police Chief Donald Cundiff. "It is thought that because they are not getting the attention they need at home, they might be more prone to becoming involved in gang activity."

In recent years, one of the myths shared among the police department and the community has been that there is no gang problem in our area," Cundiff said.

However, with the transferring of students from area schools and Chicago area schools, a gang problem has become more and more evident, and has been confirmed. An educational process has been taken on by the police department from area gang organizations.

These organizations have shed new light on how to organize specific activities other than types of clothing gang members wear. This new information gives the police department more information on how to combat gangs in the high schools.

The Hoffman Estates Police Department has started an outreach program to educate faculty, PTA, local businesses, parents as well as apartment complexes and community groups on how to recognize or interpret clothing, graffiti and gang signs. "We also talk to students at the elementary and high school level about prevention and drug testing programs," Cundiff said. "The community between these groups has been a very positive relationship, and the programs seem to be making an impact on stopping the infiltration of gangs in our high schools."

Family voted into Phi Theta Kappa

See Continued
Staff Writer

Like daughter, like parents. That was the situation with Andrew and Barbara Nies, and Lisa Nies. Each enjoyed the privilege of being inducted into Harper's Phi Theta Kappa, the international honors society for two-year colleges. They were three of more than 75 students honored at ceremonies on Friday, Nov. 20.

"I had taken some courses at Harper, but never really thought of getting a degree," Andrew Nies said. "Our daughter, Lisa, encouraged Barbara and I to transfer credits we had earned at the 1960s at USC. Now we'll get our associate's degree in business in May of 1993."

Daughter Lisa Nies received an associate's degree from Harper in 1985 and graduated from Illinois State University in 1987 where she majored in journalism. She has returned to Harper to take more courses. At the present she was qualified for membership in Phi Theta Kappa.

To qualify, a student must be a current full-time or part-time student, must have earned 15 or more credits and must carry a 3.5 or better grade point average," said faculty advisor

Larry P. Kent, associate professor of English and reading.

Kent stressed there were a number of activities members can enjoy.

The theme set by the national organization of Phi Theta Kappa is "Discovery and Environment." The local chapter is in the process of planning spring activities that will incorporate that theme.

"That list should be available at the beginning of spring term," Kent said.

The Nieses are 17-year residents of Hoffman Estates, where Andrew runs Nationwide Search Inc.

Barbara works in recruiting for Quilt Corporation in Evanston.

And Lisa works for Volunteer Systems International Inc. in Wood Dale.

Usually it's the parents encouraging the children to get the degree. In this case the tables were turned.

"I'm so proud of my parents," Lisa said.

More students lying, cheating

Course Persa Service

College and high school students admitted to cheating, lying and stealing in a two-year national study on ethics, a report released in November said.

The study, undertaken by the California-based Josephson Institute of Ethics, involved interviewing 8,965 young people nationwide and focused on ethics. Not all of the young people polled were at school at the time.

"There's a hole in the moral fabric and it is probably getting bigger," said Michael J. Josephson, president of the institute.

The report, he said, is indicative that the present 15- to 30-year generation is more likely to engage in dishonest and unacceptable behavior than other generations.

"Whether things are worse or not, they are clearly bad enough," the report said.

Among the findings from the survey:

- *Sixteen percent of college students and 13 percent of high school students admitted to shoplifting.

- *Twenty-one percent of college students said they would falsify a report if necessary to keep a job.

- *Sixty-one percent of high school students and 32 percent of college students admitted they cheated on an exam in the past year.

- *And, in the area of risky behavior, 25 percent of high school students and 42 percent of college students and un-

Telephone registration for spring to begin

Telephone registration for spring credit classes at Harper College will be held December 14-17 and January 6-7 and 11, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and December 18 and January 8, from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuition is $31 per semester hour.

To register by phone, students should call 708/797-1100 and be prepared to give their tax and security number, the course prefix and number, and the section number of the desired class, i.e. MGT 111 0-2. Hearing-impaired students may call 708/797-7600 (TTY).

Registration There is a non-refundable $15 application fee.

Board approves resolution

The Harper College Board of Trustees agreed to a levy resolution which would increase the amount of taxes necessary to be raised by taxpayers for the year 1992. The increase comes to 4.3 percent over last year which generates about 1 million dollars for the College.

The increase is in keeping with the parameters as decided by the Board of Trustees when they imposed their own 5% tax cap. The aggregate amount of tax estimated to be levied for the year 1992 is $25,923,480, an increase of $1,072,410 over last year's levy extension.

The money will be used to cover the expenses of increasing enrollment (a 2-3% projected increase next year) and the increased cost of supplies and materials. Because of new construction in the district, college officials predict very little effect on the bills of taxpayers.

By law the levy resolution was adopted by the Harper Board at least 20 days preceding adoption of the aggregate tax levy of the district.

Holidays are a time to be wary of alcohol

As integral as celebrations are to the recent tradition of the holiday season are the admonitions and lectures about the evils of drinking and driving. This is not another lecture or admonition—just some facts to think about before drinking and driving or serving alcoholic beverages to others. The information was furnished by the BACCHUS Club, Health Service and the Illinois Secretary of State's office.

- While a blood-alcohol content of one-tenth of one percent is the point at which the law in Illinois says that a person is drunk, tests show a blood-alcohol level of half that limit will lower alertness and impair a person's judgment.
- A driver in an accident involving injury or death is required to submit to a blood-alcohol test or face suspension of driving privileges.
- The fact that a driver is not legally drunk does not mean that driver is free from liability for the injuries or deaths of others in a traffic accident.
- Those who serve alcohol to drunk drivers involved in accidents can be sued for damages as a result of injuries to others, as well as injuries to the driver.
- A DUI conviction can inhibit a person's employment and earnings potential.

These facts are true throughout the year, not just during the holidays.

Sports stars are human too

SEY CHIDESTER

Sports builds character and discipline. How many times has that rationale promoting participation in sports been repeated?

If it is true, then it is becoming increasingly obvious that the type of character and discipline developed through sports is not compatible with destructive individual contributions to society. And after the nation's civil, the game sports have these discipline and character on the field. This is particularly true in the spotlight sports—baseball, basketball, football and, to some extent, hockey.

Yet the sports industry in the United States, television and often promotes behavior that really isn't accepted outside of sports. In no doing, it betrays the myth that sports build discipline and character. And that is true at the high school level as well as the professional level.

Steve Howe, a pitcher with multiple violations of baseball's substance abuse policy, is allowed to re-enter the game. Ervin Kalam and Will Chamberlain justify indiscriminate sex as "accommodating" their partners, an easy misinterpretation of self-indulgence. And Mike Ditka, after some aggressive behavior following a loss, proclaims himself a great motivator—confusing intimidation with motivation.

In a recent "Miguel" program on ABC, Deacon Mauley, the former Washington Redskins player and college player who admits to being functionally illiterate, said from high school on the superior athletes are treated with a sense of specialness. The athletes test the system to see what the system will tolerate.

On that same program, "Newsweek" sports columnist Frank Deford said the boys with the most problems with morality are those in team sports, at all levels.

There is evidence that these accusations aren't entirely true.

At least the morality problems aren't limited to team sport athletes.

And morality problems aren't limited to the discipline of sports.

But the failure of sports in the promotion of the generalized statement that sports build discipline and character, and in reducing unacceptable behavior.

Those who succeed in a sport do so because they develop the discipline, character and skills necessary to win in that sport. Often that involves aggressive, egoistic behavior that does not easily translate into success in society at large.

Honestly speaking

By Marvin Pines
Horbinger Guest Writer

"The check is in the mail!"
Do you believe it?
Probably not, but you say okay and hang up the phone. More than likely that paper check or refund check you were awaiting on is not in the mail. The "check" excuse is a small fib, one that everyone uses.

We've grown accustomed to these little lies. At social events, we listen to the most exciting adventures. Some of these stories may be true but the facts have been mixed with fiction. The more attention that is drawn, the more fanciful the story is likely to become.

It has been said that employers rarely check previous places of employment or call colleges listed on applications. If that is true then what is to prevent an applicant from fabricating his history by stating that he graduated from a prestigious college or has a Who's Who of previous employers?

Courtsrooms are filled with lies. Whiplash injuries become million-dollar lawsuits in the hands of oral lawyers who are partnered with doctors falsifying medical records. We're told these cases aren't likely to hurt anyone. After all, insurance companies have plenty of money.

Everyone knows that lying is acceptable. Businessmen lie to get ahead. Politicians lie to get votes. Lying has become a pandemic way of conduct everyday living. And, we are discovering that it has become easier to justify lying.

From infancy we are taught that lying is wrong and as children our perceptions are based on trust. As we mature the relationship has us adults are not always truthful. But we are told it is okay because everyone tells lies, including us. And little white lies never hurt anyone.

Lies do hurt. What happens when we discover a friend has lied to us? When the employer verifies the job applicant? When the business owner gets caught in his lie?

If people get caught in a lie it can ruin their reputations. In business employers have lost honesty in employees. If people are fair and honest they will get the clients over someone who is a known liar. Customers will return to the store with the reputation for being honest. Friends are not afraid to share with people they trust.

The cynical attitude Americans have adopted in their relationships reflects how people really feel about others and particularly themselves. Lies create mistrust and communication becomes distorted. Deception reduces our chances of our lasting in harmony.

Telling the whole truth is a hard concept indeed with. Perhaps we feel there are instances when harsh facts cannot be told. But if we continue to justify dishonesty and lying, because everyone is doing it, then we are on the wrong track. Truth has to be a personal conviction. Dishonesty serves only the self-interest of the liar. If we cannot come close to honesty we cannot come close to our true selves.

Realistically speaking

By Leo Costello
Horbinger Guest Writer

How can you tell when a lawyer is lying? When he moves his lips.

That cynical joke rings true to many. But it's not only lawyers who have this unsavory habit of dishonesty. Many successful businessmen are also known for their dishonesty.

Time, Newsweek, U.S. News & World Report, Fortune, and other examples have provided enough evidence in the last five years to indicate lying is a part of the American way of life.

A few professors say lying in the legal profession is pervasive and the rules of the game: submit reform. Business ethicists say the business community is swimming in lies. Other experts recommend lying on employment applications when selling the truth about health history would eliminate the applicant. Still others recommend lying to preserve personal relationships.

And who really believed Clarence Thomas when he had no recollection of Roe v. Wade?

Maybe Mr. "No New Taxes," President George Bush. Even what arguably has become our national pastime—football—seems to reflect societal attitudes toward life. Plays are designed to deceive the defense, to make the play seem like something other than what it is. A player is expected to try to score a pass off the ground to make it look like a reception. Fooling the officials is part of the game too.

The winners, generally, are the ones who do the best job of deceiving their opponents. The winners are praised and the losers are punished.

Indeed, the United States is a nation of liars. And with legal and economic pressures governing personal incentives as to lie, the truth is not only difficult to recognize; those who tell the truth subject themselves to contempt and sanctions. Lies escape. How can people survive by always being honest in a society that rewards deception and punishes truth?

Experts agree that people lie when it's in their own best interests to lie. To do otherwise is to expose oneself to questions of mental instability. What job applicant is going to admit to a condition that would eliminate the applicant from consideration for a position (even though it wouldn't)? Gaps in employment history, mental personality jobs and history of a serious illness such as cancer are used as reasons to reject applicants.

What lawyer is going to recommend his client say, "Yeah, Judge, I murdered the man," when there was no witness?

We may wish it weren't so, but lying is our society's part of the game. Sometimes it's necessary to survive, to keep a job, to get a job or to save a relationship. It's necessary to step out of jail, to be elected and maybe even to be appointed to the Supreme Court.

Recognition of this situation is not approval of lying. But, despite all the platitudes and Pollyanna thinking, realism knows it is necessary to lie in our society. Denial of the reality fails to recognize the truth of the situation.

Holiday safety tied to personal responsibility

We are making progress! Last year only 64,500 persons died in highway crashes with 22,084 (about 34%) of these in alcohol-related crashes. The proportion of drivers 16-20 years of age who were involved in fatal crashes and were intoxicated dropped from 31% in 1982 to 21% in 1990, the largest decrease of any age group during this time. A great improvement over the late 60's and 70's when the United States routinely reported highway traffic deaths above 90,000 each year. From 1982 to 1989, 189,000 Americans lost their lives in alcohol-related traffic crashes—that is equal to one death every 22 minutes.

Traffic crashes today are still the present single cause of death for every age group between 5 and 34 years—greater than death from cancer, drugs or from other drugs or from wars or from disease. Of these, one half are caused by excessive consumption of alcohol combined with climbing behind the wheel of a car, motorcycle, truck or boat.

The odds indicate about 2 in every 5 Americans will be involved in an alcohol-related crash at sometime in their lives. In 1980, not only were 22,084 lives lost to impaired drivers (one-third of whom were victims) but an additional 362,000 people were injured.

There are no exact measures or statistics for drugs and driving because the only true test for drugs in the body is a blood sample which is difficult to take along the side of a highway. Even seemingly harmless over the counter drugs that cause drowsiness can be deadly combined with driving. The reality is that combining alcohol and other drugs and driving is deadly. Avoid tragedy by abstaining or designating a driver. Have a member of your group agree to drink only non-alcoholic beverages and then drive the rest of you home. Be the designated driver when it's your turn.

Also, be sure to use drives away from your party impaired. Offer a selection of non-alcoholic beverages (plenty of food, and activities that give everyone a chance to pace alcohol consumption. Have a non-drinker drive your impaired friends home, call a cab for them (the expenses is nothing compared to the cost of a ticket, lawyer's fees, court costs, car insurance increase and time off from work to appear in court), or have your friend spend the night at your house.

These small actions on your part may prevent unnecessary injuries. They even may save a life. Any way you look at it, you win and your friends win.

Exhibit your commitment to unimpaired driving this holiday season by trying a red ribbon car. A vehicle has a red ribbon car available outside the theater at 1 Building and at the following locations: Health Service (AMS), and the Career and Personal Development Center (AMS).

Be one on for safety and sobriety

Tips to make the holiday season safe and fun

Drinking and driving destroys more lives than any other drug. In the 16-to-24 age bracket, drunk driving causes 8,000 deaths and 48,000 injuries a year. To avoid you to "the rule on for safety," we offer the following tips to party for:

*Designate A Driver. At the beginning of the evening, decide who will stay sober and drive.

*Eat Before Drinking. High-protein and carbohydrate foods like cheese and meats are especially good. They stay in the stomach longer, which slows the rate at which the body absorbs alcohol. It takes one hour for the body to absorb 1.25 ounces of hard liquor or 5 ounces of wine or 12 ounces of beer.

*Drink Non-Alcoholic "Mock-Tails." Mock-tails such as "Virgin-Marys" (spiced tomato juice with a celery stalk) or "Cape Cod Cider" (cranberry juice and 7-up with a twist of lime) offer exchange of pace from traditional alcoholic drinks.

*Use A Non-Intoxicated Ride. Such As: Friends, Family, or Your Own Car. The body absorbs alcohol faster when mixed with carbonation.

*Remember When Mixing Drinks. People are less likely to drink excessively when standard measures are used.

*Do Not Force Drinks On Others. Or Rush To Refill Glasses. Some people may not wish to appear rude and will accept drinks they do not want.

*Respect Everyone's Right To Drink. If a person doesn't want to drink, don't push the issue.

*Stop Drinking Alcohol About Two Hours Before The Party Is Over. Give your body the opportunity to absorb the alcohol already consumed. Drink coffee or other non-alcoholic beverages and eat some food.

*Take Car Keys Away From Anyone Who Is Intoxicated. Give this person a ride home or a place to sleep—or call a cab.

*Protect Yourself From Drunk Drivers. On the road, if you suspect a driver is drunk, follow these recommendations:

*Be prepared to take quick, evasive action.

*Stay as far away as possible—pull over and let the driver pass you. Do not attempt to pass the drunk driver; he or she might swerve into your car.

*If the car is headed toward you, pull to the right, stop, hook your horn and flash your headlights.

*As soon as possible, notify the police or highway patrol. Provide a description of the car and the license plate number. Be safe and keep safe this holiday season!

Holiday "Feast of Carols" to be presented by ECC

Press Release

Feast of Carols, a Holiday gala of traditional music of the season, will be presented again this year by Elgin Community College. This annual, joyous program will be presented Friday and Saturday, December 4 and 5.

The performance will begin on Friday at 7 p.m. and on Saturday at 8 p.m. A dinner theater package is offered on Saturday, with the dinner beginning at 6 p.m.

ECC's Show Choir and Steel Drums, a brass ensemble and the Elgin Choral Union's Arts Chorus will participate in the musical celebration. Many traditional carols will be performed, in addition to Holiday music from other countries.

The program will feature both serious and light music for the Season, including "Deck the Halls," "Up on the House Top," "Little Drummer Boy," three French Christmas songs by Francis Poulenc, "Sing Ding Merrily on High," "Joy to the World," and "We Wish You a Merry Christmas."

Show Choir will drop by a distribute candy canes to the children.

The show will take place in the lounge area on the lower level of building A, 1700 Spartan Drive, Elgin. The dinner will be served in the Community Room, also on the lower level of building A.

A Holiday menu has been planned and will be prepared and served by Luccaroni's Restaurant, Elgin. The meal will begin with cranberry apple soup, followed by mandarin orange walnut salad. The entrée will consist of chicken in a puff pastry on hericelli apple rice, with mushroom Duxelle and honey glazed carrots. Peppercorn St. Nicholas will be served for dessert.

Valet parking will be available for the dinner guests. Cars should be pulled up under the flag poles on the northwest side of building A.

Both the Community Room and lounge will be festively adorned with Holiday decorations, including a Christmas tree in the lounge. A huge lighted wreath will be hung in the window between the lounge and Founder's Court. The courtyard and the main entrance to building A will be bright with Holiday lights.

Feast of Carols is designed for family entertainment and offers a family rate of $10. Individual tickets are $4 in advance or $5 at the door. The dinner theater package is $25. Tickets and dinner theater package can be purchased by calling the ECC Student Life office, (708) 880-1576 until Thursday, December 3, at 4 p.m. Large groups should call for group rates.

Chadmandu says 'I am outta here!!!'

Craig Hester
Harbinger Sports Columnist

Of Holiday Greetings and Wishes, THE FINAL COLUMN OF CHADMANDU: DA SPORTIN' FROG!

Yes, friends and neighbors, you see the words printed above you in bold black, but you can't believe your eyes!

This column has been around as long as the College permanent classes, faint and fleeting, but I am going out for my own reasons, and I will take my picks (privately satisfied) with me!

But I won't leave you, faithful reader, without a little something to fervor upon this holiday rush. Yes, it's my very own SPORTIN' FROG, WISH LIST, 1992! You can see what I, Chadmandu, would really like to get this year, and I hope that Santa won't be a Pissed fan, or a racist, because if I've been bad or good this year, at all.

A very respectable, competitive, non-frustrating pro football team (the one we already have is broke, please send me a new one).

A spot at actual nuclear war head designed to wipe out certain sports, owners in Indianapolis and New York (I wonder, that's job, it might cause some controversy, but who really likes those burgers anyway?)

Some of the New York Times back which they probably stand by over there in South Bend and for football and basketball games of really big importance.

The keys to Nike Town, along with unlimited state credit.

A chance to own my men from this team in any sport, and slump down in an unlikely location (hockey in Florida? Basketball? outdoors in the Yukon, anyone?)

A Basketball team that doesn't stop on sight after they're picked to win the pennant (either one of the two we already have is replaceable).

A recording of Duke's Great Train Robbery (a sure hit to go platinum).

Tickets of any kind to any of the Bulls' games (standing room only on the roof of the Stadium is OK by me!).

Better TV coverage of pro soccer here in America (since we're holding the World Cup in 2 years). Peace and goodwill to the men who play hockey with helmets, a big lump on the side of their heads if they don't.

A Newspaper that comes out more than once every full moon cycle.

So that's it, not too much to ask from the guy with the jelly heart put of the North, eh? I guess it's time for me to go.

No, no more picks for me, as I don't know when this article will come out (maybe by the time they finally build the Liberty Arm building on campus).

My final record was 9.6, by the way, which isn't too bad, but I'm a little bit of a person (I'm a 10.0). So, take him said for time in this column, if you are one of the wonderful 12 people that do read this paper, don't shed a tear for me, and I will always be.

CHADMANDU: DA SPORTIN' FROG!
See Ya!

Harper wrestlers ready for rumble to repeat reign region

Pete Rissau

Again, more good news coming from the wrestling team. The 1991 regional champion will present an unbeatable team for 1992. Coach Steve Lovelace returns a number of talented wrestlers and has a fine group of freshmen to work with.

"If none of these freshmen really come around, we could be in trouble," Lovelace said. "We should be a contender for a Midwest championship. We have quite a few state place winners coming in."

Lovelace knows he will be getting the talents of sophomore Ben D'Ambruso, who dropped only three matches last year. D'Ambruso will compete at either 142 or 156 pounds. Phil March, who Lovelace says is looking better than ever is back at 167.

Two competitors are coming off injuries. Paul Babin (134) returns after a broken hand, and Brent Geiger (158) is back off of a knee problem.

"If he had a hurt his knee, he would have been an All-American," Lovelace said of Geiger.

Jim Stone and heavy weight Mark James are also returning. Lovelace and assistant coach Dan Leporetti's recruits include a local star, Matt Hayes from Rolling Meadows.

This freshman was a two-time state place winner. The Hawks will also have some familiar names in the program. At the 142 weight class is Gary Mitchell, brother of former national qualifier Rob Mitchell. At that same weight is Steve Bucky, brother of former Harper All American Eric Bucky.

More brothers are at the 150-167 class. Twins Jerry and Larry Popp join Harper after meeting at the high school level. Other wrestlers to watch are Frank Hammer, Jason Stry, Mike Purniak and John Glushko.

"We'll be one of the top ten scholarship schools again this year," Lovelace said. "We were fourth last year, which was a baby step forward, but that's not too bad."

Your 'Eye on the Hawks' reflects on first first semester as editor

Joe Walcott
Harbinger Sports Editor

At the last issue of the semester comes a year-end. I'd like to take a moment to reflect on what my first semester as Harbinger sports editor.

I walked into the Harbinger office at the beginning of this semester ready to ask if my help would be needed as a sports writer (as I was last year).

By the time I'd left the office, I was a staff writer. I was a new concept for me. After all, the only job of a sports editor has been given in my life was writing the Harbinger as I was what to do for an hour or so.

The way I saw it though, as a new way to help out a resume that would be a good idea. I was a new concept for me. After all, the only job of a sports editor has been given in my life was writing the Harbinger as I was what to do for an hour or so.

I had nothing to lose, but some sports editor and a little pride (if things didn't work out, my way).

When I began, I had the idea that this would not be much of a time consuming job. After all, the only change I would need to do is direct a few people making money, and put their words onto a page.

Simple enough. I found out that taking on the responsibility of a sports editor was a good deal of my work. I had also planned to go to as many of the Harper sports events as possible this semester. Due to newspaper work and other time demands on me, I was unable to attend any (next semester, however, that will change).

I've decided to lower my other demands so that instead of working on the paper in my spare time, I will work my schedule around the work I need to do. If you've read any of my columns before, you know that I've been trying to improve this page all semester but have not received as many comments from outside as I had hoped.

This will also change. As next semester begins, I will start giving reasons to send me your thoughts.

How?

I guess you'll just have to read me a letter. "Eye on the Hawks" is (find out).

Happy Holidays!!

Women's basketball team blessed with talent

Pete Rissau

Newspapers, but some very talented talent returning to this year's women's basketball club.

Sophomore guard Keri Oliver will be the key player on coach Jennifer Jensen's first club. Oliver was third in the MAC Conference in scoring a year ago. Her 17 points a game average was helped along by her 76 rebounds.

pointers. She issued in an NEC record 41 three point shots in league play. In five games alone, Oliver scored 314 more points including a team-high 35 against Kalamazoo. In that win, the Schumacher graduate had a school and conference record eight 3-pointers. Oliver was a second team All-MAC selection.

"I think that she's not afraid to shoot," Jensen noted. "I'm not sure if she's a shooter, but she's a shooter."

at the point position. She also likes to take it outside."

"Starting point guard Deanne Lambardo also returns. The third team all conference selection averaged eight points a game but freshman sophomore guard had a school and a record point. Jensen said. "I think it's a good sign that she's not afraid to shoot," Jensen noted. "I'm not sure if she's a shooter, but she's a shooter."

sophomore averaged nine points a game. "She's a small forward and can post a low or shoot outside," Jensen said. "I think her attitude. Keri Rabin was an all area player at Conant High School for a number of years and a knee injury ended her high school career. This freshman will make her return to the court in a Harper uniform.

"She's a strong player and has some very good moves," Jensen said. "The doctors have cleared her to play."

Karen Kresse adds size to Jensen's lineup. Kresse is a transfer from Elgin Community College. Harper will also get some help from what Jensen called "all-time" team. Yuka Minakuchi joins Mimi Takamatsu on the club. Returners Michelle Novak and Jessica Ramirez complete the roster.

2 officers arrested in campus theft

Department recovers $2,500 in stolen audio-visual equipment

See Coverage
Harberger guest writer

The Public Safety Department arrested two of its own this week as a result of increased surveillance to stem a pattern of increased theft on campus.

Arrested were part-time Public Safety security guards Steven Davis, 26, and Paul Meyer, 35.

The men, both from Elgin, confessed to stealing more than $4,000 of audio-visual and computer equipment from the college. Meyer, who had worked for the college for two years, was arrested on Monday, Jan. 25. Davis, an employee for six months, was arrested on Tuesday, Jan. 26.

During the arrest process, about $2,500 of the stolen property was recovered.

The arrest warrant was issued by Assistant Judge Michael J. Pope of the Cook County Circuit Court.

Bond was set at $5,000 each. The men are scheduled to appear in Cook County Circuit Court on Feb. 10, 1993.

The men faced the standard pre-employment check, which includes checks of references, driver's license, as well as clearance through the FBI computer criminal history check.

Supervisor of Public Safety Kevin P. King received information that led to the arrests.

"Harvest investigations solved this crime," King said.

King emphasized that the men arrested are part-time employees. Harper's Public Safety force numbers 25, with about half of the force working part-time.

Full-time officers are authorized to act just as any police officer in Illinois and are required to complete a 400-hour State of Illinois Police Academy training. Part-time officers are required to complete 40 hours of on-the-job training.

Administrative Services Vice President Vernon F. Munk said the college had stepped up its surveillance of college buildings because of a distinct pattern of increased theft on campus during the past six months.

"This doesn't solve all of the thefts," Munk said. "We will keep up the increased surveillance."

Harper College annually publishes crime statistics. King said some of those statistics will be available next week.

"I'm looking forward to helping Student Senate serve you better involved and help make a difference." Charles January, president of the Harper Student Senate

"We the executive branch are looking to fill a number of new positions to encourage students to get involved." Lisa Smith, treasurer of the Harper Student Senate

"I'm here to help you in any way I can. Have a good semester." Dean Jones, student trustee of the Harper Student Senate

"We will address your issues to the best of our abilities, so we welcome your input." Art Weston, vice-president of the Harper Student Senate

Student leaders encourage input

The current Harper College Student Senate is moving to get more students involved in the decision making process this semester.

Four of the leaders of the senate are calling upon all Harper students to get more actively concerned about the events that take place at Harper.

Charles January, senate president, Art Weston, senate vice president, Lisa Smith, senate treasurer, and Dean Jones, student trustee, are all asking that more students give their input at Senate meetings.

Due to lack of concern shown by students, the senate has been left to assume what they feel are popular decisions.

This has led to a great deal of haggling and stagnation among senate members at recent meetings.

Meetings are held every Friday at 4:30 p.m.

Harper appoints academic affairs VP

Tom Fusan
Co-news editor

On January 19, 1993, Harper College welcomed Dr. B. Edmund Dolan as the new Vice President of Academic Affairs. He was the unanimous choice of the Advisory Screening Committee on the October 29, 1992 meeting.

As vice president, Dr. Dolan will be the Chief Academic Officer responsible for planning, coordinating, and directing the overall functions of the instructional area of the college.

"I am looking forward to working here at Harper," Dolan said. "I found the job very attractive."

The college has a good reputation, and the faculty and programs are highly thought of. I just hope I can live up to the college's expectations.

Dr. Paul Thompson, Harper's President, and the chairman of the committee that selected Dr. Dolan, is very pleased with the choice.

"Dr. Dolan was the most suitable person for V.P.A.A.," he said. "The committee put together some criteria to which each candidate had to make, and Dr. Dolan was clearly the best of all the candidates."

Dr. Dolan is not new to this field. He comes to Harper from Bellevue Community College in Washington, where he served as faculty member, teaching psychology, division chair, where he headed up the academic programs, and then as the Dean of Bellevue.

Part of Dr. Dolan's role here is to get in touch with the students to help make college better and easier.

"I want to do a lot of listening, and find out how to make academics better for the students," Dr. Dolan said.

According to Dr. Thompson, Dolan also wants to spend a lot of time with the faculty and staff, assessing improvement for Harper.

"I would like to find out about the instructional programs," Dolan said. "It's a challenge, but as long as I am contributing to the quality of the education, I know that I will do well."

Harper Celebrates Black History Month Featuring Danny Glover and Felix Justice in Lecture

The appearance of superstar Danny Glover at Harper College in Palatine on Wednesday, February 10 at 7:30 p.m. marks the beginning of the college's celebration of Black History Month. Several events and activities are planned. Glover, famous for the movie series "Lethal Weapon," and actor/producer Felix Justice will discuss the words of Harlem poet

Langston Hughes and artist Wright Luke. Martin Luther King, Jr. in Building M. The first member of a cappella group, Regency, who built itself at the "Temple of the 90's" will perform in concert at 12 noon, Thursday, February 11 in the Student Center Lounge in Building A. The concert is free and open to the public.

Accompanying historical display with written materials and memorabilia from Eliezer Muhammad, Malcolm X, Langston Hughes, Jesse Jackson, Robby Ruhl, Dan Butler and others will be open to the public for viewing from February 8-11 on the college library, Building F. Minneapolis Gospel Sound rounds out the events for Harper's celebration of Black History Month with a concert at 7:30 p.m.,

Thursday, February 11, on the Building J Theater. This ten member group mixes traditional gospel with rhythm and blues for the sound of Steve Wom. Tickets for the Glover/Justice and Minneapolis Gospel Sound performances are $4 with discounts for students and senior citizens. Call the Harper College Box Office for tickets and information at 708/397-3000, ext. 5547.

College Students Cope With Changing Families

KAREN NEUBAUER

College Press Service

Sorry, Dad (Dad, he's the "Loser to Heaven" traditional family figure), even in the '90's, and college students many of them coping with complex and complicated or extended families, don't comprehend the concept by the time a teen reaches college, or her parents may have divorced at least once, and the knot ties, and some have said "I do" three times.

Stepmothers, stepfathers, and stepbrothers are a growing part of college life, and some mental health experts say students are paying an emotional price for their parents' "family law." "I believe that there is a great deal of pain in people who come from divided and blended families," said Loretta B. Lee, a mental health counselor at Mississippi State University near Starkville. "They sense that their parents' allegiance is divided, and they are dangling without a good support system. Less and college age students often feel betrayed by divorced parents and complain that they are caught in the cross fire of a relationship that is never peaceful."

"People who share children are never really divorced," Lee said. "Children in college have not given their need for supporting parents, and they grieve their losses." Often a second marriage can become more strenuous than the first.

"I see many new stepmothers who are jealous of college age daughters who are close to their dad," she said, "And I often see the natural parent under a great deal of stress and anxiety because they are trying to make every one happy."

While some college students have been dealing with stepfamilies for years, others have to face the breakup of their families while they are in school. "Often students go into a tailspin, and feel helpless to deal with the situation," said Joyce Brothers, a nationally known psychologist who studies family and marriage issues.

"You would think it would not affect them much, because they have started independent lives, but that is just not the case," she said. She described the dilemma of the college student caught up in a family breakup as having "one foot at home and one foot in the world."

Students can feel deep anger at parents who use them as pawns against their partners. Brothers suggested that students take advantage of campus counseling centers as a source of temporary support, and not forget to talk with friends during the breakup of their family.

"It's very unexpectedly difficult time. I kind of said you," she said, noting that people are more concerned with the younger children in the family and don't think about the emotional needs of the college age children.

The paper highlights the demands that students call home frequently during divorce to reassure themselves that family members are doing well.

Brothers also said college age children often do not feel loved toward a new stepmother or stepfather, and the best they can expect is to establish a friendship.

College students suffer enough stress without the additional burden of parental divorce and family problems, said Joseph Sanderson, project director at the Institute of HeartMath, an independent research center in Torrance, California. The purpose of a functional family, he said, is to teach young people how to self-manage.

"Young people out of broken families need to understand that, at the beginning of their adult lives, maturity is about emotional and mental self-management, and without that, no external success will ever offer balance, fun or fulfillment."

The last two decades have seen divorce rates rise, and many of today's college students are children of baby boomers who have opted not to stay in abusive or unsatisfactory marriages, experts say. There also is greater public discussion and awareness of the trauma that arises from broken families.

During the presidential campaign, President Clinton openly discussed his relationship with an alcoholic, and about stepfather and how those childhood events shaped him as an adult.

Some parents, stung by a narcissistic divorce, have opted to go solo. In fact, in 1990, only 26 percent of families where one parent worked and another parent stayed home full time, according to a report from the Center for the Study of Social Policy in Washington.

Further, 64 percent of all children and teens living with one or two parents did not have any parent at home full time in 1990, the report said.

Add to this complex picture the greater share of children and teens who are living in households not headed by any parent, or in "risk families" where a child or teen lives with a parent in a relative's house.

"The numbers are dramatic," said Tom Jost, director of the Center for the Study of Social Policy. "The numbers of working single-parent families, and the two-parent families with both working are a huge percentage. We need to stop pretending families are one way when they're not. Colleges ought to change with the times."

Despite forces revamping the family concept, some ones to be college students say they would prefer the stability of the "traditional" family's breadwinner dad and full-time home maker mother. Last year, a group of college-bound high school students surveyed by the National Association of Student Councils voted 56.96 in favor of the "traditional" family.

Army offering specific choices

Qualified applicants who enlist in the United States Army may now be guaranteed a two-year assignment at a specified location or unit of choice within the United States.

A prospective enlistee may also select one of a number of jobs that carry a cash enlistment bonus of up to $50,000. These critical jobs are in such fields as combat engineering, field artillery, air communications, transportation, military police, military intelligence and supply management.

"When one enlists a young high school graduate finds a job that allows him or her to work in a location of their choosing, pays a bonus for accepting the job, pays off outstanding student loans of up to $55,000, or provides up to $25,000 for college," said Lieutenant Colonel Robert M. Riley, commandant of the U.S. Army's Chicago Recruiting Station.

The Montgomery G.I. Bill plus Army College Fund provides qualified soldiers money for college. This inclusion assistance pays $17,000 for a two-year enlistment, $22,800 for a three-year enlistment and $25,000 for a four-year enlistment.

Qualified applicants who have at least one year in college and carry unpaid student loans may select any one of over 250 jobs in the Army and have up to $55,000 of those loans paid off by the Army.

"When an organization can offer a good salary, excellent skill and leadership training, plus a bonus of several thousand dollars," said Riley, "that job offer is very tough to beat."

For more information on the Army's enlistment incentives, call 708/926-2640 for your local Army recruiter.

Harper receives praise from ICCB

"William Ranney Harper College is an innovative and accountable provider of the programs and services to the community. It is taking a leadership role in offering educational excellence," comments Illinois Community College Board Executive Director Cary Lewis. His comments followed an ICCB sponsored Accountability Conference attended by over 350 community college representatives.

It was noted that Harper College has positioned itself for "doing business" in the 1990s by establishing a Global Trade Development Center which provides resources, information, and data to approximately 500 local industry and community contacts. In order to increase the use of such technology and to improve productivity, Harper has developed an automated admissions system, degree audit system, assessment or course placement system, and has established the use of computer generated data matrices for processing transcripts at a total long-term savings of over $190,000.

To support students in an academic difficulty, the college implemented the Standards of Academic Performance Program which creates individualized student success contracts. These are tools which help students restructure and strengthen their academic skills.

The college has also established a proactive drug prevention program, Drug Alcohol Wellness Network (DAWN), to coordinate drug and alcohol awareness activities that promote healthier lifestyles. The long-term goal of DAWN is to integrate these functions into the campus community at both the individual and institutional levels.

The state board commended the William Ranney Harper College board of trustees, faculty and staff for focusing their attention on productivity and accountability. It also stated that "the members of the ICCB recognize and appreciate the role of this college and its reputation for quality education and responsibility exhibited by the College, and are enthusiastic about working in partnership with them to guarantee Illinois taxpayers outstanding, cost-effective and quality educational opportunities."

Elgin hosts graphic exhibition this month

Elgin Community College will hold its North Annual Exhibition of Graphic Design during January and February.

The exhibition features original computer-generated art work produced by students. The highlight of this year's show is an art work the promotes ECC's instructional programs.

The exhibition will be held in the Modern Gallery in the lower level lobby between buildings A and B on ECC's main campus, 1700 Spartan Drive, Elgin. The show will begin January 20 and continue through February 20. The Gallery is open Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. and Saturday 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. The public is invited to attend free of charge.

Transferring made easier during Planning Day

"Will my credits transfer? How long will it take to get my degree?" Students attending area community colleges and universities who are considering a transfer to Ranney College will find these and other questions answered at the Roba Campus Transfer Planning Day on Wednesday, February 24 from 11:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.

Those interested in receiving personal, one-on-one program advising, transcript evaluation and financial aid information are welcome to attend. The Albert A. Roba Campus is located at 2121 South Cawthorne Road in Arlington Heights. For more information on Transfer Planning Day or design program offered at the Roba Campus, call 637-9206.

Harper offers seminar to companies seeking quality and success.

"J.I.T. Achieving Success," is a seminar for individuals who are responsible for implementing a Just In Time program that concentrates on elimination of problems and improving profitability in the business environment.

The seminar, offered by Harper College and led by Al Deacon, CFM, project manager of J.I.T. in the V. Mueller

Division of Baxter Health Care Corporation, will be held on Wednesday, February 17, 9:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. in Building C, Room 103, the Palatine Campus.

Deacon will present an overview of J.I.T. and discuss the benefits of the techniques that support the goal of gaining a competitive advantage in the marketplace in 1993. Total quality control, employee and supplier involvement, the "pollution" of group technology and set-up reduction are some of the topics he will present.

The tuition for the seminar is $97 per person with a fee of $25 for materials, coffee and lunch. A discount is available for groups of three or more. To register, please call 708/797-3377 and specify course number LWW086 001. For additional information, call 708/3000, ext. 250.

Harper fashion design students take top honors

Students from the Harper College Fashion Design program swept the awards presented by the Fashion Group of Chicago Foundation's Annual Midwest Student Designer Competition. Of the $21,000 in prize money awarded Harper students won more than half. There were four first place students entered in the contest with one cash prize awarded per category.

The following Harper students won the cash prizes in their categories: Gail Benedict, Wheeling, $15,000; Children's Wear, Zofia Czarniecki, Schaumburg, $15,000; Menswear, and Jenny Weiler, Schaumburg, $3,000. Separates, Anitra Larson of Schaumburg placed three prizes, $3,000, $2,000, $2,000. Fashion Group Foundation is a Past General Designer, and a $15,000 Pariah Fashion Institute Scholarship is for transportation. Harper student Marina Smith, Lake Zurich, was a finalist in the Children's Wear category.

For more information about Harper's Fashion Design program, contact program coordinator Sandra Clark, 708/797-3000, ext. 2319.

Different courses offer parental help

Workshop presented to help parents sort through financial aid

Parents with college bound students may be confused over changes in the financial aid application process. To help families understand the new process, and to help them complete the necessary forms, the Admissions Office at Ranney College, 7000 West Division Street, River Forest, Ill. (708/306-2490), will sponsor a financial aid workshop of Tuesday, February 9 at 7:30 p.m. in the Maybach Dining Hall.

The workshop is not limited to students who have applied to Ranney, but is open to all prospective and current college students and their parents.

"It's a service we continue to provide to the community," says Hollisgren Schmidt, dean of admissions and financial aid. "We will take parents step by step through the new financial aid form. The workshop is especially helpful for families sending a new daughter off to college for the first time."

The workshop offers individual assistance in completing the new Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), the form required for all federal aid in 1993-94. Families are encouraged to bring their 1991 tax returns so that the FAFSA can be completed this evening. The FAFSA is used to apply for scholarshipships, grants, loans and on-campus employment.

Reaumeaux are not required for the workshop and admission is free. For more information contact the Admissions Office at 708/324-0000.

Safety seat the subject of free class for mothers of young children

The Cook County Department of Public Health is offering free child safety seat classes for pregnant women and parents of infants and toddlers in suburban Cook County. The next class will be held on February 8, 1993 from 10:30-11:30 a.m. at the Rolling Meadows Police Resource Center, 2550 Algonquin Parkway, Rolling Meadows, Ill.

The class will teach participants proper usage of child safety seats. Additionally, participants will be able to purchase a child safety seat through this program for a small fee.

"Using a safety seat is not enough. They must be used properly to be effective," said Frank J. County Board President Richard P. Carter. "A national Highway Traffic Safety Administration survey shows that about one in four safety seats is seriously misused."

Other interventions have indicated that as many as 90 percent of safety seats may be removed to some extent.

Research shows that when used properly, child protection devices are 71% effective in reducing fatalities and 67% effective in preventing serious injuries.

Large parents to take advantage of this service. Accidents do not discriminate. This is a class for everyone," added Pridgen.

For more information or to register for the class, call Cook County residents should call 708/445-2530.

Did you know that you have the power to change the world? No, I'm not talking about joining the Peace Corps (which is great) or voting (which is great), but something that just about everyone in America loves to do—SHOPPING!

Did you realize that each time you buy something at the store, you are "voting" with your money? Your buying power gets you noticed by multinational corporations that are more powerful than most governments in the world. Money (wealth) has been the primary motivational drive in our American culture for a long time.

When you have money, you can influence others to behave the way you want them to. The point I'm getting is is you can change a company's policy by threatening to stop buying products from them. Why would you make such a threat? The reasons are explained in a book called "Shopping For a Better World", put out by the Council on Economic Priorities. It covers products from alcoholic beverages to yogurt and companies from Dow Chemical to Earth Care Paper. The book identifies the companies that make all the products on our supermarket shelves.

Many people are not aware that when they buy groceries, they are also helping to fund companies that sell cigarettes or have contracts with oppressive governments.

Each company is rated on its policies concerning: charitable contributions, women's advancement, minority advancement, animal testing, disclosure of information, community outreach, involvement in South Africa, the environment, family benefits.

Special "alert" symbols call attention to companies with military and nuclear weapon contracts. The book also calls attention to good features like companies that donate one percent of profits to groups working on peace issues.

With this information, you can support companies that are doing good and withdraw support from companies that disagree with your views.

Mailing addresses of company presidents are located in the back of the book so that you can write to explain why you won't be buying a company's product anymore.

This book can be a guide to shopping with both your head and heart. "Shopping For a Better World" is available at bookstores and some libraries. Start making a better world for tomorrow by shopping smartly today.

Marines looking for a few good pen pals

To Whom It May Concern,

I have promulgated this letter to solicit from your institution of higher learning pen pals to correspond with U.S. Marines assigned to my command.

Having personally contributed to Persian Gulf War effort from 15 August 1990 to 23 May 1991, I can categorically state that the hundreds of thousands of letters sent to "Any Ser-

Again, I find myself in a position whereby I, as well as 750 Marines assigned to my command, will be deploying to Somalia within the next few days. Our anticipated duration of deployment will be in excess of four months, as the present Somali situation remains unclear.

Many Marines kindled wonderful long distance friendships from the medium of letter writing. The loneliness experienced by service personnel can only be likened to that of an incarceration for extended periods of time. Of course, many of my Marines have friends and family in the United States and will no doubt be corresponding with them also. I have found that even the most ardent of correspondents sometimes fall short of the mark when trying to satisfy the insatiable thirst for mail. One venue for releasing the frustration caused from being assigned overseas in an isolated environment is sending and receiving mail.

In conclusion, please pass this humanitarian request to your colleagues, specifically, those of the female persuasion, who can find a few moments to drop a line now and then. Thanking you in anticipation of a favorable response.

Yours truly,

Renate von Keudell at helm of German Department

General Salton
Assistant Business Manager

December brought a change in the German department here at Harper-Henry Moore, who worked for 23 years at Harper. All of them in the position of head of the department, retired and left a vacancy. Over 100 applications were received and from them the field of candidates was narrowed down to a select group of 26 after a formal review and personal interviews of the 6 most qualified candidates, a difficult choice had to be made. In the end, Part time Harper instructor and Faculty advisor of the German Club, Renate von Keudell, was chosen as the candidate that best met the exacting specifications of the Harper College Language Department. Born in Lubek, Germany and educated in Lubek, Hamburg, London, and Paris, Ms. von Keudell has worked for a number of years in The ESL program, the French department and the German departments here at Harper. Additionally, von Keudell works with Siemens Corporation as a language instructor and an informal cultural advisor.

Her immediate plans are to make gradual changes from the program already in place by Ms. Moore. Her end goal is to make the German language more accessible to students through an expanded offering of lower level (101 and 102) classes with balanced con-

Preschool celebrates Bezile

The preschool staff, parents and children gathered together on Saturday, Dec. 12, to celebrate the opening of the new school building.

The preschool has established a sister school relationship with the Sine River preschool, and the children in both schools have exchanged presents, letters and stories.

The Belize Day celebration gave participants the opportunity to learn more about the country.

The program, planned by preschool teacher Susan Rosenbloom, was an enjoyable and informative.

Biology professor Jack Gallagher showed slides of the animals and plants of Belize.

The Consul General from Chicago, Edwin Smiling, showed the children and discussed the meaning of the language.

A folk singer, Nelson Gill, entertained the group by singing songs and teaching Belizean dances. The celebration concluded with some tasty food native to the country.

The preschool parents and staff have collected many toys to send to the Sine River preschool. Several items have also been donated to send to the Director of Social Services in Chicago for her use in workshops she presents to women there.

Club a hotbed of controversy for area

Discoveries teen dance club leaves different impression on different people

Rita Coates
Harbinger Staff Writer

Discoveries teen dance club has been the hot spot for controversy since its opening. Unfortunately, it has also been the hotbed of controversy. Teens love it, parents hate it and local police fear it.

Discoveries was a joint venture between Robert Larus and Annette Arfau who wanted to give teens somewhere to hang out, similar to the dance of the 1950s.

A nice bar stands in one corner, a few pool tables are scattered in the other—a kind of lounge setting. That is until one notices the immense dance floor in the center. More than 2,000 teens jump and grind to the latest hip-hop, funk and alternative tracks here each weekend.

Arfau said teens come from as far as Indiana and Wisconsin to dance at Discoveries, which attracts a clientele ranging in age from 14 to 21.

"Discoveries is a great place just to hang out and dance. I love it here," said Kym Garcia, a regular at the club.

However, the opinion expressed by Garcia and her friends is far from the one shared by police and local residents. The controversy among them is that Discoveries is a threat to the community and, more importantly, a danger waiting to happen.

The residents primary concern is the noise level from the club. Nearby residents say that on weekends the noise is so loud that their houses vibrate. One resident who has taken action is Beatrice Lewicki. She has circulated several petitions and spoken out at several city council meetings in an effort to close the club.

"The noise on the weekends is horrendous. I can't even sleep with the house shaking and all," Lewicki said.

She currently has a case pending in the circuit court. She is suing Discoveries for the replacement of her Lladro figurines which she said fell and broke due to the noise from the dance club.

Another concern of the residents is the litter in their neighborhood. Homeowners behind the mall where the club is located say portions of the place often park in front of their houses and leave garbage.

"These damn kids think it's all right to throw their stuff on my property," said Albert MacCombs, whose house is located immediately behind Discoveries. "I've come down some mornings and seen the whole block covered in garbage. I've found beer bottles, underclothes, you name it."

Arfau maintained that these things are unavoidable. "Yeah it's bad that the kids throw stuff all over, but I can't control what they do outside the club," he responds to a question about the noise level. Arfau said a dance club is not going to get any business if it's not loud.

Some parents have gone as far as to forbid their children from going into the club. Mary Triggory of Elgin thinks that the club is a bad element.

"Lynn (Triggory's daughter) is only 14 and she goes in there and gets involved by 19 and 20 year old guys. I can't trust the management is going to see that nothing happens," Triggory said.

Sharon Rothchild, Triggory's neighbor, shares these sentiments. "I just think the age gap is too wide," Rothchild said. "I mean, are 14 year old kids mature enough to consort with people who are 21?"

Lynn says that Discoveries is a great place and she doesn't think anything really bad would happen there. "I mean all the people that work there are really nice some and my friends," she said.

While all these concerns seem to take great notice in the community, the Elgin Police Department has something far greater to worry about: gang violence. While until now there have only been a few isolated incidents, the police still are concerned for

The Harper College Dance Company is looking for new members. Anyone who enjoys dancing and is willing to work hard is encouraged to join.

The Dance Company focuses on jazz, ballet, and modern dance. They perform several times during the year in football and basketball half times.

Right now, the company is preparing a basketball half time that will be performed on February 6.

Also, plans are being finalized for a dance show to be held on April 23 and 24.

Anyone who is interested in joining to participate in a class. Class is held from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. every Friday in the dance studio, building M, room 240.

If you would like more information, contact Candy at the Harbinger office, building A room 307.

Exhibit displays Harper history

As part of the year-long Silver Anniversary celebration of Harper College on Palatine, there will be a traveling exhibit, highlighting Harper's history and its role in the Harper district. During the month at which the exhibit is featured, the friends of Harper and representatives of the Harper district will hold a Harper night at the community library.

The Harper exhibit will be at the Elk Grove Village Public Library, 10001 Wellington, during the month of February. The "Reconnecting With Harper" exhibit will be held on Tuesday, February 9, from 7 to 9 p.m. Invitations are being sent to all Elk Grove Village residents who graduate from Harper over the past few years. The program is open to all members of the community who would like to find out more about Harper College.

Harper College President Paul Thompson will join other college representatives to bring residents information about Harper College and to ask about the expectations they have from their community college. The Friends of Harper will discuss Harper's new Alumni Association.

There is no charge for the "Reconnecting With Harper" presentation. Please RSVP to Mary Jean Pfeiffer at Harper College, 706/397-3000, extension 2400. Light refreshments will be served.

There are two kinds of heart attack victims.

The quick and the dead.

A heart attack doesn't have to be fatal. Getting to a hospital quickly can make the difference between life and death.

New life-saving techniques are now available to treat heart attack victims. But they have to be given early.

You know the symptoms. An uncomfortable pressure, squeezing or pain in the center of the chest. Pain spreading to the shoulders, neck, jaw, arms or back. Shortness of breath. Lightheadedness, fainting, sweating or nausea.

When you feel these symptoms, it's critical that you get to a hospital quickly. It could save your life. For more information, we or call your nearest American Heart Association.

"Beauty and the Brief" comes to Harper campus

The Chicago Bar Association will stage its annual Christmas Spirit Revue, "Beauty and the Brief," at Harper College on Saturday, February 6, Palatine Campus. This event is co-sponsored by the Northwest Suburban Bar Association.

The annual show, which dates back to 1924, uses parody to comment about people and events that have caught the attention of Chicago courtroom TV, the site of a third airport, Britain's loss of family, Ross Perot and the leaky Chicago River.

The approximately 106 lawyers who perform in the show conventionally rewrite their scripts to include late breaking news and events. Mia Farrow, Queen Elizabeth, Christopher Columbus get their share of witticisms.

Tickets for "Beauty and the Brief" are $15 ($20 for Harper students and senior citizens) and include a buffet dinner beginning at 6:30 p.m. in the college dining hall of Building A.

The performance begins at 8 p.m. in the building J Theatre.

Call the Harper College Box Office at 708/397-3000; extension 2547 for tickets and information.

Glover and Justice to speak during Black History Month

The appearance of superstar Danny Glover at Harper College in Palatine on Wednesday, February 10 at 7:30 p.m. marks the beginning of the college's celebration of Black History Month. Several events and activities are planned. Glover, famous for the movie "Lethal Weapon," and screenproducer Felix J. Jones will dramatize the words of Harlem poet Langston Hughes and civil rights leader Martin Luther King, Jr. in Building M.

The five-member cappella group, Regency (who/but/what/why/Temptations of the 90's") will perform in concert at 12 noon, Thursday, February 11 in the Student Center Lounge in Building A. The concert is free and open to the public.

Academy Award-winning actor Laurence Fishburne will perform with his band, The Roots, on Thursday, February 18 in the Student Center Lounge in Building A. The concert is free and open to the public.

Harper's celebration of Black History Month will culminate with a concert at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, February 18, in the Student Center Lounge in Building A. The concert is free and open to the public.

Tickets for the Glover/Justice and Regency performances are $5 with discounts for students and senior citizens. Call the Harper College Box Office for tickets and information at 708/397-3000, ext. 2547.

This week Harper athletes will be competing in long season records up in preparation of the closing of the season.

Starting off the week against the College of DuPage is both the Men's and Women's Basketball teams at home. Thursday, Feb. 4th, they will be traveling to Truist College. The following Saturday, the Women's team will be at State Valley at 2 p.m. Back at home on the 9th both teams will compete against Joliet. All women's games start at 5 p.m. and Men's night starts at 7 p.m. (unless otherwise stated).

Playing away for the next three games is the undefeated Hawk wrestling team. First they travel to North Central College. Then on to Midwestern Community College that Saturday. A week later they will play at the College of DuPage.

Harper College will be hosting the NCAA Region IV Tournament for wrestling on the 20th of February. Move to center!

Now on to the Men's and Women's Swimming. They play away and then at home against the College of DuPage both times. They will be there on the 20th and at home on the 1st (Feb.) at 2 p.m. Followed by a game on the 9th against University of Illinois, Circle, and Illinois Institute of Technology.

Starting Spring Season training starting on February 2nd (Monday) will be the Men's and Women's Track teams. The team is still looking for meet throwers and sprinters and women's sprinters and jumpers. If interested contact Coach Renee Zoller at: 2464 M228.

Men's basketball loses big to MVCC

Jim Williams
Co-Sports Editor

The Harper men's basketball team's 14-0-0 conference record could only find two good things about Tuesday night's game against Moraine Valley Community College.

It ended and there were no injuries suffered.

Following in the footsteps of the women's team who also played against the Hawks, the Hawks' women's basketball team at the nation's just 30 minutes earlier, the men's team was unimpressed by Moraine Valley (14-5-2 in conference) 80-17 in front of approximately 50 fans on their home court.

In the first half, Sam Darwish of the Hawks led the team with 11 of their 15 points until point Darwish ended up being the high scorer for Harper by the end of the game with 16 points. Brad Cowan had a big second half and finished for the Hawks with 15 points.

Non-overlooked, the game was even able to produce a light hearted moment or two. Near the end of the game, the Hawks accidentally had six runs on the court after a time out. Nobody officiating even noticed until one of the players tried leaving the court.

Moraine Valley was led by 6'7" Chris Ellis, a first team all conference player who scored 24 points. According to Harper head coach Ron Cregger that was actually a positive thing considering Ellis averages 31 points a game. Cregger admitted quite honestly after the game, "He didn't even work up a sweat."

The two biggest problems, according to Cregger, were offensive rebounding and an old problem for the team, passing into heavy traffic. One more aspect that cannot be overlooked was the fact that the Hawks' seven players just could not compete against the 14 player army. Moraine Valley brought to the game.

It was a tough contest, and the players' faces showed it afterwards, but Coach Cregger simply stated the only thing to do, "just go back and work on it tomorrow."

Women's Basketball

"our defense is a pressure type defense. We've started using a trap ping defense, also."

It's the offense that scores the points for the team, but, lately, it's been the same old story. According to Jensen, the team has not been patient with its shot selection and have not been using the all important shot clock to their advantage.

The team's chemistry is also an important factor in success. Returning to the Lady Hawks this year are Deanna Lombardo and Keri Mow, who will be taking the leadership roles this season. The team also welcomed Kelly O'Connor, a transfer student, who scored 31 points last week. If not, then coming on three-point shot. Uniqueness is a word that describes the team this year, which includes two Japanese players, one Indian player and a mother.

"Each is their own unique, different person," said Coach Jensen. The competitive for the Lady Hawks is tough in the MCC. Coach Jensen explains, "Moraine Valley and Truist are returning almost a whole team. They can play 12-15 a player a game, whereas we can get about eight players a game." However, the coach emphasizes that the win over Moraine Valley was a big lift. "We knew they were beatable," she said. "We weren't playing well in the first half, but it was our defense that kept us in the game." Jensen added, Upcoming contests for the Women's Basketball team include away games at South Suburban on January 31st and Truist on February 4. In between those two games, the team has a home game against College of DuPage on February 2.

■ 12 The Harbinger, January 28, 1993

Two champs, two chumps, and two misplaced birds

LAN FERSON
Harbinger Sports Columnist

A great post once said "The times they are a-changin'." With that thought, let's look back at the last year. A lot can happen in 365 days we can focus on something that represents an infinitesimally small percentage of the year (1992 Sports).

That's still a fairly large chunk of information to shift through, so we'll limit our area of reflection to major events. We could make a list, maybe a year in, but different events mean different people. The most person from New York might not give the same weight to the Bulls' repeat as someone from Chicago.

Magic Johnson played in the NBA All-Star game and the Olympics. My only issue in selecting him is his second retirement from the NBA. My respect is his desire to leave any way that he can, and I greatly respect his decision to remain. Why couldn't his Olympic teammates speak up for him?

Next we have two championship basketball teams. The Chicago Bulls showed the league how basketball is played and grabbed their second crown. I'm not a Bulls fan, but I love to watch a well-played game and they played so many. They look little rough now, but they're a few screws and get back on track for a 3peat. The Duke Blue Devils are the other team we'll look at. They had to rely on a little more luck than was necessary for DuRoi, but it was a valid reason. I don't see them going to the Final Four without major upsets.

We move to two men you'd want you'd want to keep on your "good side." George Foreman qualifies for our retrospective by virtue of getting through the year without serious harm. Look for him to take one more shot at the championships, then bow out, possibly for good. I can't say permanently because he is such a fighter, in and out of the ring. The second half of our greatest two-some is Riddick Bowe. I don't see him as a long-term champ so let's hope he gives Big George the shot he deserves.

We can't forget our national past time, Hockey. I'll admit that's Canada. We'll let's name that one household. An American team took our northern neighbor's previous Stanley Cup for your number two while the Blue Jays got revenge by winning the first World Series ever. The Toronto Maple Leafs won the rubber match with an "accidental" invasion of the Maple Leaf flag.

Next week we'll look forward and make a few bold predictions for 1993 and beyond. For now I'll end with a guess at the final score of the Super Bowl. The Cowboys are favored by a TD, but the Bulls will play pretty tough through, by a score of 19-17.

Division champion wrestling team begins season perfectly

Jim Walcott
Sports Editor

As the defensive region champion, Harper wrestling team rolls through their season, the idea of defeat is not on the mind of anyone. In a six-team dual tournament held at Harper in front of approximately 80 fans this past Saturday, Harper handled themselves well to set their undefeated record at 7-0 in dual meets and to win six matches, pinning out of two tries.

The victories of the day were not even close. Harper beat Fort Park (Monday) 45-9, Oakland (Saturday) 49-9, Trossen 36-11, and Belleville 33-12.

The day did have its not so glamorous moments, however. One very scary moment for the team came during Steve Bailey's 142-lb match for the day when he dislocated a finger. Another scary moment occurred during Phil Mack's 135-lb encounter. After a few minutes on the mat, Mack's opponent, who was not a member of the team, was taken to the hospital.

Saturday's match between the

time that season the Hawk's took care to make their competition. On January 9th, the team opened the season with the Harper Invitational, which they easily won over eight teams. During that invitational, only two Hawk wrestlers failed to advance to the finals.

In addition to the domination by Harper on their home turf that day, Pat McGowan (134) won the outstanding wrestler award of the invitational.

The next weekend, Harper continued to cause problems for their competition at Waterman, Michigan.

The Hawks once again walked away with first place honors from the meet, leaving 14 other teams in their dust. A Harper athlete again took the outstanding wrestler award at this invitational, this time Phil March (158 lb).

Oliver Nazarene University was the next victim in Harper's path before the Harper Duals, falling 28-21 in a dual meet on January 20.

According to head coach Norm Lovelace, "Most of these young wrestlers are as fresh as our state place winners or champions and should just continue to get better." While the team's performance is always possible, it is highly unlikely to improve the team's performance.

Harper Sportsweek contributed to this article.

Women's basketball team wins

Chris Peterson
Harbinger Sports writer

Sportsweek's coverage of women's basketball continued with a first and second year players, the team's record in conference games and three losses in conference.

The team started slow, but has picked up the pace a little, according to the coach.

The team's on the winning streak. Last week, the Lady Hawks defeated the conference's top ranked team, Moreau Valley, in a thriller, 50-54.

The current record stands with nine wins, six losses, and three ties.

The team started slow, but has picked up the pace a little, according to the coach.

They say you need to have a strong defense in order to keep you in the game, and that's what the Lady Hawks have. "Our defense is what keeps us in the game and allows us to win games," stated Coach Jensen.

See Women's Basketball on page 11.

Eye on The Hawks

Your "Eye on The Hawks" is back again and, as I promised, there are some definite changes on the Harbinger's sports page. The most definite change, if you haven't noticed already, is the addition of Heather Canfield, my co-editor. Heather transferred from McHenry County College, where she was a journalist in journalism and was to be the newspaper's first sports editor. She came to Harper to continue her major, because there were no more journalism classes left for her to take at MCC.

Heather and I will be adding more features to our sports pages. As the lone sports editor last semester for the first time I did not have the know how of how to report writing the time by myself or put out the quality sports page I wished by myself.

Now we're ready to work. If you wish to find out the other big changes we'll make to the sports page, you can read Heather's column in the next issue, because quite frankly, I'm not to tell you more would not be respectful.

The way our columns will work after this issue is quite simple, and with any luck, quite entertaining for our readers. Heather and I will find something in the sports world we have different opinions on each week. This should be the problem, of course, because we do have our areas of disagreement.

At the very least, I could easily give my opinion regarding the superiority of Cubs fans over Sox fans. This would really be an unfair thing to talk about.

Heather probably has her own "clashes" or "clashes." We could also easily agree about which E & D is better. I should be allowed in which gender's locker room.

Sometimes on the same subject, concepts which could be discussed in whether one gender has superiority over the other in the sports reporting business.

If any body reading this column has more ideas for us anytime this semester, we would be more than willing to accept your ideas. "Just drop off your ideas at the Harbinger Office A-367."

One On One

Jim Walcott
Sports Editor

As the winter sports season progresses, we here at the Harbinger Sports room are planning changes. One of the major changes is myself. I will be joining Jim Walcott as co-editor of the sports page for pages 11 and 12. I will be bringing my experience and ideas from McHenry County College's paper and from my job at my hometown paper in Wisconsin.

I am fully aware that my partner here has mentioned that he would be making changes when he became the sports editor last semester. He told I give him that. Now did he succeed or not? Please let me know, your opinions help the outcome of future issues here at the Harbinger.

As I said before, but that time we mean it, we are going to follow through with these changes, along with many more. One addition will be athletic and coaching biographies. Each week we will be interviewing athletes and their coaches. Anyone who knows of someone who should be covered in our new sports biographic section should contact one of us in the Harbinger office.

New this semester will be the coverage of our student athletes. Along with more in-depth coverage of sports related events.

We also are welcoming any Hawk athlete to be a guest on the sports page, both college and inter-collegiate. If you would like to do a place center, either Jim or I.

Other small additions will be more photographs coverage and an expansion on the graphic events. Such as a photo layout of "The Week In Sports." Upcoming events in games will be covered in an article called "A Step Ahead."

Another addition, as mentioned in Jim's column, we are going to be coming at you with our differences in the sports field in which locker room we may agree to some aspects of the subject that we have our limitations.

As Jim has mentioned before we are still and always will be welcoming all opinions, helpful hints, or just plain criticism. If there is anyone who would be willing to be a sports reporter can do so by coming to the Harbinger office, A-367, and filling out an application.

Student loans facing overhaul

Report indicates government savings of 4.8 billion over four-year period

Jason Gouras
Washington Correspondent

The federal government could save $4.8 billion over the next five years by providing loans directly to college students if the system were implemented properly, a General Accounting Office report said.

Such a plan could make it easier for students to understand their payment schedules and loan availability by eliminating banks and guarantee-like Sallie Mae that act as middle agents for government loans.

However, financial aid officials have said they don't think the Department of Education could effectively manage such a program.

The government implemented a pilot program to test direct lending last June. However, both the GAO study and pilot program could become more of President Clinton's hope, but campaign promises to scrap the entire (see loan on page 3)

Financial aid centers could have less impact in the near future if the government follows through with a new student loan program.

Senate implements new branch

House of Representatives to help break constant gridlock in meetings

Kenneth Dillard
Editor-in-Chief

The Student Senate has submitted a new branch of government by creating a House of Representatives.

Designed to break the stale fight among the Senate, the House of Representatives will be the first step in consideration of bills that are pending outstanding government.

Charles January and I came up with an idea for the House," said Art Weissen, Student Senate vice-president. The House will consist of 18 members, with meetings every other Friday, reports of the Student Senate meetings.

"The vice president of the Senate will be head of the House of Representatives," Weissen said. "They will also be two officers to help lead the House."

One officer will be from the legislative branch and will be the Speaker of the House.

The other officer will be from the executive branch and will be the main assistant to the head of the House.

Qualifications for the House of Representatives are being kept to a very minimum.

Any student who is enrolled for at least one credit hour each semester is eligible to be a member of the House of Representatives.

The House will form all bills that come before the Senate," said Weissen. "They will help to keep the Senate organized and keep break gridlock."

The House will make all results (see how it is presented to the Senate).

Recommendations for approval of bills will happen the following week at the Senate meetings.

Positions are still available, so 18 incoming students who wish to be a member of the House of Representatives to attend the next Senate meeting if they are interested," Weissen said.

The next Senate meeting will be Friday Feb. 5, 1992, at 1:30, in A315 board room.

Contact the Student Senate at 397-3000 ext. 2244 for more information.

House the new path to Senate

No longer will students be allowed to directly run for a seat in the Student Senate. Instead, only students who are able to be nominated to run," said Art Weissen, Student Senate vice president.

"Things just have not been as organized as they could have been,"

Job market not as upbeat as hoped

John Weissen
College Press Service

Despite an improving economy, college graduates face a mixed job market this spring.

Many job opportunities may be possible, but expectations for salaries are lower, according to a leading employment report.

"There is a slight anticipation that the new administration and Congress will put programs into place to stimulate the economy," said Victor Linguist, associate dean and director of placement at Northern Illinois University in DeKalb, Ill. He is the author of the 1993 Northwestern University Linguist Endowment Report.

The 4th annual survey of business and industrial firms nationwide found that corporate America is "relatively optimistic," but that the outlook for 1993 graduates is only slightly better than 1992, the worst market for graduates in the past 20 years.

Most of the 258 businesses surveyed are cutting back on recruitment on college campuses and are reducing hiring in several disciplines, including most non-engineering graduates.

"Students will have to market themselves more effectively and have more flexibility," Linguist said. "They must realize that their 'dream job' may be at another location or at a level less than desired."

Some other findings of the report include:

Students with degrees in computer science will find an 18 percent increase in job opportunities.

"Demand for students with master's degrees is increasing, with job openings falling nearly 66 percent."

As for the bachelor's level, 47 percent of the firms will need more personnel, but 62 percent will need fewer new employees. For students with master's degrees, 42 percent of the firms will hire more graduates, but 34 percent will hire fewer students.

A majority of the firms conduct drug tests and many check education and past employment references. Many firms are now using psychological testing.

Students with degrees in engineering can expect salaries 2 percent higher than 1992 graduates. Liberal arts, 1.3 percent higher, and mathematics/science, 1 percent higher.

Patrice Scherz, director of the Collegiate Employment Research Institute at Michigan State University in East Lansing, found in a national survey that employers are projecting a decrease in the hiring of college graduates for the fourth straight year.

The results were reported in Michigan State's 22nd annual national survey, which laid the most serious problem facing campus recruiters in the limited number of minority and female job seekers, and the need for more applicants with work experience.

Crashback students also have unrealistic expectations, the report said.

Among the major findings:

"Employers are becoming more selective about their new hires, and some firms won't consider applicants with a grade point average less than 3.0."

Both as a liability, while competitive nationwide, is better in the Southeast and North Central, and more competitive in the Southwest, South Central, Northeast and Northwest.

"The qualifications employers are looking for in college students include flexibility, team work, skills and the ability to provide customer satisfaction. Computer knowledge is considered mandatory, the report said."

"The estimated beginning salaries for 1993 college graduates range from $40,175 for chemical engineers to $19,114 for journalism majors. For students with master's degrees, the average is $35,299, and for Ph.D.'s, $37,755."

College graduates also are competing for jobs with people who have work experience but have been laid off or are switching companies or careers.

During the past five years, 240 of the 140 surveyed by Michigan State have lost an estimated 24,454 salaried positions.

Linguist estimates that that firms in 1992 hired 55 percent of new employees from people with previous job experience, and 46 percent of the firms now hire candidates to personnel to fill professional positions.

Judge Ilana Rovner keynotes women's history week

The first women judge on the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, Ilana Diamond Rovner, will be the keynote speaker for Harper College's Women's History Week on Monday, March 8, 1993, at 8 p.m.

Judge Rovner most recently served as a U.S. Circuit Judge, appointed by President Bush after eight years as a U.S. District Court judge. Born in Latvia in 1936, she and her family narrowly escaped the outbreak of World War II and the Holocaust. She has committed herself to a career of legal and community service.

Judge Rovner's presentation, "One woman's Odyssey," will open the 14th annual Women's History Week at Harper College. On Tuesday, March 9, 1993 there will be presentations, slides and lectures highlighting the 1893 Exposition in Chicago with a focus on the Women's building and its Legacy. Women's Sports: Fred Raskin's Booklets will be open for Wednesday, March 10, 1993. Five-time Olympian in track and field Willye White will be featured, along with films and a panel presentation. Women Over 40: Chang This project is focused on improving career development and job placement services to students with disabilities and is part of a larger project that the University is managing. Harper was selected as one of two year schools in the Great Lakes region. The project at Harper has four major goals:

To interview former students about their career development and placement experiences in order to identify common supports and barriers.

To evaluate the current service-delivery systems in our schools and communities in order to identify gaps.

Harper Center for students with disabilities links with career center

Two departments at Harper, the Center for Students with Disabilities and the Career and Personal Development Center, will be actively involved in a project with the University of Wisconsin-Madison for the next two years. To provide Harper staff and area highschool staff with information about student outcomes, current needs and methods of improving our service delivery.

To investigate and develop plans for a computerized job matching/job tracking system which will provide useful data to facilitate placements and to track outcomes.

To help facilitate this project, Harper will be collaborating with the Work Opportunities Resource Coalition (WORC), a community based group comprised of business leaders, community agencies, public schools, parents/students and community and legal representatives whose mission is the "creation of an ongoing organized network to address community labor needs and employment needs of those with disabilities and developmental challenges."

These opportunities are exciting with the spirit of the Americans with Disabilities Act—that greater numbers of people with disabilities will drive work and create alongside their able-bodied neighbors and coworkers. ## Corrections

The Harbinger apologizes for last week's mistakes: The photo of Art Weston and Dean Jones were printed incorrectly and should have been in each other's position. The country is called Belize, not Belize.

King: they were security guards

St. Charles Harbinger guest writer

Public Safety Supervisor Kevin P. King told The Harbinger Tuesday he objected to the use of the term "officers" in the headline of a story about two security guards arrested last week. The headline appeared in the January 28 issue of The Harbinger.

"It's happy pyramism," King said. In a phone interview on January 27, King emphasized that the two men who were arrested were part-time employees and that they were security guards. He wanted to clarify that they were full-time officers who receive 400 hours of training at the State of Illinois Police Academy.

While the subsequent article clearly made the distinction, the headline said, "2 officers arrested in campus theft." A Harper press release on the arrests referred to both part-time officers and full-time public safety officers. The release also referred to those arrested as public safety security guards.

Loan: several problems

current student loan system. Members of Congress have criticized the current system for being overly complex, a problem that has contributed to defaults. The high costs of administering the Federal Family Educational Loan Program, formerly the Stafford Student Loan Program, have been denounced as well.

"A box set (of the plan) set direct loans as an opportunity to simplify the loan process and reduce costs by eliminating several financial intermediaries," according to the GAO report, which was released in late 1992. Direct lending would advance the need for commercial lenders, private agencies and secondary markets.

Under the direct loan plan, several departments of Education and State would act as agents for the Department of Education and take out the loans, while the government would service and collect the loans "premium" by contracting with private firms.

The GAO also employed focus groups of financial aid administrators and business officers to learn on the proposed direct loan program.

Some participants said they thought by eliminating the guarantors and financial lenders, students would receive "current and consistent information about their loan obligations." Students often complain about the conflicting information they get about the loan status, amount and repayment schedule.

"Most focus group members, however, said they had little or no confidence that the Department of Education could manage a direct loan program."

To justify their negative opinion, many participants cited several problems, including how to ensure regulations, oversee program goals, oversee commitments, unswayed inquiries, unfair program audits, and mismanagement.

In fact, the group contended that poor management of the program could lead to greater loan defaults and possibly eliminate all projected savings of implementing the plan in the first place.

The Consumer Bankers Association, a committee of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, said it was not ready to study the report.

The form rejected the report's conclusion that the costs of servicing the direct lending plan and phasing out the current program.

GAO also did not identify the risks of such a transition. Paul Marwick said of the focus group, Paul Marwick "noted that participants in these sessions were given a description of the direct loan program different than that reflected in the GAO's cost model and consider the presentation of that focus group results to be biased."

A spokesman for Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., chairman of the House subcommittee on postsecondary education, said Ford is taking a "wait and see" stance on the direct loan proposal, holding off until the Clinton administration takes office and makes its interest and priorities known.

EDITORIAL

Message to President Clinton: Ignore the media

It's already been almost two weeks since you were inaugurated Mr. President. Two weeks and a lifetime is what it must seem like to you.

From day one the media have been constantly hounding you on your fierce stand to allow gays into the military. I'm tempted to ask why is there so much attention being made about it now.

The public knew your stand on the issue from the outset of the primaries over a year ago. But since reporters have nothing else to say relevant about really newsworthy events, they want to really highlight how "stubborn" you are about this.

And they (the mass media) haven't stopped there. No sir. Instead of putting some intensity into Somalia, or Yugoslavia, they want to tell the public where your rumored spending cuts are coming from.

And to top it off, they have the absolute gall to get reaction from "everyday people" knowing full well that any proposed spending cuts will get a negative response.

Since when has a president been so chastised during his first two weeks, let alone his first 100 days?

Never has a president been grilled or harrassed as much as you. Never has a president been put on the spot so much for his beliefs, especially when they were known well in advance of your taking office.

President Clinton, I commend you. You have the courage and the guts to face a situation, such as the national debt, and be honest about the sacrifices that have to be made.

Do not let anyone pull you back down. Do not let anyone back you into a corner, or force you to compromise your beliefs.

The American people have put their trust in you. You deserve a chance to show why you earned it.

-Best wishes, Kenneth Dillard

COMMENTARY

Economist warns of hectic financial conflicts in future

Joseph C. Kewer
Guest Columnist

The reason I write is to bring attention to a potential problem facing our society. Of all the problems that can be foreseen to endanger the very existence and life of our society, there are few in number. The most serious danger of this kind involves the possibility of nuclear war someday breaking out in the planet.

But there is another danger of this kind that is seldom thought of. This danger involves the long enduring mismanagement of natural and economic resources.

This is a danger worthy of deep concern given the fact that the world's financial markets are underpinned by financial futures markets. The existence and use of financial futures markets offers possibility that a financially well endowed organization of men could gain secret manipulative control of world financial markets.

Financial futures markets offer this possibility due to the financial leverage they offer market participants in controlling financial markets. This financial leverage combined with pressure of money in its simplest use financial markets, makes the possibility of financial markets being secretly controlled a feasible one.

But what about motives? Why would a financially well endowed organization ever have sufficient motive to conspire to secretly control world financial markets? These are questions that reach to the heart of my warning that something could be wrong yet unrecognized about our perceived economic condition.

If the United States or any other major industrialized country were to pursue use of fiscal policies leading it to experience bankruptcy as an entire nation, it is possible that an organization of men could become motivated to disintegrate financial markets from underlying economies. They could be come motivated to do so out of respect for a desire to avoid experiencing an economic calamity resulting from the bankruptcy of their nation.

Furthermore, if sufficiently powerful as an organization, they might find it possible to secretly tap central bank resources for use in disintegrating financial markets from underlying economies. Use of central bank resources combined with use of financial futures markets would allow such an organization capability to secretly disintegrate financial markets from underlying economies for an indefinite period of time.

I hope there are people in the country who take such a warning seriously. If what I have just described should or has occurred, our society could be quietly placed on an extinction path of existence out of respect for survival, yet powerful peoples' desire to avoid experiencing an economic calamity in their single lifetimes.

Flawed, bankrupt, yet highly industrialized economies cannot be allowed to operate indefinitely without endangering their society's long term ability to survive.

Such economic use resources too abundantly and for too frivolous of purpose to support a society's survival interests.

Give charities a chance

Paul Gaudreau
Harbinger Columnist

Have you ever heard the doublet ring on a cold winter night? You look out the window and see a person with a clipboard. You know they want donations. You crack open the door and before the person can say anything, you blurt out "I'm not interested."

I have experienced this many times because I'm the person with the clipboard I work for a non-profit charitable organization that is trying to change corporate and public policies that are harmful to life on earth.

The kind of people who go door to door (canvassing) are usually volunteering or working for very low wages. Many of these people, like myself, have college degrees.

Some have given up higher paying "for-profit" jobs to do work that holds more meaning for them.

In short, these people are dedicated to a cause that means more than money to them.

When a canvasser comes to your door, at least offer one or two minutes out of your long life to talk with them. Even if they represent a group that you are opposed to, at least hear what they have to say.

Give the person a chance to defend their group and their actions. Next time you hear that bell ring on a chilly night, remember that canvassers are people too!

Get away from that TV for a couple of minutes and talk to a real, live human about the issues!

Freedom of choice a basic right for all persons

Pius Fucini
Harbinger Columnist

Why is it that good news is bad news and bad news is good news? Probably because there isn't a necktie to be made on good news. However, you happen to be reading "The Harbinger."

And it falls into the category of "True news."

Which means I'm free to press on and on about whatever floats my best. But don't worry, I've got better plans.

For starters, just ask any one of them what they think about abortion and you'll get any number of responses.

"It's murder!"

"It's appropriate in circumstances."

"Kill them all. It's just food out of my mouth if you don't."

I doubt I think our taxes should pay for them."

And on and on from radicals down to conservatives. But my response won't make you cringe, won't make you hater and certainly won't make you name a beach spot after me. You see, I think you should mind your own business.

After all, it is the safest bet: Why should anyone leave themselves open to the ghastly harpoon-tinging radicals of the world?

I've never been pregnant. And as far as I know, I'm not a father yet. So what is so important about what I think?

Why is it so hard for people to understand that what I think doesn't count?

I don't think that I reserve the right to tell anyone what to believe.

And vice versa.

Now, I know I'm no patriot. But the United States broke away from England because of taxation without representation and the suppression of the freedom of religion.

In other words, the freedom to be as stupid as you want to be.

You should be able to listen to The Cure, Monty Python or Queen Latifah without someone telling you that you are wrong.

Writing. Writing about what? I'm sorry, but I've got better things to do than squabble about "my God is better than your God," or "Coke is better than Pepsi."

We'd all be better off if people would stop trying to convince me we are wrong. Or better yet, stop trying to convince us of anything.

It annoys me when someone's fingernails smoke floss in my face.

But if I don't like it, I just move my face.

It bothers me even more now that I am an ex-smoker but you won't hear it from me.

I don't have the right to tell you where to smoke. That is, unless I run out of places to put my face.

And now there is a study that shows an enormous amount of people acquiring cancer from the smell on the clothes of the best friends of pen pals of smokers.

Come on. These studies can't even make up their minds about caffeine.

The heart of the matter really relies on how much you think you can make other people like you.

If I want to fire up a cigarette, then it is my prerogative.

Has the land of the free and the home of the brave forgotten that it was built on the liberty and protection of these and other inalienable rights?

I know what I think, but don't bother asking.

Someday I don't believe that the "true press" is capable of breaking the shackles of controversy.

It's too busy drowning over the Cockfight for Beliefs in the arena of profit margins.

Now, where did I put that harpoon shield?

Letters To The Editor

An open call for student participation comes from Senate president Charles January

Welcome back. I'm looking forward to helping Student Senate serve you better. I've been President for one semester and believe we in student leadership roles have made some significant changes in our Constitution. For your information they are as follows:

1. We the Student Senate have made the Office of President and Vice President an elected position by the entire student body. Not appointed by the Student Senate.
2. We have added another branch to student government, which will be called Student Senate house of representatives. This body is responsible to create bills to be sent to the student senate to be put into action. Each Student Senator is responsible for finding a day and night student to fill those positions. In addition we have switched the commuting education students and weekend college students to our body. Please, we need your help. Ask a Student Senator how you can get involved.

Noted: Student Senate is interested in the following areas of concern:

1. The book store and prices of books.
2. The cafeteria and hours vs. cost.

3. Parking on campus.
  4. Faculty and staff evaluations.
- These are just a few. Get involved and help make a difference.

Charles January
Student Senate President

New student representative asks for help in making school government work

This is an open invitation to all students. I look forward to not only working with the Senate, but with the students, faculty and advisors within the Liberal Arts Department.

Being new to the senate I want smear everyone that I will attempt to give my best effort and work towards good that benefits the entire school, as well as my division.

I want to address any concerns as quickly and as efficiently as possible.

I am asking for all students to get involved in helping the Senate to become more of a student participation activity.

While I cannot be specific about any plans that I have made, or any goals that I personally have for the senate, I do wish to reiterate my commitment in putting this senate at the head of my priorities.

But any deliberation will only go so far. It is going to take some effort on the part of you, the students, to make this a successful committee for the school.

The recent past indicates that due to a lack of student involvement, the senate has not been as productive as it could have been.

It is time for us to work together to get more activities and more programs here at Harper.

We appreciate any ideas that you share may have and strongly urge your input.

Without your ideas and suggestions, we cannot thoroughly do our job.

Let's unite together and put the senate back on track. Change has been the word for the last year. Well, let's bring change to Harper as well.

Bonnie James
Student Senate

Symphony to perform concert

The Harper Symphony Orchestra will present their Winter Concert at 8 p.m. Sunday, February 14, in the Bldg. J Theatre of the Palatine Campus of Harper College. In addition to the performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9, the concert will include two very special features.

James C. Riley, President of Suburban Bank, calling Meadows, will present U.S. Savings Bonds to the four winners of the Young Artists Competition at a ceremony during the concert. Violinist Cathy Barak, 15, Arlington Heights will perform with the orchestra as first place winner in the senior division. Pianist Aki Fujisawa, 12, Hoffman Estates, will accept first prize in the junior division and also perform with the orchestra. Suzanne Moon, 17, South Barrington and Anne Rabbit, 10, Mt. Prospect will receive prizes as second place winners in the senior and junior divisions respectively.

Frank Winkler, conductor, will proudly lead the Harper Symphony Orchestra as it performs Symphony No. 1 by John Dowry. This symphony in two movements, was composed at the request of the Orchestra to commemorate the passing of Frank and Nancy Winkler's son. The first movement captures in a lyrical way the very positive and optimistic attitude characteristic of David as a young person. The second movement is cast as a kind of dance of joy, a sort of spiritual affirmation asserting that all does not really end where or in the way things appear.

Tickets are $10 for adults, $5 for students and seniors and free for children under 13. To purchase tickets, call the Harper College Box Office, 7808/397-3000, ext. 2547.

Baby Boomers gain control

Clinton takes office amid hoopla and spectacles

Carol Ann Stevens

It's official. The rock 'n' roll generation has taken over the White House. As President Clinton and first lady Hillary Clinton swapped through 11 inaugural balls Jan. 20, it became apparent to anyone watching the estimated 67,000 black tie revelers that this administration was going to be different.

The saxophone playing president delighted throngs at the inaugural balls by jamming with five different bands. At the Arkansas ball, he accompanied legendary rock musician Ben E. King, who wrote the song, "You Memes Don't Dance and Your Daddy Don't Rock n' Roll." Later, Clinton hit a few new notes while he joined Clarence Clemons and the E Street Band on a version of James Brown's "Night Train."

Clinton was self-deprecating about his ability, but Clemons said the president did alright. "It's good to know that he has something to fall back on in case his presidency thing doesn't work out," Clemons told reporters.

During the campaign, Clinton promised to return to MTV, and he did. MTV's Rock 'n' Roll Inaugural ball was one of the hottest tickets in Washington on inaugural night.

Clinton and his wife showed up briefly at the music television channel's party and told the crowd that he still believed in the Rock the Vote campaign that recruited so many young voters.

"I thought this campaign because I was you to have a better future," he said before introducing his wife and daughter, Chelsea, who may have headed her father in terms of audience response.

The first daughter broke into a wide grin as the final crowd began to cheer, "Chelsea, Chelsea, Chelsea."

Even Vice President Al Gore danced (or at least tried to) with his wife Tipper one ball.

And, when the Gores showed up at the MTV ball, the vice president worked the crowd like he was still campaigning.

Gore said the Clinton Gore ticket won because of young voters like those who attended the MTV ball or watched the festivities on TV.

"We included the vote, all right, and now we're going to change America," he said, bringing a roar from the crowd, which even cheered his wife Tipper Gore, although slightly less enthusiastically.

Tipper Gore signed many in the music industry with her campaign to put warnings on albums that contain explicit song lyrics.

Gore renewed campaign pledges to make college education more accessible and to help young people find employment after graduation.

As Clinton called for a "season of service" to his inaugural address, Gore also appealed to the audience to get involved with their own political change.

"We're going to need your help in the cities where you live and the colleges where you study," he said.

From Roger Clinton, the president's younger brother, performed a song at the MTV ball, which featured performances by popular bands.

MTV's graphics logo for the evening was the White House, with Jimmy Hendrix's version of "The Star-Spangled Banner" playing in the background.

Health seminar for students

"The Heart-Strain Connection," a free informative seminar aimed at teaching participants how to take charge of their health, is being held at Harper College in Palatine, on Wednesday, February 10, 8-9 p.m., in Bldg. M, Rm. 1618.

Four guest medical experts have explained the connection between a stressful lifestyle and the development of heart disease.

Kelth Barndoun, MD, will present the latest information on this connection and a plan for managing stress.

This seminar is part of the Harper College Free Health Enhancement Series.

The birds and the bees at Brookfield

So you and your partner(s) know it all when it comes to sex? Think again! The folks at Brookfield Zoo guarantee they can teach you a thing or two about the wild world of procreation during the zoo's "Weekend for Lovers." Friday, Sunday, February 12-14, a celebration of Valentine's Day and the birthday of the father of natural selection, Charles Darwin.

On Friday, February 12, at 7:30 p.m. lecture, "The Mating Game," will explore the sex lives of plants and animals. Representing the immense world of plants will be Dr. Lester Fisher, former director of the Lincoln Park Zoo before retiring last year, and Rob, who has worked at Brookfield Zoo for 37 years, will share anecdotes that convey the ups and downs of animal sexuality played out at these two world-famous zoos.

A wine and cheese reception will follow the lecture. Tickets are $4 (for students). Seating is limited and reservations are required. For tickets, call Brookfield Zoo at 485-0263, ext. 355. On Saturday, February 13, Brookfield Zoo staff will lead tours of five animal houses to share the many details about animal interactions that occur behind closed doors (and some lions on exhibit). These free tours are offered at the following times:

- 11 a.m. The People Kingdom's outdoor cat garden
- 12 p.m. Pachyderm House
- 1 p.m. Aquatic Bird House
- 2 p.m. Reptile House
- 3 p.m. Tropic World

What are you likely to discover?

- The exotic animals that allow make us "diver" without axes or lugs
- The free-wheeling lifestyle of a male toucan, aptly named "Happy," who regularly travels from Pachyderm House to Tropic World (and back) to service his two female mates
- The sex-ed saga of studly young
- The little-known reality that can receptive play a significant role in the reproduction of endangered animals in zoos (including the zoo's new Siberian tiger cubs and snow leopard cubs)
- The wild, hard facts about rhino pregnancies: mothers give birth to 70 pound babies at the end of 15 month gestation periods.

HARPER GRADS TRANSFER TO ROOSEVELT SIMPLY, SWIFTLY, SUCCESSFULLY.

Each year, hundreds of Harper graduates transfer to Roosevelt University's Arlington Heights campus to complete their bachelor's degrees because Roosevelt is the northwest suburb's largest, most comprehensive university.

Harper students Kathy Michael and Dan Liu tell why they chose Roosevelt.

"Roosevelt accepted all my Harper credits, and registration was a breeze," Kathy says. "The campus location was ideal."

"Roosevelt gave me a scholarship," Dan explains. "And all my Harper credits were accepted. I particularly like the small classes, and the fact that the campus is close to home."

If you're interested in joining Roosevelt University's many successful Harper students, come visit us or call an admissions counselor at 708-437-9200 to let us help you plan your transfer.

THE ROOSEVELT EDGE IS THE LEADING EDGE

The damage of flirting

ANNE KOWALSKI
A&E Editor

The last two men on I've seen have everything and yet nothing in common with each other. Damage, at One Schaumburg Place and Flirting, at the Four Arts Theater in Chicago. Both films have relationships between people who cannot be together because of their place in the world.

Damage is a story of a father (Jeremy Irons) who has an affair with his son's fiancée, Anna (Juliette Binoche). Anna has a terrible past—her brother killed himself when she was 15 over a nervousness love affair. Marlyn (Rupert Graves), the son, is attracted to this "call for help" since he has come from a nervousness, well-adjusted family and is fascinated by her mysterious ways.

Flirting is an Australian story of two "coming of age" prep-school boys who fall in love with each other despite the strict guidelines set up by their schools. Both films are masterful in their schools. Danny is an unsentimental tale of two boys watching night instead of playing it. His female counterpart (whose name is captured in from Uganda, Africa, and is always concerned about what's happening back home.

Ironically, there is an attraction between them and everyone finds reason to mock their relationship. As things get more serious, more risks are taken, more dangers from teachers, hall leaders and security guards. Although in comparison to Damage and Anna, these two have no passion, the film allows us to laugh at our nervousness and feel useless when we flirt.

As for the first date rating: Damage. Absolutely not. Not one less you want to squirm when the characters on the screen are tearing each other's clothes off, howling. Flirting. Absolutely. It may break the ice and allow you to laugh at yourself. I give both films full price tickets.

Women's b-ball loses despite big showing in second half

HEATHER CARROLL
Julia WALSH
Sports Editor

Starting out strong 4-0 at the start of the game, the Lady Hawks ended Tuesday's game at very disappointing loss to College of DuPage.

The score was 56-48. At the half Harper was behind 25-7, but they came back in the second half.

"The second half we did really good," said number 22, Julia Croven. Leading scorers for the game were Kristen Rodin, 17 points, Kelly O'Connor, with 12, and Croven, had 10. DuPage's Lumbard had an assist to help out the team.

There was just a lid on the basket, and Jim Ryan, Coordinator of Intramurals, about the game.

Couch Jennifer Jensen said that the team played a great second half even though they were behind on rebounding. "We were getting out rebounding," said 34, she is named. Twenty of CDD rebounds were from their offensive side.

The Women's Basketball team will be playing tonight at Triton College at 5 p.m.

This Saturday the Lady Hawks will travel to DuPage to play South Valley at 2 p.m. Tuesday they will play at home against Joliet at 5 p.m.

Swimmers heading into end of long, hard season

Julia WALSH
Sports Editor

Even with smaller numbers than usual, the Harper swim team hope to repeat its regional championship at the season draws in a close.

Head coach Gordon Aukerman definitely likes the talent he sees on this year's team, even if the numbers aren't the same. "We've got more quality on this team, better than last year."

The women's team is 4-0 while the men are 3-1. According to Aukerman, the teams both could very easily be considered one of the best in the nation if only more junior college students would come out for sports.

As far as teaching in a junior college is concerned, Aukerman simply stated "You're always going to have problems with numbers."

Of the swimmers presently on the team, Aukerman says the team has between 15 and 18 people who can compete with nearly everyone in the region and probably in the nationals.

Co-captains Jim Garsler and Stacy Dinscher agree that after a long, trying season (which began in September), their teams are both better than last year, even with smaller numbers. Garsler is quick to point out that the very best part of the season is yet to come, however.

Those on the team who qualify will go to Ft. Pierce, Florida March 3-6 for the NCAA nationals.

A step ahead

HEATHER CARROLL
Julia WALSH
Sports Editor

With the end of the winter athletic season coming closer to an end, Harper athletes are still working hard to complete the season in good standings.

The Women's Basketball team plays tonight at Triton at 5 p.m., followed by the Men's Basketball game at 7 p.m. Playing at South Valley in DuPage will be the Women's team at 2 p.m. on February 6. Hosting Joliet, both basketball teams will be playing at usual times of 5 p.m. and 7 p.m.

Holding their position in the top part of the NAC the Wrestling team will compete on Saturday, February 13 in the Bankers Dual.

The 5 wrestling teams will travel to Chicago to swim against the University of Chicago, Condo, and the Illinois Institute of Technology on the ninth. Starting time will be at 4 p.m.

The NAC All-Academic team members for Harper has been announced. Franklin Hammond, football, and Robert Vornat, golf, are two members of the All-Academic team. Lynette Mory, volleyball, is on the Honor's List. Harvey Culbert, football, Robert Misa, football, and John P. Anderson, soccer, all made the List. Eric Kemp, soccer, and Nicole Leggett, soccer, are the members of the DuPage's List. To qualify for the NAC All-Academic team, a student athlete must pass a minimum of 12 hours with a 3.00 GPA and a letter in a full sport.

Good luck to all winter athletes and upcoming spring athletes from the Horibinger.

Hawk Wrestlers still undefeated

Julia WALSH
Sports Editor

The Harper wrestling team continues to play through the competition line into the season, confident that any goal they set can be reached. This past Saturday, the Hawks (10-0 in dual meets plus two invitationals championships) travelled to Muskegon, Michigan with a perfect record and Cuyahoga (Ohio), the number five junior college team in the country, as their rival.

"We have a pretty good chance of getting every body to nationals," Tom Raine

They came back to Illinois after having Cuyahoga and two other teams (Grand Rapids and Muskegon) in their dual. According to Dan Leppene, as assistant Hawk coach and former Harper wrestler himself, "Saturday was the hardest (competition) all year."

The wrestlers started the day by easily handling Grand Rapids by a score of 39-0, and then squashed by Muskegon 22-18.

The last and toughest job of the day came when the Hawks, ranked number 11 in the country before the meet, first met up with Cuyahoga. The match up wasn't as close as would be expected however, and the Hawks came out winners at the end of 27-17.

Tom Raine, 9-0 as an individual wrestler for the Hawks, likes what the team has been doing all season, and has some high hopes for the next few weeks. "We have a pretty good chance of getting everybody to nationals," says Raine.

That's quite a prediction, but then again, that's quite a team.

Track team begins practice

Julia WALSH
Sports Editor

The Harper track team began their practice on Monday with the largest numbers ever.

Head coach Renee Zellmer is especially impressed with the numbers of long distance runners and weight men. However, Zellmer is quick to point out the team does have some weak areas. In particular, the team could use more men's sprinters and any female athletes.

According to Zellmer (women's head coach for 10 years and men's head coach for three years), the men's and women's teams, who placed first and second in the region four championship last year respectively, look stronger all around compared to last years teams.

Hawk Focus: wrestling is family business

Photo: Brian

Nephew is alive and well and making rounds on the Harper Wrestling team. There are plenty of examples.

Chen McGowan is 115 pounds is the older brother of 134 pounder Pat McGowan. Lenny Papp at 167 is the twin brother of Lorry Papp at 177.

Greg Mitchell at 150 is the youngest twin brother of Bob Misa, left, a Harper wrestler of 3 years ago. Steve Bakley (142) is the youngest brother of former Harper star Eric Bakley.

Jerry Krenn at 190 doesn't have a brother connection to the team, but he did wrestle for Harper Coach Norm Loveland a decade ago.

It's a regular family tradition at Harper. And Coach Loveland is not complaining about it.

"We have an awful lot of wrestling experience on this team," Loveland said. "We have wrestlers who are a little older and they are more focused. These guys are here because they want to be here. Making it is not a problem with this group."

Phil Meech is one of Loveland's few returners. The sophomore will drop a weight down to 158 to make room for the talented Lenny Papp.

Matt Haynes is a true freshman at 126 and the former Rolling Meadows

High School star is a "potential All-American" according to Loveland.

The Hawks are loaded at Heavyweight Frank Hammond, Matt Ruckenstein, Mark Rader and Mario Rammer. Jason Sims should help out at 190 and Tom Raine adds support at 118.

"We never had a team get worse during the year. We always get better."

Howdy Jinks This little doggie's caught a case of Texas Flu, specifically the Dallas strain. A lot of people are complaining of symptoms: unnecessary and vociferous yawnings at any mention of the Cowboys, strong hankerings for chili and baked beans, and even stronger urges to buy western wear. There is no known cure, but some housewives suggest watching reruns of Thirty Something.

Okay. I am joking, but who doesn't appreciate a good blowout every now and then, eh? Well I can think of a few Buffalo fans who are a little depressed (and a few dollars poorer, I might add). I'll admit I underestimated the offensive output of the Cowboys, but who expected them to score 52 points? I will pat myself on the back for getting the Bills score right.

I'm pretty sure you've sick of hearing about the Super Bowl by now, so I'll move on to another topic or two. I'd like to start with a few predictions for the rest of the sporting year. The two hometown baseball teams each made some interesting off season moves. The Cubs let go of possibly the best

This decision is both good and bad. On the good side, the Cubs saved a truck load of cash by not resigning him. They can use the money to pick up a few mid skill level players to strengthen their fielding. The bad news is that the Atlanta Braves are now a lock to win the National League pennant. Either way, the Cubs will do no better than

Eye on the Hawks

To win or not to win?

That is the question for the Bulls this season.

After winning the NBA Championship two consecutive years, do the Bulls have a chance at capturing a third title? Sure they have a chance but will they take it and run with it?

Probably not. There are many factors leading to the possible fall of Chicago's own "De Bulls." One of them is the fact that when any team, not just the Bulls, wins a title twice in a row the team gets a little cocky.

They become overconfident and believe or know that they will capture that title again. And that's the problem. Being as confident as they are, they just won't seem to work as hard as they usually do or should.

Don't get me wrong. I like the Bulls and they do play a great game, but they just have to keep their heads in the game and not elsewhere. They need to be a little more consistent. That's all. A little hard work and an extra push has never hurt anyone and in the end it pays off.

Having a few of the members on the team injured, they've begun to suffer. Scottie Pippen had tendinitis of the ankle and rolls it

Also with John Paxson out of the game due to knee surgery the chemistry of the team is thrown off. Thus having BJ Armstrong starting, which takes away from the bench scoring during a game.

Awards ceremony honors faculty

Tom Felton
News Editor

For many staff members, Feb. 3 is a day that will always live in their hearts.

That was when a celebration was held in their honor to commemorate their for the loyal service given to the college.

Each of the 125 members were given an award for their achievement at an Employee Service Award Reception.

Those who worked five years were given a gold pin with the Harper emblem, ten years—a travel alarm clock, 15 years—an Olympic quartz clock, 20 years—a gold watch, and for those who gave 25 years of service and dedication were an actual gold watch.

Dr. Paul Thompson, Harper's President, was on hand to congratulate the employees at the reception. "If all of the people were represented in time, (tripped up in congestion) that person would have started working here in 459 A.D.," Thompson said.

Larry Belsawa, Personnel Director, and coordinator of the award reception, put together the feelings of all the people, who were to receive the award for their service.

One of the promises we have been at the personal office in that part of our function is to assist in the recognition of the employees.

Belsawa is not only assisted in the recognition, but was also recognized for his ten years of service.

"Harper is an excellent college, and provides a wonderful environment," Belsawa said.

"I enjoy my work very much, and hope to continue on for another ten years."

John MacInnes, Professor of Liberal Arts, was among the few employees who did not 25 years of service.

and was awarded a gold watch.

"I am deeply honored," MacInnes said. "Whether I live, or die, it will remain as all the good times I have had working here."

Suzanne Havlic, an employee of the college for the past 20 years, was also one of the many honored for their service.

"I think being honored for one's efforts always makes one feel good," Havlic said.

"I probably won't use it, but it is still a very special gift."

The Employee Service Award Reception was held on Wednesday, Feb. 3, at 2:00 p.m.

Awareness may have led to arrest

During the arrest, police told $2,500 of the stolen property was recovered.

"Diana confessed to stealing two videocassette recorders (valued at $250 each), one camcorder (valued at $250), one computer disk, player (valued at $100), four compact discs (valued at $50), 30 VHS tapes (valued at $150) and one computer (valued at $1,000) and a television set (valued at $1,000)," King said.

"Paul Meyer continued to steal one VCR (valued at $250), one Panasonic VCR video TV combination valued at $450, six blank VHS tapes (valued at $100).

"Apparently, Meyer tried to cover up the thefts by attempting with the computer system," King said.

"Fred was out at $5,000 each and both painted head and were released," King said. "The men are scheduled to appear in Cook County Circuit Court on Feb. 10," King said.

Heightened surveillance by the public safety department may have revealed the manner in which two public safety security guards, Steven Davis, 20, and Paul Meyer, 25, became suspects in recent thefts on campus.

Apparently, the security guards were able to gain access to the audio visual department, F132, because they had keys that are issued to all public safety security guards. Because the room had "limited access," Public Safety Supervisor Kevin King said, this could have been the tip-off to public safety officials that the thefts were an inside job.

The men, both from Elgin, were found Jan. 21 and Feb. 2 on stealing more than $4,000 of audio-visual and computer equipment from the college.

Student leaves hit-and-run scene

JENNIFER THOMASON

A Harper College student allegedly caused a fire at an accident on Feb. 3 at 1:18 p.m. The driver hit one moving car and four parked cars before leaving the scene of the accident, Public Safety Officer Robert Davis said.

"The student was given a citation for failure to stop and provide information at the scene of an accident. The driver was identified by public safety with the assistance of Mary Ann Wine, the driver of the limousine. Wine took down his license plate number after being given a citation for failure to stop and provide information at the scene of an accident, and hit three parked cars, and his car in reverse and his another car on its rear on the side," Wine said. "After he finally stopped his car I told him to file a police report." Apparently the driver insisted on past giving White his name and telephone number.

When they asked the driver about the other parked cars, "They're not going to know what happened to them," White, the student told White. He got back into his vehicle and drove away.

Public safety, notified the owners of the parked cars so that they could assess the damage.

Public Safety asked the student to come to the public safety for questioning.

"The driver did admit to hitting the limousine, but did not offer information on the other cars," Public Safety Chief Kevin King said. "The driver admitted to hitting the parked cars only after being asked directly by public safety officials."

A hearing is scheduled for March 24, at 9 a.m. in the Cook County Circuit Court, located in Rolling Meadows.

Campus judicial systems facing date rape difficulties

Karen Nauright
Counsel Pains Service

A college student is accused of rape, found guilty of the crime by a campus judicial committee and sentenced to 100 hours of community service. Has accuser and the university are convinced of his guilt, but he maintains his innocence. What is his roomer's?

In January, Mark Mazur, a 21-year-old architecture engineering student, decided to sue Kansas State University on the grounds that his constitutional rights were violated.

The case illustrates the tenuous position of university judicial systems when dealing with the explosive issue of date rape, a crime that can bring a seven- to 10-year prison sentence in the criminal justice system.

Mazur, who was accused last fall of rape and aggravated sodomy by a female student, contends that the university's policy against sexual violence is outside the university's authority, and the university denied him due process in the judicial proceeding.

Criminal charges against Mazur, like many similar date rape charges, were dismissed for lack of evidence. And Mazur said he was not allowed to subpoena or question witnesses during a campus investigation, nor was he allowed to be present when witnesses were called.

Mazur is still on the Kansas State campus, said John Faigman, assistant vice president for university relations at KSU.

In many cases, if the date rape victim presses formal charges, there is a simultaneous criminal proceeding going on at the same time of the campus judicial hearing. However, criminal prosecutors are sometimes hesitant to prosecute date rape cases because the victim knows each other before the alleged incident, and there is usually a lack of evidence. Assessment of guilt or innocence comes down to a question of who is the more credible witness.

Students who are accused of rape argue that a campus judicial system can ignore their constitutional rights by allowing a single individual or board the power to be prosecutor, judge and jury. And educators are concerned that campuses are making themselves vulnerable to law suits by handling the processing of rape cases or failing to protect the victim.

And there also are those who say campus justice isn't tough enough on rapists. Carol Bohmer, sociology professor at the University of Pittsburgh, and author of "The Campus Rape City," said it is hard to have clearly written codes of conduct that include a punishment of expulsion in the case of forcible sexual contact.

"Often the punishment doesn't fit the crime," Bohmer said. "If rapists were in the criminal justice system, they would be imprisoned, but judicial committees give them community service, probation and minor things."

Everything depends on how seriously the crime is taken by the university," Bohmer said. "It is difficult for people to treat this seriously, because there is a widely held attitude that, on a date, it is not rape."

Bohmer noted that universities can protect themselves from lawsuits by meticulously following procedures and having supportive attorneys on staff. "If the university doesn't have decent procedures, and doesn't follow their own procedures, they will be at risk," Bohmer said. "Often they are bending — to protect the rights of the accused, and ignore the rights of the victim."

A university has a higher standard to live up to than the criminal courts because they are educating citizens, Bohmer noted.

"In a traditional way, we are to teach people how to behave. I don't think college judicial systems should think of themselves as walled-down criminal courts," she said.

No two college judicial systems are the same, so there is no uniform procedure for the handling date rape cases. However, campus judicial panels often serve up a rather style of justice than the criminal courts.

You could be driven off campus in a matter of weeks," said Raymond Schiflett, student legal adviser at Southwestern Texas State University. "And if you are in a big city like Miami or Houston, it could take two years before you go to trial. The university can't afford to wait two years."

At Southern Texas State University, the rape suspect meets with his accuser in the office of the justice director, who questions both parties about the incident.

Some attorneys advise their clients to accept the university penalty, which may include expulsion, and not to talk too much at the judicial hearing, because if the proceedings are recorded, the tape could be subpoenaed and used against them in criminal court.

The alleged rapist may appeal to a board, said Schiflett, and at some universities, they can appeal to the president of the institution.

Since Congress passed the Campus Sexual Assault Victims Bill of Rights in 1992, universities are required to notify the accused and the accuser of the results of the judicial hearing.

Historically, a woman who filed a rape complaint through the campus judicial system would not be notified by the university as to the outcome of the proceedings.

"The woman would have no idea if the guy was found guilty, fined, penalized, whether he was still on campus or what," said Michael Heintzel, an attorney with the Student Press Law Center.

"Whether or not the public has access to these hearings depends entirely on the state's open meetings law," Heintzel said, noting that campus newspapers often have to approach the two parties involved to get a story.

Kristine Collier, director of student legal services at Bemidji State University in Minnesota, said that after coming through some of her school's judicial hearings on date rape, it was hard to say who the victim was.

"The justice system is just not prepared to sit through," he said, "Collier said, "I feel sorry for both parties. They both get criminal in the process."

At Bemidji, both parties are allowed to have an advocate present, but that advocate cannot speak for the accuser or the accused during the hearing. Some universities, however, do allow an attorney to speak for the alleged rapist.

Collier defends the idea of a private university hearing.

"If the [university] cannot intervene, there is no way to protect the victim," she said. "If you name the matter over to the public only, they [the suspects] can lie right down the street, or be in class with you."

"If we have some case fall there is unfair due process being observed. When using the conduct system to adjudicate sexual assault, it's very controversial issue," Collier said. "It's imperfect system."

Collier said she would like to eventually use a mediation process for date rape crimes.

In a recent survey conducted by the Towson State University Campus Violence Prevention Center in Maryland, 76 percent of campus judicial affairs officers surveyed thought that the campus favored expelling a person from the campus who is found guilty of rape.

Accused rapists are not the only ones filing lawsuits against colleges. In some cases, victims are also seeking monetary rewards.

A young woman recently filed a $18.9 million suit against George Mason University in Virginia, claiming that campus police bungled the investigation and that the university administration tried to whitewash the crime.

The woman said she was raped the three former George Mason University students who attacked her in her dorm room just five days after the freshman students arrived on campus. She said she did not know her assailants.

Clinton inauguration signals a new direction

Celebrations bring people from across country as new president optimistic for country

Alan Vaughn
College Press Service

WASHINGTON: Thousands of college-age voters swarmed to the nation's capital January 17-21 to celebrate the inauguration of the president they helped to elect.

An optimism emanated from those who squeezed into the huge crowds to catch a fleeting glimpse of William Jefferson Clinton as he became the 42nd president of the United States.

"I challenge a new generation of young Americans to season of service — to act on your situation by helping troubled children, keeping company with those in need, reconnecting our torn communities," Clinton said in his inaugural address.

"There is so much to be done enough, indeed, for millions of others who are still young in spirit to give of themselves as service men," Clinton said.

A gospel choir from Bethune-Cookman College in Daytona Beach, Fla., sang and poet Maya Angelou from Wake Forest University in North Carolina read a powerful poem that also spoke for the inauguration.

As one point during the campaign, Clinton admitted that even his own mother didn't think he could win.

But he persisted, courting younger voters with appearances on MTV's Larry King and his now-famous appearance playing his saxophone on Arsenio Hall's talk show.

And the non-political 18-24 age group turned out in record numbers to support the first Democratic president in 12 years.

"It's a new generation. The youth vote the election for Clinton," said "Uncle Sam" Rousseauville, who dresses like the mythical character and even had his first name legally changed to Uncle Sam to encourage people to register to vote.

Rousseauville is a volunteer of 1992 registration drive held at colleges in 42 states last fall.

On January 18 they set aside for the observance of Martin Luther King, Jr.'s birthday, a wide array of service and youth groups, including Rock the Vote, Public Allies, the United States Student Association, and South Central Los Angeles' Habitat for Humanity united to form a "National Youth Think Tank."

Dedicated to a "spirit of community service and national renewal," the project is the brainchild of Steve Barr and Vanessa Kinch. Barr is one of the founders of Rock the Vote, a group that coordinated and voter information during the 1992 election. Kinch is the founder of Public Allies, a public service organization aimed at rejuvenating American cities.

"The best way to create change in this country is by having grassroots like us work with, not against, the government," Barr said.

"Public service should come from the grassroots up, not from a big federal bureaucracy down."

After refurbishing the aged Adlai Stevenson, which will eventually house the think tank, the center will function as offices for Public Allies and Rock the Vote and will serve as a recreation center that will permit young people a place to meet while in Washington.

Habitat will assist the community by providing jobs for neighborhood adolescents through a cafe located in the building and will teach them skills involved in operating a small business. Plans are also in the making to use the facility as a health center for the surrounding community.

The center will provide youth with the chance to be involved nationally in public service to benefit not only the young, but the nation as a whole.

Barr said the agency will strive to break the equality that sometimes causes young adults to sit back and let others set the agenda, and will encourage them to help create the ways in which the country will grow.

Student trustee offers opportunities

The student trustee at Harper College plays a unique role as a member of the board of trustees. The student has the opportunity to play a significant part in the governing of the institution. Voting votes and come at the board level. This has an impact not only on the operational aspect of the college, but on the broad policies of the institution.

Any student who is interested in becoming a candidate for the position of student trustee for 1993-94 must submit a complete "The Institute of Candidates" by 2 p.m. on Wednesday, March 17, at A 356. The student representative must enroll in a minimum of nine credit hours during both the fall and spring semesters of 1993-94, reside in District 8/12, and not have served previously as the student trustee. The term of office April 15, 1993 to April 14, 1994.

The student trustee is a member of the Harper Board of Trustees, as provided for by House Bill 1624 passed in September 1973.

Further information and forms are available in the student activities office, A136. Please help us to inform our students about this important student position.

Senate awards scholarships

This semester faculty senate plans to award one or more scholarships to students of high academic achievement.

Please announce that scholarship to your classes and encourage deserving students to apply.

Full and part-time students with 3.0 grade point average or better are eligible.

Other eligibility criteria are listed on the application form.

Applications are available in the financial aid office, A-364.

Completed applications must be received in the Financial Aid Office by Monday, March 8, 1993.

Scholarship recipients will be announced in April.

A candidate is required to submit two faculty recommendations with his or her application form. At least one of these recommendations must be written by a current faculty senate member.

Legal tech offers info sessions

An information session for prospective legal technology students will be held Tuesday, March 2, at 5 p.m. in A216.

The session is one hour in length for anyone interested in exploring a career on the paralytic field and learning about Harper's Legal Technology Associate Degree and certificate programs.

Registration is not necessary. For information, call ext. 2401.

A legal technology exam must be completed in preparation for the Legal Technology 101 class. The examination and Testing Center will be offering the entrance exam on March 2. There is no fee for the one-hour exam. Call the testing center, ext. 2541, to make an appointment for the test. A resume and statement of goals should be submitted to the testing center at the time of the entrance exam.

Board highlights

The Board of Trustees met in Regular Session Jan. 28 and took the following actions:

■ Offered approval of a tuition discount plan for senior citizens.

■ Approved the affiliation agreement between the college and American Healthcare for student use of clinical facilities in the Therapeutic Program.

■ Suspended affiliation agreement between the college and HC A Woodland Hospital for student use of clinical facilities in the Nursing Program.

Students register high-tech way this term

Although the students may have registered a different way last semester, they may not know that there is a new registration system.

However, the students who have registered this semester may be aware of the new system. It appears to not only new students, but to students who have been at Harper last semester.

It is a computerized system with a box shape, and it talks to students through the registration.

The system handles 16 calls at a time, plus the student's payment for the registration.

It also has credit card system which works the same way.

The last thing the system does is help the students make changes to their schedule.

The student can talk with the computer through the process to get their schedule changed if necessary.

Romance takes a vacation

Well, Valentine's Day is here. It's supposed to be a time when "lovers" display their amorous feelings towards one another. Cupid slings his mighty arrows and lights the coals of passion. But lately, lost among all of the hype of buying things for one another, is the idea of romance.

Romance, by definition, is idealized love. Romance encompasses a wide spectrum of ideas and actions that are used to display affection for a person for whom one has a great desire or caring.

How many of us can truly say that we have romance in our lives? How many of us really use romance year-round in our relationships with one another?

I ask this because I have yet to really see romance exist lately.

And what do I define as romance? Buying someone a rose, or a dozen roses, for no reason whatsoever. Taking the person you love on a picnic with a basket of food that you have handmade. A long walk in the park holding hands by moonlight.

To me, these are romantic. Of course, the spectrum is open to many other things. I am not trying to limit the idea of romance, nor downgrade it. I would just like to see it be put into a more prominent display between people than it currently is.

Those of you who are lucky enough to have someone and take it for granted, think how lonely life is without that someone to call and say hello to, just to hear their voice. Think how nice it is to hold them, listen to them and be around them.

Romance, is far from being dead. But for some unknown reason, it has taken a sabbatical. Maybe if everyone, like Otis Redding said, "tried a little tenderness," then love could be in full bloom year round.

Finding the fun in horror

Society is too hypocritical when it comes to fact and fiction

Paul Fichten
Horror Columnist

Step up, ladies and gentlemen. Jews and gentiles, oiks and psychos, and ponder this intriguing question: What's the difference between Jeffrey Dahmer and Anthony Hopkins?

Or is it the harness of disapproval brought down by society on one and the several Eternity brought upon the other?

Well, every one knows Dahmer is a serial killer. A serial psycho. A lunatic who preyed on his victims. Just thinking about his crimes against humanity can make the most innocent person shudder in abhorrence. And just think, there's a possibility that a guy, just like Dahmer, lives two hours down from you.

In fact, if it is true, then that guy may have watched you as you left your home, went to the video store, gave away your money to entertain yourself with the evils of cannibalism. Do you see the irony in this? Throwing Christmas to the lava was inhuman, heinous, and unacceptable.

You folk, it was simply the greatest form of public entertainment at the time.

But wait! There's more! I recently had the pleasure of visiting a castle style restaurant's torture room.

I watched in amazement as a woman read to her children (who were too young to read for themselves) the chapter which described, in detail, how a great shaped device could cause pain when expanded in any orifice. (And that's not the gruesome part.)

I watched in further amazement as the kids said things I like and moved on begging her to read the next one. I walked out squealing my head cheeks together. Sickening? Disgusting? Morbid? No, it's just another example of high-quality American entertainment.

—Paul Fichten

World Records, the average child will see 26,000 murders on T.V. by the age of 18. Menace. Whelming.

But it was the business who drove the buffaloes to extinction, the gladiators who fought to the death, the tourists who went on a three-hour tour. A three-hour tour. They were the ones who were just plain nuts.

And what about the actor who, as a cop, took the law into his own hands? Well, he was cool. It was those four L.A. cops who weren't being entertaining. They must've been nuts.

You could rewrite Neil Young's "Four Dead in Ohio" to "Seven Dead in Palestine" and get a good movie deal. And why? Because we like it that way. What's more, it's big business. Very big business.

But most people won't admit that they enjoy cannibalism, disfigurement, crucifixions, slayings, channings, hangings, stranglings and gang bangers.

If you admit to the slightest intrigue in these things, you'll sound like you're nuts.

Remember to stipulate these things morally entertain you. Only then are you normal — and by all means, amuse yourself with whatever carnage your little heart desires. Just so long as it doesn't take you away from your save the rain forests campaign. Nice to have you with us. Thank God you're not nuts.

Parking situation remains stuck in neutral

Dear Editor:
I want to commend Harper for the great job they are doing in getting a recycling program together and working. This is a serious problem that needs major attention and participation. Keep up the good work.

There is an area that needs a little more attention—parking. There is construction going on and with the snow fall, it has almost become parking hell but that is no excuse for people to be parking not only illegally, but dangerously for themselves and others.

In parking lot one, people park over the end lines by the entrance to the lot by one and two cars so if you are entering or leaving the lot, you either can't get around the cars without going into the grass or you can't see people coming in or out of the lot.

There have been quite a few close calls, especially when the weather is bad and when myself and seeing coworkers mentioned that to more than one public safety officer, so we were told that they were advised not to get back in.

At least when cars were parked on the grass last summer, they were out of the way of any moving traffic. Some thing has got to be done about this recurring problem.

If there are not to be used then some alternative ways to be found in dealing with people who are ignorant and unaware of everyone's safety by the law and common courtesy.

Participation the only way politics works

Paul Goodwin
Harbinger Columnist

Here we are at the beginning of a new semester at Harper College. We're not behind on any assignments. We have an opportunity to do our best for Spring semester of 1993.

We have new leaders in William D.C. meeting their first year semester. In there hope for our world? President Clinton talks of college education for everyone who wishes to enter time for community service.

Vice President Gore speaks of an enlightened view to make business more friendly to the environment.

Will our leaders keep their campaign promises? I don't know. I get a little worried when I see Bill Clinton spending thirty million dollars on an inaugural party for himself.

Jimmy Carter only spends ten million.

We'll never erase the deficit with that kind of spending!

I have a little more confidence in Mr. Gore. I realize that he's not Dan Quayle, but I'm sure he can spell!

The one thing we have to understand is that our leaders will never do what we want unless we let them know what we want.

This means making phone calls, writing letters, attending village board meetings and visiting legislators.

Just as we get involved in our classes, we must get involved with the democratic process and the study of our public services.

We must take blame for allowing them to abuse their power and hold them accountable in the future!

Death of customer service leaves bitter feelings

George Seaton
Asst. Business Manager

There was a death on campus. The actual time and place of the death are yet to be determined, however many students have felt and will feel the loss of an important part of our school.

I first discovered the death about 4:20 p.m. on the Fourth of February. In the halls of academia, where hope and cooperation are the spirit, where confidence and some sense of security are presumed to be found, I chanced upon idleness, disinterest, a sense of helplessness and lack of concern.

The death I am speaking of is the loss of common decency of that once strong and proud spirit of customer service and cooperation.

I find certain that, here at Harper, a has indeed lost an intimacy and hence many death.

No, I could not tell exactly where the daughter occurred.

Rather, I found evidence of the crime littered about on campus.

In the cafeteria, where I made an investigative remark about the pricing for my lunch and tomato sandwich, I was met with rolling eyes, a somewhat sarcastic expression and informed, succinctly by the cashier, that she "did not make the price."

At the time I should have suspected the imminent demise.

However, I wrote the event off as someone's bad day and went on my way.

It wasn't until the Fourth, at that fateful time, that reality set in.

That afternoon, as the sun shone brightly outside, I found myself in the registrar's office being offered to "sign there," and "print your name here."

The service was, to say the least, unfriendly. Having completed the necessary paperwork under the scrutiny of a former Marine drill sergeant, I waited for the check of progress to turn.

Much to my dismay, they came instead to a greeting that I was an "idiot."

I was informed the "idiot" that the class would require an invoice signed by the instructor.

This despite the fact that the instructor had been visiting in the registrar's office and appeared to be whether an invoice was necessary for admittance and as to the availability of a seat within the class.

Perhaps I am wrong, but I saw the availability of seats as within the domain of the office of the registrar and so would expect that such a generic question as to need for an override would be dealt with by either exploring all possibilities, or by retaining the interrogative in an effort to clarify the situation.

However, that an override is not easy and that I was inconvenienced through an error is not so much the issue here as it is service.

Had I been met with a friendly face and been requested to provide information as supposed to being ordered shut and spoken to in what might term a disrespectful, superior/politician continued form, I might have left the registrar's office feeling more like a disappointed customer and less like an abused, subservient and respectable piece of taxpayer flesh.

But wait, that's not all!

A short time later, I found myself back in the bookstore considering not overhauling the class and returning the textbook I had bought since both the instructor and myself were led to be leave that substance would not be a problem.

There, in the bookstore, I met an employee who had earlier been trained at the local school of "customer relations," or a local school of the school of the virgin.

All different. I began to smell the scent of death.

Indeed, in retrospect, I feel that, had I been listening more carefully at that point, I might have actually heard the screams and death rattle of customer service.

From the bookstore, I was ordered to proceed to the information desk.

And no, not wanting to risk physical contact by the clerk, I proceeded as commanded.

Thirty seconds, I found a variable class on the information desk.

A cheerful smile, some compassion, reassurance and help.

Still, I felt the need to express myself to someone in a clear position to act rather than pass my displeasure on the chain of command as the information person had assured me would be done.

Thus, I proceeded up the personnel department steps and finding someone with whom to share the events I have described.

Once there I found people.

I found there, for at least five minutes before, an empty desk watching people or human like creatures behave more about within view, safely protection behind what I assume was a mutually transparent pane of glass.

While there, I began to question my existence.

No, not in some great academic, philosophical manner, but rather, I thought to myself (I was asked to give the I only know that I could see myself since there was no one to acknowledge my presence, nor required to the look of dissatisfaction on my face).

In frustration, I left the office and made across campus.

By that time, I was visible again. I knew this since a friend acknowledged my presence and inquired as to the look of dissatisfaction and disgust that by then had settled my countenance.

I didn't know what to do. I still don't.

I wanted to talk to customer service, but I mentioned, customer service is dead.

Not even an office for customer service exists on the campus. Obviously the position has been eliminated through attrition.

I wanted to talk with someone in public relations, but I fear that no such person exists on campus.

In lieu of public relations, I sought out personnel since that starts with a "p" and, after all folks, I had been dealing with all personnel!

In the personnel office, I "found myself." No one else did.

So here I sit with no measure but other than what my thoughts on paper and hope to elicit some response. To strike some cord.

To suggest that perhaps someone service or public relations office is needed here on campus.

Furthermore, to suggest that perhaps some form of customer service training be provided and reinforced on a regular basis for the "service" employees who must actually deal with a vast of public under many conditions and circumstances.

If such a program is already in place, I suspect that some employees may be resisting attempts at modifying their behavior and/or are too firmly entrenched in the "public service" mentality.

No, I guess I am not a "happy camper."

Yes, I realize that such events and employees are not necessarily representative of the general common.

Still, it is important to acknowledge negative past service and our better about when it occurs.

Equally, it is important to acknowledge excellence.

What can we do?

Take a moment and express your self. Truly is fine.

And the old saying "If you like us tell a friend, if you don't, tell us," certainly applies. But the power and emphasis of the act cannot be denied.

Write! Write to the press. Write to those in a position to act. Post in black and white. I urge you to let someone know how you feel!

Write a letter to Paul Thompson (Remember him, the president of Harper?)

Write to a department chairman or director. Put your thoughts on writing and put them in front of someone.

Remembering and complaining among each other only serves to foster more negativity and apathy.

Action is the key and I urge you to act.

Desperately seeking creativity

The Harper College student literary art magazine Point of View is now accepting final submissions for the 1992-93 issue.

Any Harper student, administrator, faculty or staff member can submit work to this student edited annual. The editors are looking for 2 and 3-dimensional art, photography, short stories, poetry, drama, and creative essays.

The Spring semester deadline is Feb. 19, 1993.

Three cash awards, usually $100 each, are awarded for the best creative writing and art published.

Submit creative writing to Professor Frank Smith in the Liberal Arts Department. Submit art to the Art Department.

All writing should be typed or printed, and all submissions must be accompanied by a Release Form that is available on the Art Department, the English Department and Student Activities.

For more information, contact Frank Smith at F348R, ext. 2777.

Print & Drawing exhibition to open

The 17th Annual Harper College National Print and Drawing Exhibition is March 1-26 on the second floors of Buildings C and P. This year's juried exhibition features professional artists from across the country. Artist/juror Jerald Krepps, associate professor of art at the University of Minnesota, is the juror of selection and awards.

In conjunction with the exhibition, the Harper College Art Department invites the public to attend a reception on Tuesday, March 2, from 4 p.m. to the display area of Building C. Awards will be announced.

For further information call ext. 2548.

Dream team succeeds at game

Dan Mosala
Guest Writer

...And now, the starting lineup for your Coordinated Studies class. At guard, a philosophy teacher, COLLEEN BURNIS; At forward, a psychology teacher, JOHN CLARKE! The man, in the middle, an English teacher, REX BERWALD! At forward, a biology teacher, RANDY SCHIETZEL! And from the linguistics department, at guard, PEGGY KA/KAZ!

Each is an expert in their respective field. They have combined their expertise, as well as combining their unique personalities, to form the "Dream Team" of teachers. The syllabus has been prepared, the team assembled, and now they are ready for opening day. The pressure is on; will they live up to expectations of carrying the load, "Dream Team?"

These five athletes, or teachers, have their game plan ready. They want the crowd, or students, to experience a learning community, learn to respect other cultures, work with others, basically their goal is to teach the crowd how to learn while they learn themselves. To succeed, the "Dream Team" has to set aside their individual egos and work as a team.

As the students walk into the arena, or classroom, for the game, they notice on the scoreboard, more traditionally known as the overhead projector, a cartoon that reads: "School is mostly unimportant, but real life is all about how to learn while they learn themselves. To succeed, the 'Dream Team' has to set aside their individual egos and work as a team."

In the first half, the "Dream Team" as a little bit nervous, but before the opening tip-off, the crowd knows they are in for something special. Frank Gunglows, 21, a student in the coordinated studies class is excited about the new season. "The group does form a better learning environment. They ('Dream Team') deal with real issues and are not afraid to share ideas," stated Gunglows.

The second half starts with a discussion of "There Are No Children Here," a novel by Alex Kotlowitz. The book contains graphic details about two youths living in a Chicago public housing complex. Many views were shared by both the crowd and the players on everything from educational issues to racial ones. Then a fan leaves his seat and proceeds to the chalkboard. He calmly writes "There are no kids, no those who will not see" — Justin Hayward. Some were stunned, some thought about what he had written, and some were once again in line at the concession stand and moved it completely. The "Dream Team" succeeds with their goals. They drove fans to make thoughtful statements. And in this sense, fans can make a difference.

FEATURES Jazzy halftime

Cathy Jim
Guest Writer

The Harper College Dance Company will perform on Feb. 11 during halftime at the men's basketball home game vs. IL Valley (game time 7 pm).

"Everyone is excited about the chance to perform," said Vice President of the Dance Company, Dana Gabel.

"We will perform a jazz piece we have been working on since the beginning of the semester."

This is the first Dance Company performance for Spring semester. They performed here last during both a Fall football and basketball game.

They also performed Christmas songs at Spring Hill Mall and Bracon Hill Retirement Center.

"Bracon Hill was a great experience for us," Gabel said.

"The people were happy that we took time out of our busy holiday week to entertain them. They were a great audience. We are planning to visit them again during the spring."

The Dance Company is also working on a show for April 21 and 24 at 7 p.m. in J143.

The theme of the show will be "The Dance." Several guest performers will be involved with "The Dance."

Those scheduled to appear are VMS Violin Dancers, Green Castle Dance Project, Kenny Doc amp and the Kilo Dance Company (KDC), Northwest Ballet, Academy and Daring Feet Dance Studio, to name a few.

THE ALL NEW... ASK MR. COLLEGE

Mr. College answers real life questions! Where's yours?

Q. Dear Mr. College: Is there a Mr. College? —Singer and Dancer, Brooklyn, NY
A. Dear Singer: There was a Mrs. College. She left me. But NEET I'm not. And you shouldn't feel desperate either. Someday you'll meet someone, fall in love and live the rest of your lives together. At least that's what you'd think! Then one day you'll come home a little early and find your person doing LIMPIDOLY things with the PAPER BOY, THE FEDERAL EXPRESS MAN, AND A CAN OF CHEESE WHIP (one bag $8.99). Consider: not the best use either! SO YOU STAND THERE STAGGERING IN CONFUSION. THEN FINALLY AFTER WHAT SEEMS LIKE AN ETERNITY, YOU FINALLY HEAR SOMEBODY TEAR STRAIGHTENED HAIR BACKWARD AND SCREAM: "WOOT! WOOT! WOT!" —Jim. Email: Use the answer to your question is no.

Q. Dear Mr. College: Hearing that you are an expert on those 10-gonny nine (the Brady Bunch) I feel compelled to ask you why the Brady Bunch never existed in the first place? —Dewitt, College Station, Texas

A. Dear Dew: You've come to the right place! I am one of the most read in number of these little known deceased siblings, Sherry Brady, who was buried there after being killed in a break into camp explosion. I maintain that the other Brady children murdered Sherry because they were jealous of his superior good looks. But I can't prove anything.

Q. Dear Mr. College: I feel like I've been cursed since the first time I saw a witch. I wish I could make up the majority of our country's witch. —Burt, Denver, CO

A. Dear Burt: You need to write to "Ask Mr. CANTILLAGE." This is "Ask Mr. CANTILLAGE." I get the mail at the time.

NEET! Get your questions answered by Mr. College! Send your questions, comments, and jokes to me by mail. I'll be happy to answer them. Write to: Mr. College, c/o The Harbinger, 1001 University Avenue, Suite 100, Chicago, IL 60607-4242. (312) 341-1000.

TRANSFER PLANNING DAY FEB. 24, 11AM-3PM

HARPER GRADS TRANSFER TO ROOSEVELT SIMPLY, SWIFTLY, SUCCESSFULLY.

Each year, hundreds of Harper graduates transfer to Roosevelt University's Arlington Heights campus to complete their bachelor's degrees because Roosevelt is the northwest suburb's largest, most comprehensive university.

Harper students Kathy Winchel and Dan Liu tell why they chose Roosevelt:

"Roosevelt accepted all my Harper credits, and registration was a breeze," Kathy says. "The campus location was ideal."

"Roosevelt gave me a scholarship," Dan explains. "And all my Harper credits were accepted. I particularly like the small classes, and the fact that the campus is close to home."

If you're interested in joining Roosevelt University's many successful Harper students, come visit us or call an admissions counselor at 708-437-9200 to let us help you plan your transfer.

WHCM Lives!

Media Tribune Staff Writer

WHCM, the official radio station for Harper College, has applied to the FCC for a Non-commercial Educational Broadcast station license. Translated, that means that upon the FCC's approval, Harper will be getting its own FM radio station, allowing WHCM to be broadcast to the surrounding communities. Tom Schmecke, advisor to the station, said, "Currently, WHCM is heard mostly a few on campus buildings, such as the Building A lounge and the cafeteria, through closed-circuit as well as being on the cable system."

Most college stations reach off campus through their own frequency, and that option is long overdue, according to Schmecke. If all goes as hoped for, students should be able to tune in to 88.3 WHCM in their cars and homes within a year, Schmecke said.

Preparation for the application to the FCC began back in 1989. Name of station, a logo, and an engineering consultant was brought in to help with the process. In the end, a report weighing five pounds was submitted to the FCC along with the application, Schmecke said.

A full-time employee of NBC's Channel 5, and advisor to WHCM since 1981, Schmecke said that the station has actually been getting less exposure in recent years than it originally did. The station officially was started in 1973, and was heard at several more locations on campus than it is today.

Over the years, it was cut from different locations for various reasons. Between 45 and 60 students work for the station each semester; some are writers, or work for the newscasts, but most take one two-hour DJ slot per week. Being granted a license should help give these students the exposure and recognition they deserve for their work, Schmecke said.

Ballet Folclorico Nacional de Mexico

"Folclorico: That's Entertainment" San Francisco

With exhilarating dancing, colorful costumes, and fascinating stories, Silvia Lemos Ballet Folclorico Nacional de Mexico will take you on a whirlwind journey through Mexico's diverse provinces and traditions. This exciting ensemble, which was hailed with rave reviews and audience raving on a tour during its 1990 U.S. tour, will appear at Elgin's Hermonia Auditorium on Friday, February 19 at 8 p.m.

Considered the most authentic exponent of Mexico's folk dance and musical heritage, the company is the Mexican Government's official representative folkloric troupe at home and abroad. The concert is presented in cooperation with Elgin's Hispanic Fine Arts Committee.

The public is invited to a pre-show Fiesta in the lobby of Hermonia, beginning at 6:30, with Mexican vendors and artists offering their wares for sale.

Food will also be available for purchase.

Tickets for the Ballet Folclorico are $20 for main floor and $10 for balcony and may be purchased at Greener's in Elgin, Carson's at Spring Hill Mall, or at The Hermonia Box Office. Phone orders may call 911-5600. Hermonia Auditorium is located in the Elgin Civic Center Plaza in Downtown Elgin.

What's Up?

After last week's printing of the What's Up column, to our surprise, we received a letter of suggestions from a student who happens to be under the age of 21. He made some excellent points, such as, how difficult it really is for students between the ages of 17-21 to find things to do. Also, if Harper wants more students to get involved on campus, then maybe it should hold more student-type events, like mixers. This student also belongs to a couple groups here, but is extremely discouraged by the poor turn out at the meet-ings. Therefore, we're looking into finding more information for those students who fall into this age bracket. We look forward to receiving more letters of suggestions from students like Rich Scherke. For more ideas, sugges-tions or comments, please feel free to drop them by the Hartford newsroom, A367.

Catch 'Vanishing' before it vanishes

ANNE KOWALSKI
A&E Editor

Here's the movie that opened last Friday that advertised with a "thriller" underlines. The question that ran through my mind the entire time was: what is a thriller? I was distracted by the humor. Most humor that can be found in thrillers consist of one liners.

This film has a simple plot with familiar themes: Boy meets girl (the love film). Boy and girl get on vacation. Girl gets pregnant and wants to go back home. Girl disappears at convenience store. Boy searches over missing girl. Boy co-exists with mad scientist with unidentified accent. Everybody dies (no, I'm kidding).

The original French/Belgian film was a thriller, a very good thriller. The people work that script and Amers used it. It is more comic and it has a happy ending. This is the very reason some will be discouraged to see this movie. It is pure joy.

It is not an intellectual thriller. It is nothing like "Silence of the Lambs." If you want to see a movie like "Silence of the Lambs," see "Silence of the Lambs."

Jack Harrison (Kiefer Sutherland) and Diane Shaver (Sandra Bullock) are the world's happiest couple. They go on a short to visit Mr. St. Helena and she is spooked by the destruction and ruins that they turn around and go-home. Then, in a middle of a tunnel, they run out of gas. Jeff goes off to get gas leaving Diane behind in the jeep to fend for herself. She feels abandoned and the two argue all they way to the gas station. They resolve by making a pact to never leave each other alone again—and what does she do? She leaves!!! And she never returns.

Jeff searches over her disappearance for the next three years until finally, Barry Cousins, the abductor, steps forward and insists that Jeff experience everything that the experienced. Barry is just a guy experimenting with evil. He has nothing against the two lovers personally, he just wants to know how much he can get away with.

During his three year search, Jeff meets Rita Baker, a greedy open waitress who latches on to Jeff instantly. It's your basic twisted co-dependent kind of relationship. Not a lot to enjoy.

After a while, I felt like I was rooting for Barry. He's great! He and his daughter are really the only two likable characters. The film is so see, able. Enjoyed it as a piece of entertainment—that's all I give the film a matinee ticket and sure! bring a date!!!

The truth just may hurt, but it's still the truth

Las Francisco

Horbinger Sports Columnist

Well, boys and girls (the world) for today is three part. Can you say that? Three part. I know you could. That seems to be the mentality that most rabid Bulls fans have. They take for granted the superiority of their team, which could lead to a lot of embarrassment come June.

Don't get me wrong, the Bulls are a great team, but there are twenty seven other teams in the NBA. If you want to narrow that down a bit, you might just include the two other teams with a shot at the title, New York, Phoenix and Portland.

Chicago should have two much trouble with the Knickerbockers (Don't you just love that name?). They (the Bulls) seem to be piling them selves fairly well this season, even though they lost the down a few games. The Eastern Conference should be Chicago's toughest test on the way to the Finals.

Phoenix is my favorite to win the title this year, even if saying that means I'll find several bad beats in my bad one night. Charles Barkley is a man with a mission, and that is something Jordan lacks. I think Mike wants to be like the gaffers you see waiting their time on the links all summer. He has just spent so much time on the court the last year, he has maintained his championship form. I know everyone will tell me to just check out his stats, and I'll make him a strong wish, but that's what he is doing well, his stats.

win't be enough to pull Chicago's favorite through the play offs.

Now that I'm done "bashing" the Bulls, it's time for the Bulls. In my opinion, Mike Ditka didn't deserve to be fired. He was the coach, and should take some responsibility for the team's losses, but I don't remember him fumbling the ball or throwing it away. If you have to blame someone, blame the team itself. Most likely players can only play that way. You need to shake up the players to make sure they are removing their leader. Maybe Wassund can make a few changes, but the Bulls record won't improve much over the next season or two.

Now that I've ranted three quarters of the sports fan in the Chicago area, I'll move on to something else. Last weekend featured two sporting events that show the talents of two different sports. The NHL All Star game was quite the offensive show. The final score of 16 to 6 was laughable, but it was fun to watch, wasn't it? There was only penalty called in the game. I do try from your average key game. I'd like to add something else to kick off your Chicago fans, wasn't Ed Belton's performance spectacular?

For those of you who care, the AFC beat the NFC by a field goal in overtime to salvage their reputation. Unable to win a Super Bowl in close to ten years, they have to win a Pro Bowl every now and then to look good.

Lady Hawks lose, but not without a fight

Cris Peterson
Horbinger Sports Writer

Despite falling on hard times, the Harper Women's Basketball Team is determined to make it known that they are a force to be reckoned with as the season draws near and the conference season nears.

The team has dropped its last five straight games, the latest was to Juliet Junior College, 64-58, this past Tuesday, February 9. The team's record now stands at 9 wins and 13 losses, overall, and 3 wins and 6 losses, in the NAC.

In the game against Juliet, the team was down by 20 points, but made it close down the stretch, coming within free. However, that would be as close as the Lady Hawks would get. Head Coach Jennifer Jensen attributed part of the loss to a slow start. "We basically slept through the first half," Jensen said. "Unfortunately, the sluggishness carried over into the first five to eight minutes of the second half, and we couldn't come back from that biggest deficit. However, we did make a decent comeback," she added.

The team is confident they can pull off a miracle with their last four regular season games and do well in the play offs. According to Coach Jensen, "Everyone goes to conference, and we're still in there. All of these teams are beatable, it's going to be a matter of getting the links out and working in order as a team. They're still playing hard," she said.

To close out the season, the Lady Hawks will play two home games against Black Hawk East on Saturday and Illinois Valley next Tuesday. The team's final regular season game is against Moline Valley on Thursday of next week. Conference times and locations are yet to be announced.

Hawk Focus: Joe Sloan, star basketball player

Joe Sloan
Sports Editor

Our thing can be said about Joe Sloan. He knows what he wants.

A back injury two years ago should have ended Sloan's sporting career, but he never gave up, and now he looks forward to a possible full basketball scholarship after he leaves Harper.

Sloan is a 6'5" forward on the Hawk basketball team in his third semester at Harper. He originally he came interested in basketball as a child when his father would take him to see DuPaul Blue Demos games, to watch the team that was considered one of the best in the country at the time.

He saw the excitement, the energy, and the glory those players had, and he knew that was what he wanted. After beginning to play basketball himself, he found out that sports were the best way to receive attention as a child. He enjoyed playing basketball and basketball at through his school years to his graduation from Harrington High School in 1989.

Everything in life seemed fine for Joe until he had problems while attending Bridgton Academy, a post graduate prep school.

At that point, the constant pounding on his back from playing day after day year after year took its toll. Sloan had a back injury that his doctors said would not allow him to play competitive sports ever again.

After a full-time medical time College without any sports, Sloan was forced. He took a break from school and went to Val, Colorado for a while to rest and figure out what his future held.

While in Colorado, Sloan started to do some basic things with friends. As he realized he had no pain he tried more challenging, stressful things. Because he appeared to be able to ski without any pain at all, Sloan returned to his doctor to find out what progress he had made since his injury, and he happily got the OK to play basketball again.

The doctor had apparently underestimated Sloan's dedication to his recovery. "They don't realize how hard I worked (on my recovery)," says Sloan. After working five times his basketball game during the off season, Sloan tried out for the Pacific State Games this past summer. He made the North Shore Team with college basketball stars Mike Finley (University of Wisconsin) and Tom Klenchowski (DuPaul) among others and the team ended up winning the gold medal.

Sloan played the Harper team this year and has become an instant star player.

He is the team's leading scorer with 17 points a game, and he has bounds with almost eight a game, and plays about 38 of 40 minutes each game for the Hawks.

When asked whether he would consider playing basketball at Harper as he did in high school, Sloan's answer was short and simple, "It's been a long time since I've seen a careerball." That probably would not get a free ride.

Sloan attributes his success to many things: head coach in Harrington H.S., Bill Grier. "He was like a second father to me. He kept me in line," Sloan says. Grier taught him sports discipline as well as the correct attitude toward academics.

Another factor Sloan sees as a large influence in his playing career is playing at Bridgton Academy. The all-athlete school preaches a total academic focus to its students, which taught Sloan one simple rule: grades first, sports second.

Sloan says this wasn't always the case earlier in his school days. "When I was younger I didn't apply myself. I've actually done better in college than high school." At Harper, his G.P.A. is 3.0 while in high school it was about 2.2.

As far as the future, Sloan is considering one more year at Harper before transferring to a four year school. He has already been recruited by Lewis University in Joliet, where he may be able to get a full basketball scholarship. One of his other job choices would be Loyola University, but he probably would not get a free ride.

As far as a goal career wish, Sloan's number one wish is for a job with the F.B.I. He says the team work involved "seems like a family type of thing and that's what I like to do."

As has been the case the rest of his life, Sloan's says his career goal is based on one common idea, "I need excitement."

Still going... Hawk wrestlers still undefeated as end of season nears

Jim Walcott
Sports Editor

There may only be one way to stop the Hawk wrestlers from winning. End the season.

Despite numerous injuries, the wrestlers continued their undefeated season this past Saturday, February 6, in Glen Ellyn against College of DuPage and College of Lake County. Head Coach Norm Lovelace was impressed by the performance of his team. "We only lost two matches all day," said a very content Lovelace who admitted, "were not real healthy right now."

In the double dual meet, the Hawks (13-0 in duals and two invitational championships) maintained C.O.D. 43-3 and beat 30-21. The only reason the meet was so close as it ended up was because Harper forfeited at three different weights to prevent small injuries from becoming big ones.

Coach Lovelace credits the Hawks' winning ways to a strong tradition of wrestlers at the college. Ron Bremer was the original coach who had the same dedication to the sport as Lovelace, who has been the head coach for the past 20 years. In all those years, Lovelace cannot remember one losing season.

Even with the strong tradition behind the team, Lovelace gives a great deal of credit to assistant coach

Dan Loperone, former Harper wrestler himself. "You couldn't ask for better," said Lovelace. When he won the N.C.A.A. coach of the year award for 1992, Loperone, to show the true partnership of the coaching staff.

Lovelace is quick to point out that as long as Harper cannot recruit and down "have down for students to work on, the school must have three main qualities to attract the highest possible quality athletes. First, the school must be able to provide a quality education. Secondly, the team must have a winning history. Lastly, the competition in the area must be strong enough to make the winning history mean anything.

The Hawk wrestling team has all off the above, and therefore the tradition lives on.

As the season nears an end, and the focus is turned towards national championships, good for almost the entire team. Of the whole team, only one or two wrestlers are not awarded of making it to nationals, according to Lovelace.

As of February 9, the Hawks were ranked sixth best team in the nation, first among non-scholarship schools.

Loss to Joliet hurts- twice

During quite possibly the most exciting game of the entire season last Tuesday night, Joe Sloan lies in pain on the court after severely spraining his ankle in the second half.

Jim Walcott
Sports Editor

The end result may not show it, but the Harper men's basketball team just may have played their best game of the season.

Joliet may have walked away from the competition with a 100-89 victory Tuesday night, but the Hawks' deficiency was the moral victory.

After trailing by as much as 25 points in the first half, Harper came back and was able to tie the game at 60-60 with 11:40 left in the contest. Things were looking up for the team, and even the tiny crowd of about 50 people actually began to cheer out loud.

After all the hustle, and after all the work put into getting back into the game against the number one team in the division, the game felt so piece with 9:37 left in the game with Joliet leading by only 60-60. At that point, Mike Young, one of only eight Hawk players, fouled out. That left the roster down to seven.

With 7:47 remaining, Reed Conner also was out of the game on foul, and six players were left. Then the big one came.

At the seven minute mark, Joe Sloan, leading scorer and one of the top rebounders all season, severely sprained his ankle as he attempted to pass.

Five players left. The only way the Hawks could play was overly cautiously. At least two of the players on the court had foul trouble each when the game was won by Joliet.

The players were happy with their performance over the loss. According to Sam Durawich, leading scorer with the Hawks with 18 points, Tuesday was "the first time in a month we played to our potential."

Head coach Ron Croger said after the game that he could not have asked for more out of his players. "It was just a great team effort."

Even though he was on crutches and could not put any weight on his ankle yet, Sloan guaranteed Wednesday morning that he would be ready to play by Tuesday, February 16, in Harper's last home game of the season.

The last regular game of the season will be February 18 against Monmouth Valley.

One On ~~None~~

What this school needs are some good athletic supporters

Jim Walcott
Sports Editor

O.K., things probably look a little odd to you this week. Let me explain.

This week, my paper in crime, Heather Carroll, is slightly under the weather health wise, so instead of our usual "One On One" column I will give you an idea of what I am on my mind.

It really disappoints me to see the lack of support from the students for the sports teams here at Harper. Most of the students at this college probably don't even know it, but the wrestling and both men's and women's swimming teams from Harper could probably compete against most four year schools' travel, and walk away from the meet with three heads held high.

The wrestling team is undefeated, knocking off some of the best junior college teams in the country. Nobody yet has given this team a challenge they could not overcome.

The swimming teams both were the best in the region last year. The women probably won't have trouble doing it again and the only thing blocking the men from repeating this year could be lack of numbers (due to lack of interest from could be athletes at Harper).

The football team is always considered one of the best in the nation, and the track team consistently sends out a strong crowd each year.

With an athletic program like we have, why is it that nobody (or at least very few) students attend the Hawks' sports events?

Is it because there is no advertising of events at all?

Do Harper students spend all of their free time studying, not having time to watch their teams? (I think NOT).

At Tuesday's basketball game, Joliet's crowd could not provide the support needed to cheer the Hawks to victory.

Maybe those people who actually attended sports events at high school have gone on to "real" colleges?

Is it because the average student at Harper would rather go out and get blasted than go to a sporting event?

Or it could just be that the average student at Harper doesn't give a damn.

No matter what the case is, I think we are in some real situations at this school. I watch college sports on television, and some teams probably draw more students to one individual event than our teams do to all events from all sports combined all year.

Of course, if the teams around here actually began drawing crowds, there could be some glory in winning. If you give the teams glory, there's a pretty good chance better athletes will join and instead of being one of the best athletic junior colleges in the country, we could be the best.

But then again, I'm a dreamer.

A message to journalism students and athletes (or anyone who likes to write): We at the sports page are always looking for extra writers. If you would be interested in writing for the Harbinger sports page as a reporter (they, journalism students, can you say "bears none") or a guest writer (athletes, can you say "get myself involved"), contact me, Jim Walcott at the Harbinger office, A367, or call 397-3000, ex. 2461.

Justice and Glover re-live the dream

MEHNER CARROLL
Managing Editor

Imagine yourself in a church in town in Ray, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. speak. The air is full of inspiration and the audience present is absorbed by his words.

That's how director/actor Felix Justice started the evening off last Wednesday. Justice and actor Danny Glover held "An Evening with Langston Hughes and Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr." last Wednesday night at 7:30 p.m. The presentation was held during the celebration of Black History Month here at Harper.

The audience was supposed to feel like they were in a church in Memphis, Tennessee April 1, 1968. He gained the entire audience's attention and achieved what he was trying to get across. As people were leaving the presentation their voices said that they actually felt like they were back in Memphis. The scene was well set and convincing.

For the second half of the night Glover read some of the works of Hughes. "The Morning After" was one of the poems he read. He started the poem with a slow, steady rhythm, and as he read, the audience's attention was drawn to the poem's subject, a young boy who would have chased this poem was beyond him.

Glover did a wonderful job in acting out the works of Hughes and the audience seemed to be getting in to it. Every other poem read was followed by laughter which could be heard from across the gymnasium. He added color to his readings, thus making it enjoy able for the audience.

During the reading of Hughes for over seven years now, Glover has many plans for future readings not just for college students. He is planning in the near future to make an audio of Hughes readings for young children.

Justice and Glover said they were brought together to form this presentation for their love for King and Hughes. Their words need to be and will be continued to be spoken out across the nation.

This was a great idea and college students had Glover and Justice have appeared in front of various age groups before. Those of which include junior high and high schools. They plan to keep going on tours for the same reason they were brought together.

Both Glover and Justice have been working hard over the past three months while on tour. Rehearsing, studying, speeches and poems, not using and traveling both have had a long tour, but it was worth the presentation.

"There's something in the hard work," said Justice, "and the hard work is worth it."

That night, the audience was drawn into the poem's subject, a young boy who would have chased this poem was beyond him.

Continuing the question and answer portion of the evening. Students Felix Justice signs autographs after his presentation of "An Evening With Langston Hughes and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr." last Wednesday.

Senior President Charles Janney asked how Justice and Glover would like to continue their tour. The audience posed questions.

"There was a moment when King was in the air," said Justice, "and Glover said."

He also would like to be remembered in a similar way that King was and always be remembered.

"If I can't be remembered for this,

I'll take anything I can get," Justice said with a smile. The audience posed questions.

Students' questions were asked and answered. Justice was brought to attention, was listened to and meant in attention to the evening.

The audience laughed and enjoyed the evening. It was an evening that was as well educational.

Accused officer arrested at hearing

Paul E. Meyer, the public safety security guard who was charged with felony theft last month at Harper, was arrested after his preliminary hearing Wednesday, Feb. 10.

As Meyer was leaving the court room, the Cook County Sheriff's Office arrested Meyer on a bond forfeiture warrant for failure to appear in court on a prior charge. Meyer was previously charged with driving under the influence and resisting arrest at Rosemont, Ill., Harper Public Safety Supervisor, Kevin King said.

Meyer seemed shocked and surprised when he was whisked away by police. He was unavailable for comment. He was released on a $4,000 bond and he is scheduled to appear today at the Rolling Meadows branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Meyer and Steven Davis, both from Eagan, Ill., confessed January 25 and 26, 1993 to stealing more than $4,000 of audio visual and computer equipment from the college. Meyer had worked for the college for two years and Davis was an employee for six months. King received information that led to their arrest.

"It is our responsibility to notify the proper jurisdiction whenever there is an outstanding warrant," King said. A records check was done on Meyer and Davis a couple of days before the preliminary hearing to ensure that there were no conflicting court dates, King said.

At the preliminary hearing for the theft charges at Harper, both Meyer and Davis were given continuances. Meyer did not have an attorney at the hearing, so received a public defender. Meyer is rescheduled to appear March 18 on the theft charges.

Davis received a continuance until April 21 because his attorney had a conflict with the court schedule.

Both cases were heard by Associate Judge Ronald M. Crandall.

Rapid growth in the number of part-time students during the past 20 years has overwhelmed the student financial system, which needs additional funds to meet this new trend in higher education, a report says.

Between 1970 and 1990, part-time undergraduate students more than doubled, from 2.1 million to nearly 5 million, according to the report by the American Council on Education. Full-time enrollment also grew by 34 percent, from 5.5 million to 7 million.

However, the report released Jan. 4 also said that part-time students were less likely than their full-time counterparts to receive financial assistance from the federal government, the state or an institution, even though their needs often are greater than full-time students.

In 1990, only 12 percent of part-time students received financial aid, compared with 43 percent of full-time undergraduates.

The report suggests that employers "may be a more fruitful source of financial aid," particularly if they were given more incentives from the federal government to do so.

World War II has started, and an aviation fighter squadron leads African Americans to military territory from North Africa to Italy.

The only catch is that the pilots are black, and they are forced to complete each mission without the aid of artillery.

This is the story of the Tuskegee Army, an all-black fighter squadron, told through a video documentary and traveling exhibit that kicks off a national tour at the Smithsonian National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C., as part of February's Black History Month.

The documentary and exhibit were sponsored by McDonald's restaurants and Coca-Cola USA.

"We feel it is a long overdue, and very important to educate young people about these talented black pilots who fought for their country, and unfortunately, are not even mentioned in history books," said Stephanie Skerdy, director of education for McDonald's Corp.

Workbook helps students perfect skills

Harper Business Professor Robert Zilowski's workbook, Word Processing Exercises: Applications for Word Processing, Advanced Keyboarding, and Electronic Typewriters, has just been released by Royce and Fraser Publishing Company, a Division of Southwestern Publishing Company, College Division, Cincinnati, Ohio. The workbook has been a two-year labor of love for the professor who has been here for over 25 years.

The workbook presents a series of hands-on exercises designed to help students perfect their skills. The book was written to help students work with realistic word processing problems such as those they might find in the modern workplace. Plentiful handwritten first drafts of letters, reports and memos, containing errors in format or in spelling, are typical of many office projects. This book replicates that type of work.

Zilowski discovered a need for a workbook like this after teaching typing and shorthand classes and correcting the word processing program at Harper. "The current textbooks do not have real cases, with real handwriting, the kind of examples that students face on the job," he commented.

For information about the book contact ext. 2555.

Scholarship funded by Motorola Cellular

Motorola Cellular and Harper College have enjoyed a successful business collaboration partnership for more than a decade. The college and the corporation continue to work together to develop innovative approaches to learning.

One of the most recent examples involves the training of Motorola Cellular security employees at the Arlington Heights, Crystal Lake and Libertyville locations. Harper College offers an industrial security certificate through the criminal justice program. Harper Associate Professor Phil Stewart custom-tailored the industrial security curriculum to meet the specific needs of Motorola Cellular security employees.

Because the courses are actually being taught by Motorola's own prevention and security management personnel, the company's representatives are offered to donate the criminal instructor fee to set up a scholarship fund for students in Harper's criminal justice program. The scholarship will be available to anyone interested in pursuing an associate degree in criminal justice. Criteria for the scholarship is being established.

There were 25 Motorola security employees who completed the first course. Criminal Justice Administrator

Vicki Seely, security training specialist, hopes to involve more security personnel in the follow-up course, investigative process. Seely commented that the course allows the employees to upgrade their skills, to gain college credit and to keep up with the latest developments in the field.

The educational offerings fit well into the Motorola continuous quality improvement philosophy and offer opportunities for lifelong learning.

Charles Chamberlin, loss prevention manager for Motorola Cellular, has worked with Harper for a number of years. Chamberlin is on the advisory board for the criminal justice program. He, along with Security and Fraud Manager Todd Perry, Security Training Specialist Vicki Seely, and Manager Monitor and Steve Zanetti, physical security specialists shared instruction duties.

Many employees in the class expressed a desire to continue their education and are very interested in looking at the new scholarship program now available in the Harper Criminal Justice program.

For further information about the criminal justice program or the criminal justice scholarship, contact the department, ext. 2463.

COLLEGE NEWS UPDATE

Program promotes positive future

The Career Transition Center is presenting the workshop, Overcoming Barriers to Accomplish Goals, on Saturday, Feb. 27, 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The program is designed to help participants identify thought patterns that limit potential and success, and to learn techniques that move them from current reality to vision in order to create a positive future and increase self-esteem.

The cost of the workshop is $40. To learn more about the workshop, or to register, phone 459-8233.

New workshops for women

Resources for Women will be offering the following new workshops on Feb. 27, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Makeup and Hair for the Workplace, LWW062-001, helps participants learn how to secure opportunities to bring more creativity to their workplace by developing and using new ideas, taking risks, accepting challenges and increasing optimism, confidence, flexibility and independence.

Networking allows people to trade information, resources, and support systems with others in the same field.

Computer: The Art of Networking, LWW067-001, presents techniques that help participants learn how to establish a network and how to use it effectively.

Tuition for each workshop is $25 plus a $10 fee which includes lunch. To register please call 997-1377 and specify the correct workshop number.

Video contest to take place

Campus videomakers and film makers, regardless of their major, are advised to enter The Christopher Video Contest. The deadline is Friday, June 11, 1993. Entries must be five minutes or less and express the theme, "One Person Can Make a Difference."

In the past, students have used animation, music videos, news reports, documentary, comedy and drama to capture their vision of how one person can make the world a better place.

To compete, entrants must be currently enrolled in college and in good standing. Projects can be created on either film or videotape, but they must be submitted on VHS or 3/4 inch cassette only. A completed official entry form must accompany each submission. Forms are available from "The Christophers", 12 E. 48th St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Center offers adult info sessions

The Center for New Students and Orientation offers information sessions for those over the age of 10 who have never been to college, but would like to investigate Harper Community College.

Mature potential students are invited to call 997-3600, ext. 2208 and ask about the Adult Information Sessions.

ITT placement rate is 90%; 4th straight year

Ninety percent of the students who earned bachelor's degrees from Illinois Institute of Technology in the 1991-92 academic year are now employed or in graduate school, according to the university's annual placement and salary survey.

For the fourth straight year, 9 out of 10 ITT graduates have either found a job or have been accepted into graduate school. In that period, job placement has ranged between 90 percent and 93 percent each year.

"According to our data, civil engineering is the hottest field, with 100 percent of our graduates during the last year now employed or enrolled in graduate school," says Dan Waldstein, ITT's director of career services.

89% of the 274 graduates of ITT's Armour College of Engineering and Science are employed or in graduate school, according to the survey.

Waldstein says that year more ITT graduates have been hired by small and mid-size companies than by large corporations. Even so, salaries for ITT engineering, computer science, architecture, accounting, and management information systems were still higher than the national average.

87% of ITT's 174 bachelor's degree graduates from the last year responded to the survey. Nine percent of those responding opted for graduate school, with 81 percent finding employment. These placement statistics reflect the market value of an undergraduate degree from ITT and employer interest in ITT's programs," says Waldstein.

ITT is a private university dedicated to excellence in undergraduate and graduate education in technology and the professions, with programs in engineering, law, architecture, design, liberal arts, and business. ITT is the Midwest's largest private center of applied science.

Professor establishes scholarship

Henry C. Meier, an Associate Professor of German here for 25 years, is retiring and leaving for the Hawaiian Islands. Before he leaves how ever, he is establishing a scholarship for a second year German Student through Harper's Educational Foundation.

"I just wanted to give something back to the students for giving me so much over the past quarter of a century," commented Meier. Meier has taught all levels of German over the years and has seen changes in enrollment. Recently, there have been more business majors enrolling in the classes. Since Eastern Europe and former Russian satellite countries have become accessible, more Americans are learning German for job power of business and pleasure.

German students include transfer students with a language major, adults returning to college to round out their education, and those who are interested in traveling to German speaking countries.

Meier and a committee will meet to set up the criteria for the scholarship. The scholarship will be in place for the Fall '93 term.

For information about scholarship, contact the Financial Aid Department, ext. 2248.

Chancellor to speak at ITT

Dr. Chang Lin Tien, chancellor of the University of California at Berkeley, will share his views on "The University of the 21st Century" on Feb. 26, at 2 p.m. at the Illinois Institute of Technology (ITT).

The free lecture will be held in the Smith Olin Auditorium off Peterson Hall, 10 West 3rd Street.

Tien's lecture is part of the 1993 Trustees' Lectures at ITT, with the theme "New Paradigms in Science and Engineering." The remaining speakers in the series are Robert French, vice president of General Motors Research, who will speak on April 8; and Arno Penzias, vice president of research at AT&T Bell Laboratories, who will speak on April 30.

The dream no longer exists

Twenty-five years have passed since the assassination of Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. His legacy survives today, but his influence is not as prominent as before.

Look around. Less than one year ago, April 29, 1992, four Los Angeles police officers were acquitted of beating Rodney King. Rioting ensued in South Central Los Angeles causing extensive damage to business and homes in the area.

Just a few months ago, in Tampa, Fla., a black man was abducted and burned by three white men in a racially motivated crime.

Anyone who thought that relations between races were improving was wrong. It seems a terrible tragedy that humans still cannot accept one another for who they are, as opposed to what color the skin.

Okay, so this sounds like a sermon from a soapbox. But until racism is completely eradicated from our planet, then it is obvious that these sermons are needed.

Whatever happened to the civil rights movement that called for the equality of all races? It died the day Rev. King died.

Any person who attended the presentation last week with Felix Justice and Danny Glover heard a speech that Rev. King to a church congregation in Memphis. Those words epitomized how much tolerance we all should have for each other.

Rev. King did not speak to convince people that any one race was better than another. He spoke on the equality of all people regardless of race, creed, color or gender.

But apparently no one listened to his words, or at least did not agree with them.

Decide where you stand. Think about discrimination and the words that Rev. King spoke during his infamous "I Have A Dream" speech. "No, we are not satisfied until justice rolls down like waters, and righteousness like a mighty stream."

Do you know your ozone ?

PAUL GUNDRESEN
Ozone Column

Imagine that you are cruising in your car and encounter a sign that says "Bridge out." Would you forge ahead as a speeder or would you stop, think over the situation and realize that your survival depends on your decision to turn back? Hopefully, your instinct to survive would prevail.

This scenario can be repeated with our own game of saving the earth's health for many a future generation. The reality of our ozone hole is staring straight in the face like the "Bridge out" sign.

What does the ozone layer do? It serves as a protective shield for life on earth from ultraviolet radiation. Why do we need to be concerned from this radiation? Because the overexposure of ultraviolet rays causes skin cancer and cataracts in humans and animals alike. The strength of this radiation can cause the ozone system to malfunction in a manner similar to what happens to AIDS patients. This would make older people and children especially susceptible to illness.

There are places in New Zealand and Chile where the children are not allowed outside to play during the hottest part of the day. This is where the ozone hole is at its thinnest. People in these areas suffer terrible sunburns in only fifteen minutes. Before you slough this off as someone else's problem, the Environmental Protection Agency has predicted that within the next fifty years, twelve million Americans will contract skin cancer and over two hundred thousand will die because of it. We are taking away our own freedom to enjoy the outdoors! How we really want to be forced to walk around in protective radiation suits?

Why is there an ozone hole in the first place? The reason is a group of chemicals called CFC's that are used for air conditioning, refrigeration, electronics, packaging, and more. A company named DuPont is producing these ozone destroying chemicals. The firm has recently been marketing alternative chemicals that are supposedly safer but they contain chlorine, the real enemy of ozone.

Seventer or later, DuPont will realize that there are more environmentally safe alternatives like water based solvents and cooling systems.

This is just one of the overwhelming global issues we are facing right now, but should you feel helpless? NO! You should feel outraged! Do you feel it? GOOD! Now let's put that emotion into action! What can you do? Write to DuPont and I ask them what they're doing to end production of CFC's and unsafe alternatives? Tell them to use safe alternatives like water based solvents and cooling systems, and bromine refrigeration. I demand that they use part of their huge public relations budget to inform the public about the long term personal health and hemisphere problems that their chemicals are promoting.

Demand that the EPA initiate a ban on the production of CFC's and their unsafe alternatives and propose this plan for an international treaty.

It will only take five minutes to write a couple of letters, but it could make a lifetime of difference for you and your future! Please write now! Edgar Woodard, Chairman and CEO, DuPont Corporation, 100 Market Street, Wilmington, DE 19899.

All need to work together

GEORGE SIMON
Asst. Business Manager

As we move farther along this Spring semester, some of us are questioning some of the existing water and some are working. But, ultimately, one way or another, we are all in this together. Students, peers, faculty, staff, and administration.

No man is an island entire of itself and we are. Without Bowers Harper College. Regardless of social rank, academic achievement, job title, or department or the letter on our parking sticker we stand united by our mutual association with this learning institution.

And just what is this place? We call Harper? Many things to many people and poor laborers for assistance to students in a variety of disciplines.

Utilizing these and other available resources is the key to success both here and beyond the safe confines of 1200 West Algonquin Rd.

All of the available resources are there for our use. It is up to us to determine our need. It is also important to recognize that we can often gain optimum benefit from such resources long before we need them.

Understanding the unified nature of this institution should lead us to a better recognition of the resources that are available to all of us. In addition to a wealth of past and present resources there exist many other academic resources.

Labs and learning centers abound and are staffed by helpful, knowledgeable personnel. There is a training center on the lower level of building E employing highly professional

The second issue is the reason that more publicity should be made for those people who are 18-21 on places to meet others in a social situation, which doesn't happen very often on the campus.

Thank you for the invitation for suggestions and comments and I hope I have helped you in some way.

PAUL FLOREN
 Binder Columnist

It was the best adversity I've ever been through (along with dieting for lack of grocery funds, but that's another column). I was finally going out and having a life rather than living out dreams of one through characters in a visual jukebox. Freed from the bonds of the black box, I began doing some thing new living. I now see how sad it was to be cowed, mind and soul, by such a ruthless media tool.

Everyone will at sometime know someone who would rather sit home alone and watch the cast of 90210 go out for pizza than to go out with real friends for real pizza (even when those friends are buying!).

It's already at the point where it's socially acceptable to be that way. The boob tube has an extremely strong pull on society and culture.

Which is funny since it is also one of the least mandatory for a culture to function well and thrive. But we've been putting more weight in the last the stands on the TV, and it would be disastrous if it was pulled out from under. Euphemistically and literally the entire United States would collapse.

I realize that many things I should've learned through life experience, I acquired as a dedicated Child Of The Tube. Everything from learning the alphabet to philosophy. Staring for hours on end into the well-lit, commercial-ridden, box o' good times has stemmed from a normal habit into a form of meditation. I know what it means

Paranoids: I've seen it, I've had it. I've conquered it. The world inside the box would have you believe that head-shaved people are probably Nazi's, that D&D players confuse reality with fantasy, and long haired males are on drugs.

That if you wear an oversized basketball team jacket, you're a yuppie. Unless you're black, then you're probably a gangbanger.

These are fantasies for anyone who's close to the issue, but somewhere some one is deciding these stereotypes are feeding them to impressionable children and hermit like old folks. And paranoid teenagers.

Would you watch a half hour of only commercials? You do if the pre-emptive is a two hour TV special.

Fifty seven channels and the only things on are Gomer Pyle reruns and more, and a little more.

But hey, you've li grown up now. You'd rather be enlightened by bloody assaults, rapes, wars, plane crashes and other assorted ads for evil on America's favorite gameshow, The Evening News.

Why continue to have your intelligence insulted by marketing companies and scriptwriters who, by all slang definition, suck? Why be mesmerized by mindless programming? You certainly become less productive when your catnap.

And becomes I'm paranoid, I car rambic on about the television's dis nent global dominance. Soon they'll be every where: back, billboards, stag lights, train stations, restaurant booth classrooms, public washrooms, con

It's comforting to know that, some time in the future, I simply won't miss a mind of my own. But until then, I'll have to make the best of living with my own foolish decisions based on life experience. Only from now on, that experience won't include the influence

Funds formed for HIV education

Cook County Board President Richard J. Phelan and the Cook County Department of Public Health (CCDPH) are pleased to announce the availability of funds to support HIV/AIDS prevention education projects in communities in suburban Cook County. Using federal funds, CCDPH intends to make available five to eight awards of $2,000-$3,000 for projects conducted during the period May 1, 1993 to Dec. 31, 1993.

Grants will be awarded to nonprofit organizations which serve African-American and Hispanic persons through community-based organizations within the Health Department's jurisdiction. Agencies eligible to apply include minority organizations who may or may not be currently providing HIV/AIDS education to their constituents, governmental agencies serving predominantly minority clients or community members, or other local community-based organizations which have established ties into suburban racial and ethnic minority communities. Collaborative efforts among these types of agencies are especially encouraged.

"The number of cases of HIV infection and AIDS continues to increase within suburban Cook County. The proportion of cases among minorities has risen dramatically in the last few years," said Dr. Karen L. Scott, Director, CCDPH. Since 1990, 40% of all AIDS cases reported received by CCDPH have been in African-American and Hispanic.

"We are now in the second decade of the epidemic. We still have neither a vaccine nor a cure. Prevention remains our best strategy to slow the spread of HIV in our communities," said "Cook County Board President Richard J. Phelan.

According to Scott, the purpose of this grant program is to encourage the development and provision of innovative community-based HIV prevention programs with and for racial and ethnic minorities that have been disproportionately affected with HIV disease, to establish collaboration among community organizations with the Cook County Department of Public Health, and to evaluate the effectiveness of HIV prevention programs for which support is provided.

All grant proposals must be received by the Cook County Department of Public Health, 1010 Lake St. Ste 300, Oak Park, IL 60301, by 5 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 26, 1993.

For more information on the project, call Kathy Gerneth, HIV/STD Administrator at 445-2437 or Stacy Baker, HIV Prevention Education Coordinator at 445-2530, Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 4:15 p.m.

Persons needing accommodations for a disability should call 445-2400 or TDD (Telecommunication Device for the Deaf) 445-2406.

Display celebrates Black History Month in LRC

KENNETH DILLARD
Editor in Chief

Look, there's a letter to Malcolm X. And right over there is a copy of a book of poetry signed by the author, Langston Hughes. In that poster do nothing the Black Panthers.

These items, and many others, were displayed Feb. 8-11, in the library, to celebrate Black History Month.

The basic idea was to display that emphasized the role of blacks in history, as opposed to focusing on the entertainment aspect.

"D'Anne Barley came to us with the idea of a display," said Michael Neuman, student activities coordinator. "Her father had correspondence with many prominent black leaders such as Malcolm X, Jesse Jackson and Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr."

Barley's father, Dan Barley, is the founder of Jet magazine.

"We wanted people to be made more aware of the civil rights movement," said Neuman. "We even had documents from Elijah Muhammad. Muhammad was a Muslim leader who influenced Malcolm X and wrote columns describing the state of blacks before the civil rights movement."

Also featured in the display were items that represented Rev. King, Malcolm X, Langston Hughes and the Black Panthers.

Duplicated of the original documents were made and the originals were returned to Barley.

While no plans have been finalized, Neuman hopes to have the display on a yearly basis. "Every year, we can see the display," Neuman said.

Neuman hopes that if the display is put up every year, it will inspire a yearly historical event to be made to keep it current.

HARPER GRADS TRANSFER TO ROOSEVELT SIMPLY, SWIFTLY, SUCCESSFULLY.

Each year, hundreds of Harper graduates transfer to Roosevelt University's Arlington Heights campus to complete their bachelor's degrees because Roosevelt is the northeast suburb's largest, most comprehensive university.

Harper students Kathy Wrobel and Dan Liu tell why they chose Roosevelt:

"Roosevelt accepted all my Harper credits, and registration was a breeze," Kathy says. "The campus location was ideal."

"Roosevelt gave me a scholarship," Dan explains. "And all my Harper credits were accepted. I particularly like the small classes, and the fact that the campus is close to home."

If you're interested in joining Roosevelt University's many successful Harper students, come visit us or call an admissions counselor at 708-437-9200 to let us help you plan your transfer.

Local bands rock Harper 'Untamed...' lame

Two energetic rock bands will appear on concert here on Friday, February 26 at 7:30 pm at the Building 1 Theater.

Steve Gerlach, guitarist and vocalist, along with his brother Tom, bass player and vocalist, and John Carpenter, drummer, form the Chicago trio, Phantom Heberts. Their dynamic energy has been compared to names of Hendrix and Husker Du and a "cross between Soundgarden and REM with some Tom Petty thrown in."

In their first two years, Phantom Heberts built a following, sharing the stage with numerous local and national bands, including the Cave Dogs, Smashing Pumpkins, Material, Iron Dweil Zeppelin, Driven N' Cryin and many others. They also showed twice at the Midwest Music, once at South by Southwest in Austin, TX and also at CMJ Music Marathon in NYC.

The past year has continued the constant frenzy of activity. Confident that they could produce a new record on their own label, the Heberts set out for the studio. Two days later Phantom Heberts emerged with final mixes for nine of the tracks on their recent release "Lovers Worth Learning."

The 12 track CD was completed by mastering three songs previously recorded with Timothy Powell. There isn't a relentless collection of uncompromised, hard rocking, tunes from start to finish.

By mid-September 1992, WXXI added the first single, "Don't," to their rotation. WCBR and other stations in the Chicago area quickly followed.

Buster Soundcheck, a southwest suburban, Chicago group with a first class guitarist and writer Paul Kamp, Don Supper, Drummer/vocalist, and Chris Kison, vocalist/bassist. They are "metal heads at heart," who admire Rush, Thin Lizzy and Led Zeppelin.

Buster Soundcheck is a highly musical heavy rock trio, originally formed in Joliet, Illinois. The band has impressed the critics and blown away audiences off coast the eastern half of the U.S. since forming about three years ago. The band has been building a strong fan base by touring almost 120 shows in 1992 and by their growing discography (three studio releases, one "single" live CD, compilation appearances, and a new single due soon).

Their live shows tend to impress even the most jaded audience members due to the solid songs, versatility, and obvious instrumental skills. Their appeal is younger crowds like the go for broke exuberance and, at times, strident dynamics and overpowering heaviness. For older fans, the Hendrix and Led Zeppelin references in their live shows keep "one coming back for more."

Buster Soundcheck has accomplished almost everything on their own up to this point. Their musical style is one of a kind due to many years playing and listening to music, starting at very young ages. Components include grooves from three decades of rock and across many genres. This is no "live of the day" band. In 1991 the band is already planning several releases and will have an even busier touring schedule.

Tickets are $7 with discounts for students with current ID cards and may be purchased from the Harper College Box Office, ext. 3447.

"Metroland's John Mayer presents 'UNTAMED III: ART' starring Christine Slater, Marisa Tomei, and Jesse Peretz. Caroline (Marisa Tomei) is a waitress in a Minneapolis diner. She appears in her ongoing, on/off-on and on/off-on. She (like us) is her boss's mistress and is constantly gabbing with her co-worker and best friend Cindy (Jesse Peretz). But her art of confidence is only a front.

Adam (Christine Slater), a beauty in the same diner, is smitten with Caroline. A gentle misfit who rarely speaks, he shyly admires Caroline from a room the restaurant. He furiously follows her home each evening to make sure she arrives safely. But he is much too timid to tell her how he feels. For within Adam he has a secret that sets him apart from the others. However, Caroline isn't like all the others. She knows a lot about broken hearts, and Adam's is in need of mending." This is MGM's description of their new flick, "Untamed Heart," which was recovered at a student screening down town attended by Tasha Ponce and Nicole Brady. Now, doesn't this sound lame?

The description leads the reader to believe that the movie focuses on Adam's secrets and his shyest love with Caroline. However, the movie focuses equally on Adam's and Caroline's volatile attitudes and their mutual support of each other. Adam is a natural hermit, and Caroline, a born loner, don't make sense on their own, although together they help each other overcome their problems.

Tasha thinks that the movie was entertaining, however predictable, overly dramatic, and about as lame as MGM's description. Nicole, although disappointed with the end, thought the movie was an heart warming and an overall good film. Both Tasha and Nicole agree there were a few low ends in which they were very interested about Adam's "career" and the plight of Adam's dog without name.

Both items were left unreviewed and problematic to some viewers who might have been more interested in the dog than the characters. After the screening there was a press conference in which they asked Mr. Slater about his life and what he felt about the movie. Slater appeared to be interested in answering questions and meeting the public. Tasha and Nicole discovered Mr. Slater's personal goal: "to get through life without hating anyone." He stated that Adam's vulnerable and sensitive qualities were challenging because in the past he has played crazy and outgoing characters like in "Heathers" and "Pump Up the Volume." In the future he would like to play more normal, mentally and physically healthy roles. Slater summed up the movie by saying, "This movie has a lot of heart in it." (No pun intended.)

Guest Reporter

Kathy Kuzile performed Thursday Feb. 11 in P205 on the harp.

Kuzile explained the history of the harp which dates back to the Iron and Stone. The first time a harp found the string in a new world produce a tone was the first time a harp was played.

Although history is interesting, Kuzile's playing was the real show.

Cage's piece, "In A Landscape" (1948), was a surprise. Usually Cage writes avant garde music that challenges performers and audiences, but "Landscape" was an experimental piece written with the Black Mountains in North Carolina as a backdrop.

Kuzile recalls of the late Cage as the composer who once had a pianist sit at a piano for 4:35 and play nothing. Cage later stated that this piece ("4:35") was an audience participation piece. The activity of the audience during the "performance" constituted the performance.

How do you get to the NBA All-Star game? It's the shoes

Lee Fehman
Harbinger Sports Columnist

I would like to start this week with a suggestion for our readers. If you don't like what is printed on the sports page each week, do something about it. The staff at the Harbinger is usually open to suggestions. I say usually because they won't do something like jump off the Sears Tower, unless everybody else did first. You can leave your school e-mail address in the Harbinger office or just staple them to any editor you find running the halls.

I guess I should start writing something that relates itself to sports or they (my editors) might leave this in the cellular file, i.e. the wastebasket. My beef for the week is the hullabaloo about the NBA All-Star game. Some Chicago Bulls fans think Horace Grant was snubbed by the fans by not making the team. Sure, he's a good player but you have to be a star, hence the name. A sure sign of stardom these days is a multi-million dollar shoe contract, and I haven't seen any Air Max ads lately. He would be a top-tier player if he had a shoe contract for the team, but it's up to the fans to put the team.

Speaking of the fans, I can't seem to figure out where there heads were at when they voted Shaquille O'Neal as starter. How a formidable player and meets the shoe requirements, but he hasn't even played one full season yet. Patrick Ewing is an established superstar and deserves the starting position. Shaq will have a long career in the NBA and will get into a half dozen or so All-Star games, so let the better man play now. One last thing about the way the team is picked, and I'll move on. I agree with having the fans pick the players, but I believe the coaches should be allowed to pick the starting lineup. This would keep certain players, though talented, from being taken over by deserving players just because they sound familiar, but I know that sounds more like you understand wanted to make sure you understood I wasn't limiting myself to the 15 wing.

I'll close this week with a comment or two about Chicago's favorite star, Mike. I whole heartedly agree with the suspension he received for the showing match he got into with Reggie Miller. Michael Jordan is the premier sports person for the league and should not be pulled into unnecessary fighting. He definitely came out to throw a punch or not at Reggie Miller. Michael Jordan would be the same as Miller, there would not have been any problems. The league was an injustice and righted in a way that can only be considered.

Maybe he'll think twice before escalating next time.

Spring athletes begin practice for fresh start to new season

Jim Wakara
Sports Editor

As the winter athletes begin to shake their winter, preparation for spring sports have begun.

Earlier larger numbers of athletes in individual talent has such spring team that's earned the season as far as looking forward to a better season than last year. Here's an overview of how the individual teams stack up.

Baseball

Head Coach: Norm Garrett
Last year's record: 16-24
Top losses: Brandon Kasher, Keith Cullen.

Team's strong points: defense, pitching, team speed.

Weak points: lack of power hitting.
Coach's comment: "I think it will be an exciting team to watch."

Softball

Head Coach: Jennifer Lounsbury
Edison's note: The women's team has yet to begin practice at press time. However, Coach Lounsbury would like any female athletes interested in playing softball to contact her at 469-4928.

Tennis

Head Coach: Roger King
Last year's record: 11-0 (conference champions).
Top returners: Chris Manning and Justin Eggstaff.
Top losses: Dave Pitting and Dave Tye.
Team's strong points: variety to win.

Weak points: lack of numbers

Coach's comment: "We're always looking to win conference or regionals."

Men's Track

Head Coach: Renee Zeller
Last year's record: won region championship.
Top returners: Ed Colleton, Steve Danza, Ralph Gardner, Chip Holmstrom, Mike Madara, and Sal Saccomanno.
Top losses: Rob Fagan and Doug Taber.

Team's strong points: everything but speed.

Weak points: prints.

Coach's comment: "I think this is a team that will be remembered and Harper can really be proud of."

Women's Track

Editors note: Also look to coach Zeller, no information was available on the women's track team at press time.

An intramural report: A new addition to the sports page

As part of our never ending effort of improving your sports page, Harbinger Sports will now be reporting on the highlights and results of the intramural programs.

Our first report comes from basketball games played on Feb. 11. Three games were featured on the opening night of the nine team IM Basketball League last Thursday evening.

Nidwange #329 66- Prime Time 25

Showing balance scoring throughout the game, Skarnage pulled away from a 24-13 half time lead to offer a rough welcome to the IM League for the Prime Time five with a 68-25 victory. Scott, Spargue and Hawkins all earned double figures for the winners, while Clay Fray had 16 for the losers.

Bears 80 An IM Team 76

In the best game of the night, the Bears overcame a 43-29 deficit in the half with a late run to top the IM Team. Most impressive was the fact that the Bears played the last several minutes with four men on the floor while still trailing late in the game. Two players substituted, one being leading scorer S. Huber, who finished the night with 27 points. Moore had 29 and Baggett 22 for the IM Team.

Unouchabulls 55 Court Justice 40

The Unouchabulls outlasted the Court Justice in a closely played contest in the evening final. Expanding slowly upon a narrow 23, 21 half time lead, Kelley and Emery had the hot hands in the second half to put away Court Justice.

While getting balanced scoring throughout the long Court Justice could not string together enough scoring attempts to overcome their steady fire.

Anyone interested in playing in on the intramural can contact Jim Ryan, intramural coordinator in the physical education office (ex. 2466).

A step ahead

The winter season keeps slowing down here at Harper. The season is preparing for their regional and national. While the winter teams are ending their seasons, the spring teams are just beginning.

The wrestling Hawks are gearing up for the NCAA Regionals this Saturday at 9:30 a.m. Underneath this season, they will host the NCAA Regionals IV tournament.

After playing their last game of the regular season Feb. 18, both the men's and women's Basketball teams will travel to Montrose Valley, Saturday.

Starting times are 5 p.m. for women and 7 p.m. for the men.

The men's and women's swim team will compete in the NCAA Regionals at the College of DuPage. They start at 10 a.m. on both Friday and Saturday.

Starting off their season, within the next few weeks will be all spring athletes. Men's tennis begins at home against Wakeham on March 30 at 2 p.m.

The first baseball game will be on March 20 at noon against Blackhawk in Midvale. Softball begins at home April 5, against Triton at 3 p.m. And finally, the track team will travel to compete in the Wheaton Open at noon on March 27 to begin their season.

at 117 wins, overall and 11 losses, against teams with as many as 11 wins. "It's been the longest two months in my career," Cregar said after the game.

As the team looks toward the playoffs, the emphasis is on a win. "We've got everything to win, and nothing to lose," Cregar said. "We're saving the best for last. We just have to go out, play hard, and expect a win," he added.

The turnout at Tuesday's game was very good, and the crowd really got into it certain points during the game. It is hoped that this enthusiasm will continue into the play-off rounds, beginning next week. The team's probability of the first round with the Joliet, who the Hawks lost to on Tuesday, February 9, IM 88. Coach Cregar is very optimistic about this game. "We're going to win this game as a conference match up," he stated. "We're going to go out there and play to win."

Basketball teams split results in end of home seasons

Men play tough game, but fall to Illinois Valley

Chris Peterson
Harbinger Sports Writer

The Harpemen's basketball team ended their regular season home schedule against conference rivals the same way they began it, with a loss. However, they made the game look close and are feeling optimistic as they look to the playoffs.

The team took an early lead, 16-0, but then slipped off and allowed their opponent, Illinois Valley, to take over the tempo of the first half, leading at half time, 34-12. Head Coach Ron Crigger admitted the team looked sluggish during the first half. "We played poorly throughout most of the half," he said. "And there was only one way to go. We made some adjustments on both offense and defense and took Illinois Valley out of their rhythm in the second half."

The second half turned to Harper's favor, out scoring Illinois Valley, 48-41. The Hawks were as close as 11 points in the last three minutes of the game before losing by a score of 95-80. Despite the loss, Crigger was pleased with the team's effort. "We played good in the second half, so there was a silver lining to the dark cloud tonight."

In adding the Hawks to a scoring was Sam Dornish, who scored 27 points. "Sam was our emotional leader tonight," Crigger said. "His wonder leader on the bench, he was the leader at half time." Brad Cronin (skipped on 20 points).

The team began the season with a full roster of players, but the numbers have dwindled down to seven players for Tuesday's game. According to Crigger, "We lost a lot of players to injuries, and sometimes because of a really hard season. We lost a lot of depth and flexibility, and this problem requires a lot of strategy," he said.

The Hawks' current record stands at 8 wins, 11 losses (over 1992 season 11).

Women pull out win in final minutes of thriller

Jim Walama
Sports Editor

For one last time on the home court, the lady Hawks definitely left their fans with something to remember Tuesday night.

The women's basketball team ended their home season in an exciting win over Illinois Valley on Feb. 18, 68-64 in front of a wall, happy crowd. Taking the team they had beaten by 10 points earlier in the season, the Hawks started the game in a real situation tonight had little doubt. "As expected, the good girls rallied back. Before long, the score was 9-7 in favor of the home team, and they were on their way to victory."

At half time the score was 30-20 in favor of Harper, and from that point on the team was able to overpower the other until the end. With 30 seconds left on the clock and Harper only leading 63-62, Julie Craven was fouled while making a field goal. She completed the three point play, and a back of relief fell on the faces of everyone but the Illinois Valley team.

At the final buzzer, it was obvious which team should have won to begin with. While the Hawks left the court smiling and laughing, the TV team looked hurt. Both physically and emotionally. Leading scorer Kerry Glaser (30 points) said simply of the game, "We were no angels."

After losing their last six games, the team could have given the team some momentum in their regular play off beginning Saturday away against Marquette Valley at 5 p.m.

While the lady Hawks expected to control the game by a larger margin, the win still feels good to head coach Jennifer Cronin who said, "It's nice to close out the home season with a win."

Sam Dornish (24) heads in for a lay-up in the Hawks' last home game.

Eye on the Hawks

How would you like to pick up the morning newspaper, turn to the sports page and see nothing but the scores and highlights? The audience at the arena could have told you about these games.

The point I have to make this week, in case you haven't noticed, involves the fight for journalism. Reporters at locker rooms in sports journalism. Journalists have the right, for now at least, to enter the locker room of sporting events to get the news while it's "fresh." This right makes relatively good sense to me, being a journalist myself, because the emotions of a contest quickly begin to dissipate at the end of the event.

Athletes should realize that being in sports will eventually find its coverage by the press (yes, even when it's Harper). While it may be considered rude to ask questions of a person immediately after a tough loss, news is news and it needs to be reported. This is the case unless, however, the general public speaks directly to the press and says, "I don't want to read about the loss, the disappointment and the glamour of the sporting world."

When that day comes, I'm positive the wonderful world of journalism will simply flourish out about to happen. Take a look at Jeffrey Dahmer, the Brown's Chicken murders or Amy Fisher's story. There are not cases of the press "over covering" events. The newspapers and news programs on TV just gave the victims press until interest disappeared. The same situation exists in the sporting world. Reporters don't enter the locker room because they want to find information for their news. They do it because the general public wants to know what's going on.

related and changed. Sometimes talking to a reporter about the game, whether good or bad, helped with my outlook of the entire game. Getting back on track, a locker room is a place for athletes, it's not a press room.

Look at it from the losing team's point of view, they don't even want to be bothered. That's the reporter in me speaking along with the athlete.

If the reporter would just wait until the team emerges, the response would be more positive. There would be no rush to push them away. Also more honest answers would be given, rather than those out of aggravation.

Since I've been a sport reporter for a while, I realize waiting 20 minutes is much better than harrumphing in the locker room (which I have yet to do) and bothering the team. The wait is worth it.

Now if the team does win, perhaps reporters should catch them before they enter, while they're still excited.

What I'm trying to say is that no one should be allowed to anyone's locker room. Reporters need to have patience or catch the team before they go into the locker room. I know that Jim has waited about that's our right as reporters to go into the locker room, but he's just jealous that he's never had a chance to enter one of an opposing gender's

The topics which Jim and I have chosen this week in "should reporters be allowed in locker rooms?" The approach which I have taken is understanding and a reporter can take either side. Both are arguable, but it's all up to the reporters and the athletes as to whether or not they are allowed in.

January halts recent senate action

KENNETH DELANE
Editor-in-Chief

Student Senate President Charles January used his power of veto twice the past week to make changes in student government.

In a letter read aloud in last Friday's meeting, January nullified three recent appointments approved by the senate.

Michael Dulan, former student development senator, Ken Hanson, former student senate and Campus Yurp!, former student trustee association, were all revoked.

"I Charles January Jr. hereby veto the student senate's last three appointments as follows..." read Lisa Smith, student senate trustee, quoting the letter to the senate.

Reaction to the letter brought response that was both angry and questioning.

"This proves his ineffectiveness as a leader," said Dulan. "He contradicts himself constantly."

"I am utterly shocked, especially since he recruited me," said Hanson.

Yurp! expressed dismay and stated that January "could have done this in person."

January also vetoed the recent dismissal of Debra Jones as student senate trustee, allowing for a special meeting of the senate to be held late Tuesday night.

"With Debra back in the senate, we had a quorum, which allowed us to hold our meeting," January said.

During the meeting, the senate approved changing the meeting time of the senate from its original time of every other Friday, 1:30 p.m. to every other Saturday at 4:30 p.m.

The location of the meetings did not change, staying in A115.

"I felt that our meeting time was not beneficial to the majority of our student body," January said.

"Most of our students attend class on the evening, so we decided to change the times to accommodate those interested in attending the meeting."

Joanne Pankratz, student activist director, could not be reached for comment.

In other changes in the senate, Hachery Komal was admitted to the senate under the AELS program, nullifying Hanson's position in the senate.

Both decisions have caused some controversy among the senate, and have added to the number of problems that have faced the senate earlier this year.

Previous arguments that year have arisen over proper plans of command in the senate, who is in control of the student activity fee and student use of building M.

Alumni Association seeking members

Students have opportunity to become actively involved in school events

Tom Fuller
News Editor

Coming soon, the William Rainey Harper Alumni Association, formed by the administration, will be seeking out staff and those who would like to become a member.

"Right now it is in its formative stages," says Mike Hink, coordinator of campus information and facilities and who is also a member. "But quite a few people have already pledged 40 or so."

Hink says that the alumni association is a way for the students to communicate with Harper and for them and what they can do for Harper.

"No meetings have been held as of yet, but Recruitment Office is planning a holding session in an informal lunch at Schenckberg and Williams. Willingness to people if we can get it what is going on."

Charles Mill, of the Development Office, says the purpose is to promote growth, reputation and resources of Harper.

"We want to improve the educational opportunities and to develop closer relationships among members of the alumni," Mill says.

The first organizational meeting will be held sometime in early summer, while a reception is scheduled for July.

"In the planning, we hope to have merchandise, such as t-shirts, at both open and closed campus activities and fundraisers," Mill said.

The alumni association is a voluntary group, and there is no dues or membership fee.

Employees, according to Hink, say they feel active in business is to bring out people together and then to officially organize the meeting.

people have joined the alumni, it is to hold elections and elect officers," Hink said.

"Then we can establish a mission, or goal, statement to the group and go about with their plans," he added.

The way in which members will be obtained is through the 25th Literary Reception, advertising in the College, mailing to all new graduates and mailing members of existing departmental groups.

"We want to have a reception at the library and have a special opportunity people," Hink said. "Many people have a library copy of our meeting the ad for the alumni in the College," he also said.

will begin a major fund-raising campaign in consultation with the administration and the Board of Trustees.

Hink says that special seminars will be offered, along with study tours and cultural events.

There is a $5 entry fee that goes toward the expenses of the association.

College made more affordable

COURAGE PRESS SERVICE

All full-time undergraduate college students should be eligible to receive $14,000 in federal aid through a combination of grants and loans, according to a congressional study on how to make college affordable for more Americans.

While "Making College Affordable Again" suggests that the amount of funds available to all should be equal, the type of aid should vary according to financial need and tuition costs. The poorest students would receive more grants and students from richer families would be eligible for unsubsidized loans, where interest accrues throughout the life of the loan, including the time the student is in school, the proposal said.

The report, the result of two years' study by the National Commission on Responsibility for Federal Postsecondary Education, calls for recommendations from STEP, or the Student's Total Education Package. It suggests that STEP would streamline the current federal financial aid system.

Under the STEP recommendation, each student would be eligible for about $14,000. The program assumes a maximum federal grant of $4,000 and a combined maximum work study and federally subsidized loan awarded $10,000.

The federal loan system should cut its bureaucracy and provide "user friendly" repayment options for students, the report recommends. It also supports President Clinton's community service option by suggesting that 20 percent of loan principal be given for every year of service, with a maximum of three years of service available.

"Many college students today graduate with debts that exceed their family's home mortgage payments," said Daniel Cheever, Jr., president of the American Student Association, one of the country's biggest federal student guaranty agencies.

Cheever praised the study, saying, "The commission's report forcefully and creatively tackles one of the major threats to the stability of our nation's higher education system, the affordability crisis."

The report points out that in the 1980s, the cost of attending college skyrocketed 126 percent, twice the rate of inflation for the decade. In fact, the cost of going to college increased even more than the cost of health care during the decade, the report said.

"The most productive step the federal government can take in strengthening the postsecondary education financing partnership is to lead by example," the report's authors wrote.

The Education Planners Council, a non-profit member association of state student loan secondary market organizations, applauded the commission's efforts, but offered a few criticisms, as well.

"The report fails to emphasize the dramatic improvements delivered to students in last year's reauthorization of the Higher Education Act," the council said.

The council also criticized the report's drastic lending concept because the administrative costs of such a project "will be transferred to colleges and universities and create upward pressure on tuition while reducing a student's financial options at the same time."

School recruiting hits low this year

COURAGE PRESS SERVICE

Although employers are expecting to hire more college graduates this year, recruiting efforts on campuses are expected to be lower than in previous years, a study by the College Placement Council found.

"Students will have to be more flexible in the types of positions they want to take," said Lynn Oberman, a national services specialist with the College Placement Council. "Many came into school four years ago in hopes of landing a job with a major corporation in a particular area of the country. They will have to be willing to relocate, perhaps work for a smaller employer and not expect high salaries."

In the survey, 316 employers said they plan to hire more graduates this year than they did in 1992. Overall, the firms said they expect hiring 7.7 percent more graduates than they did in 1992.

Services employers were planning to increase hiring by 12.5 percent, and manufacturing employers were projecting a 5.4 percent increase. Government and non-profit organizations, however, were decreasing their college hires by 18.4 percent because of hiring freezes and downsizing.

Oberman said because of travel costs and increasing college fees, employers were planning to cut back both recruiting efforts and wages to college and university campuses this spring.

Nearly 40 percent of the employers are decreasing the number of campus hires they will want, the survey said, and will want 11.3 percent fewer campus hires in the 1992-93 recruiting season than they did last year. They will want an average of 23 campuses this year.

compared with an average of 24 campuses last year.

Firms can be picky in their hiring this year, the report said. "The 1991-92 job market for new college graduates was a buyer's market -- and 1992-93 promises to be more of the same," the report said.

Part of the reason is that with many companies restructuring and eliminating jobs, there are fewer job openings, analysts said. And depending on the major, there is a glut of certain jobs in the market. Salaries and job availability in health related fields are still growing, but other areas, such as aerospace engineering and the humanities, are shrinking.

Graduates from nursing programs can expect initial salary offers to rise 7.2 percent to $31,132. Allied Health graduates also gained, posting a 3.8 percent increase for an average of $30,555.

Starting salary offers for electrical and mechanical engineers increased only slightly (1.7 percent and 1.4 percent respectively) because there is a surplus of these graduates. The unemployment rate of job offers to aerospace engineers reported to the College Placement Council has fallen. In 1989-90, aerospace represented 4.2 percent of all engineering jobs offered, and it has fallen to an estimated 1.6 percent this year.

The situation remains about the same for humanities and social sciences graduates: salaries are remaining flat and are lower.

Starting salary offers for humanities graduates are expected to be 2.7 percent lower than last year for an average of $22,541.

Social sciences graduates saw their initial salary offers rise slightly to an average of $21,621.

Slow incline of aid

COURAGE PRESS SERVICE

College students who expected rapid improvements in financial aid under President Clinton's administration will be disappointed by the most recent news coming out of the nation's capital.

Education Secretary Richard Riley said budget problems will prevent the government from increasing the current $2,500 Pell grants to individual students right now.

In addition, President Clinton's plan to let students work off college debts through community service, the proposed National Service Trust Fund, likely will be phased in gradually over a period of time, rather than launched in a massive program, White House assistants said.

Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said the new administration is facing a deficit that is $60 billion higher than it was last year when Clinton proposed the National Service Trust Fund. The president "had to consider a lot of his options based on the higher deficit estimates," she said at a February 4 news conference.

Riley said "it takes too many funds on the collegiate level in one of our first public appearances when he warned that his department will probably be unable to offer much financial aid and moderately because of budget cuts."

"I don't want to be sad and dingy," Riley said at a meeting of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities (NAICU), which represents about 1,600 private colleges. But that's exactly what he did.

Raising the maximum grant to needy college students from $2,500 to $4,000, as recent proposals have suggested, is "not possible under the current circumstances," he said.

During his campaign, Clinton promised to increase dramatically the amount of financial aid for higher education. Clinton also said one of his top priorities was to give any person, regardless of income, the opportunity to go to college. Working in public service after graduation would be a means of paying off college loans.

But Riley said these plans will have to be phased in more slowly than the new administration had anticipated.

"I don't like it -- you don't like it," he said at the meeting.

Riley has not elaborated on his comments since the February 4 speech, and Department of Education officials said they had no new information to add.

Riley's sobering new came on the heels of a congressionally mandated report that called for a plan that would require about $7 billion in government funding to enable every college student to receive some form of financial aid.

According to reports at The Washington Post, the Education Department has been one of the most neglected in the federal government, and some of its computers are so outdated they are nearly useless.

Riley said he recently learned that his department's budget deficit was $400 million worse than what he had expected because of miscalculations. Part of the department's shortfalls stems from debt incurred during the last year when $2 billion more was doled out in college grants than was available.

COLLEGE NEWS UPDATE

Free seminar provides health tips

"Healthy and Hearty Smart Shopping," free information seminar aimed at teaching participants how to take charge of their health, is being held March 5, 8-9 p.m. in M1615.

Participants will learn how to read food labels for nutritional value as well as for fat and sodium content. Judy Schenkel, RD, will demonstrate how easy it can be to analyze the foods we eat and how to make some simple dietary changes that will make a healthy difference.

This seminar is part of the Free Health Enhancement Series. To register, please call the Human Performance Laboratory ext. 2468.

Women's workshops

Resources for Women will be offering the following workshop on March 6, 9 a.m. - 3 p.m.

Intervening with Impact, #LW008-001, will help participants discover how to convert the intervening process from a nerve-wracking ordeal to an opportunity to illustrate how their skills can benefit a company.

Discover "Discover - Recover Self Value, #LW008-001, will help participants explore how childhood events affect self image.

Tuition for each workshop is $25 plus a $10 fee which includes lunch. To register call 397-3377 and specify the correct workshop number.

Resources for Women is offering a workshop, "Responding to Sexual Harassment," March 3 and 4, 7:30 p.m. - 9 p.m. in A242b.

More than fifty percent of American women believe they have been victims of sexual discrimination. This workshop will address what is discrimination and teach participants how to be more assertive and respond to sexual pressure and behavior.

Tuition is $25 plus a $5 fee. To register, call 397-3377 and specify course #LW004-001.

Disabilities for one is no problem

Herrera is a learning disabilities specialist. This, she is acutely aware of the many barriers disabled people face.

Herrera knew Harper had a pool, but with her disability there was no way for her to use that facility in building M.

"I decided I needed some physical fitness," Herrera said. "In high school, I loved swimming, so I contacted Ben Cronenberg (Facilities Manager for building M). I told him a ladder wouldn't be enough for me."

Cronenberg knew of something that could help Herrera in her quest to swim again.

"We had a lift in the back of our soccer room," Cronenberg explained.

"I had them used to over a year." The Center for Student Disabilities is a support service providing accessibility for physically and learning disabled students.

"We work with the students one-on-one," she said.

There is a game plan in effect when a student reaches out for help.

"We first encourage self-advocacy," Herrera said. "Sometimes that's all it takes. Sometimes it takes intervention."

An example of an intervention might be to call an instructor to explain that a student may need extra time to finish an exam.

"We have about 250 students that we deal with," she said. "And thousands who call in."

Mammography screening offered

The American Cancer Society projects that fully one in ten women runs the risk of contracting breast cancer in her lifetime. Hence, regular mammograms are recommended - an initial mammogram between ages 35 and 39, every other year between ages 40 and 49 and annually after age 50. A mammogram is a painless, low exposure x-ray that can detect breast cancer years before you or your doctor can feel it - usually while it is still localized and with a high chance of cure.

The health service is pleased to bring the Victory Mobile Mammography Screening Service to campus for students, employees, faculty and community members on the following dates:

Mon	3/15	8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.
Tues	3/16	8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.
Wed	3/17	11:00 a.m. to 7 p.m.
Thurs	3/18	8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.
Fri	3/19	8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Victory mobile mammography vehicle is a state-of-the-art unit staffed by caring professionals from Victory Memorial Hospital, a community hospital in Waukegan, Ill. The vehicle, which will be located in front of A Building, is specially designed for your comfort, convenience and privacy.

The entire procedure takes only 20 minutes from entry to exit, including registration and a brief self-examination, educational video Advance scheduling is required and Victory has a toll free telephone number for the purpose: 1-800-677-XRAY.

The cost of the exam is only $60, including the radiologist's interpretation. Victory Mobile Mammography accepts cash, check, or MasterCard/VISA, and payment must be made at the time of service (not a Medicare provider).

In addition, under no Illinois law, commercial insurance must help pay the cost of mammography screenings. A receipt given which may be submitted with your claim form.

The exam results will be read by skilled Victory Memorial Hospital radiologists and a confidential report will be mailed to your physician within approximately five working days of your exam.

Victory recommends you telephone your doctor in about one week to obtain the results. Most offices will be glad to read you over the phone without an appointment.

If a follow-up physical exam is recommended, arrangements can be made with your physician at that time. Please have your physician's name, address and telephone number with you when you arrive for your appointment.

Mammography is a simple exam that can save your life and an important way to take control of your health.

Two students receive NRAEF scholarships

Two students in the Hospitality Management Department have received scholarships from the National Restaurant Association's Educational Foundation.

Susan P. LaQuatra, Ella Groer, and Jacqueline Trick, Schaumburg, are pursuing careers in hospitality management. Criteria for the scholarship includes grade point average, experience, career goals and commitment to the hospitality industry.

LaQuatra completed the Restaurant Management Development Program in December with a 4.0 grade average. He previously attended Harper and received a Business Management degree and continued his studies at DePaul. After working in business for a number of years and recognizing the downward trend, he decided to return to school to study food and hospitality management. He is currently interviewing and is hopeful about employment possibilities.

Jacqueline Trick has been a bookkeeper most in her working life.

In 1983 she owned and operated a housing stand which reinforced her desire to someday open a restaurant. She decided to pursue her dream and started by enrolling in Harper's Restaurant Management Development program. She definitely found her niche. Trick's grade point average, a 3.6, along with her commitment to the hospitality field, won her a scholarship from the National Restaurant Association which will pay for tuition to complete her Associate in Applied Science degree. She would like to teach in the field for a while and eventually open her own restaurant.

The Hospitality Management Program includes the National Restaurant Association Management Development Diploma program, certificate programs in Breads and Pastries, Culinary Arts, Hospitality management and the Associate in Applied Science hospitality degree. For further information about the course offerings, call ext. 2874.

EDITORIAL

Get your act into gear

The operative word for the last year has been change. For whatever sake it serves, people have used change as the reason for doing something. Now it is time for, yes, change at Harper. Specifically, change within the student government.

The entire school year has been a series of internal conflicts, bickering and unproductive sessions that have left no key decisions made. Obviously, this leaves the student body with a lack of interest in what the Senate does.

The lack of interest has apparently carried over into the Senate itself, as they have yet to prove any really distinguishing merits to make a person notice their existence this year.

The students who make up the senate are not bad people. They put their time and energy into trying, that's trying, to get some positive things done for the school.

But let's be honest. If the senate can't get things accomplished, then what is their purpose?

Maybe if there were a little bit of pressure from the students, or possibly a little bit of negotiation, then the school year could close out on a positive note.

As it stands now, they stand nowhere. I know some of the student executives. They seem genuinely interested. And I really think they want to do things.

So let's cut right to the chase. Here is an open challenge to the senate.

Please work together to get something accomplished that the school can be proud of. Whether it is a change in where student activity fees are spent or a change in senate laws, work together.

If this can't work, then we are faced with more of the same: gridlock.

-Kenneth Dillard

Beware of User Unfriendly

The byte in the hand that feeds your future

Pan Ficker

Harbinger Columnist

All I wanted was a loaf of bread, a container of milk, and a stick of butter. All I wanted was to pay and leave, but something was telling me not to. I think it was the lady behind the check-out counter.

I continued to wait until finally it was my turn. It was then that I came to realize why everything was moving so slowly. It was the beep and alarm that were not so silent about driving this poor poor woman into a sensory frenzy. She grabbed an item off the "Eat key and over eating help from hell," which was whispering itself into delirium, and wiped the product over a sheet of glass with little and variable light colors under it. SUDDENLY the machine with the big plastic condom over the human keypad twice and twice.

It was most annoying. However, the lady behind the counter (Luzzy Borden's sister, obviously) willingly repeated the process several times all with the same item, all with the same results.

With the counter several light years later, only I needed to return to buy some cotton because my suit was bleeding. I also bought some beer because if I was voluntarily going through this again, I'd have to be DRUNK!

I realized it wasn't her fault, it was that inefficient, cost ineffective, personally nerve damaging, insensitive "User" the computer "Userfriendly" and his cohorts: Scanner, Barizer, and Bill.

They make things so much more sensitive. It was so cold the old way picking up an item, trying in the UPC number, asking the customer for their money and giving them back their change. Industrial Corporate Planning (decision making mooms with too much money) had to do so. NOTHING about this mess. Now the worst (and recently, come exactly) lady had the chance to get to know her product. Now she had the time to become one with all those Pop-Tarts and the aura of the sofa covers behind her being.

But there is a darker side. Now User Unfriendly and his cohorts deploy their evil schemes to corrupt children and deafen adults by forcing this woman (one of his many brainwashed minions) to wipe each and every product over. Scanner the Red so he can laugh at all his hostages and threaten them with "You'll never get outta here ALIVE!" HA HA HA HA HA!" which in humans, sounds like two beeps and a siren. Oh, don't worry, most of the hostages are released unharmed.

But User has spread his domain of control as far as the public library. Just when you thought it was safe to say "I'm running in to get a book about computers Honey, I'll be right out," you find you have to wait in the queue with the other hostages, so you have to have your senses scrambled by the menacing "Master Card Catalogue on the main floor."

Compare Master of the Library Realm! Don't even THINK about looking for help from our benevolent Captain Dewey De Cima, they're nowhere to be found. Once again Industrial Corporate Planning makes things worse. And if User shuts down the night before the BIG PAIR, I discourage you from complaining. They won't even raise the volume of what they did to Captain C.C., although it's rumored that Dewey's evil twin now runs with User and his gang.

User Unfriendly seeks fear in the hearts of all who expect consistency, efficiency, and accuracy. He's been known to give false information to everyone from the military to the private sector. He's slowed down video games causing an occasional little megalomaniac to press so hard on the controller that they need to go buy new ones. That's how User takes the children hostage—by twisting them into jokers for his perverted, binary amusement at the tiny store checkout.

You can run, but you can't hide. User will eventually fixate you and get his army of lobotomized and mummy-into-to-consume all those in your vicinity that they want to emerge themselves with his high-tech, space-age, state-of-the-art equipment—AND GET THEM TO PAY FOR IT! All the while breaking down, causing computer crashes, dumping memory and making a mockery of human intelligence.

Once introduced into daily life, he can control the way people think. In fact, I've been witness to more than one occasion of a scenario like this. ME "So we need 40 square feet of plywood. How many 4 by 8 sheets is that?"

POOL "Wait! I'll get it" as he reaches for his calculator.

ME "Two sheets should do it."

ANAL RETENTIVE FOOL "Wait, was I UGH!" He retypes the diabolical equation—UH, one point five sheets."

ME "I still (sniffed chuckle) think we need ten."

PERPLEXED FOOL "Wait, Lemmy do it again. I must've hit a wrong bar."

After a pause the fool notices I'm at the checkout with two sheets already. He appears his hands and argues with me until he realizes that he's, indeed, a fool.

But User Unfriendly is no fool. And this is no faraday.

Beware the eventual random chaos. Beware the malarkey from common sense. Beware, my little Mevros, beware.

Letters To The Editor

Commentary prompts sharp criticism from reader

Dear George:
Your article regarding customer service in the February 2nd issue of The Harbinger was of great interest to me. Last summer of '92 I came to the Harbinger office and spoke with you about some information I put in The Harbinger. It was information concerning prospective older adult students interested in the Center for New Students & Orientation about an information session available to help them get started at Harper. You seemed nice enough at the time, and you would edit the article, send me a copy to confirm and put it in The Harbinger. After the next issue came out and I didn't hear from you, I called several times and left messages. No reply.

I came by your office and you were not in. I spoke with Suzanne Havlic and she told me to tape a note to your door. Not wanting you to miss it, I taped it to your computer screen. No reply. A couple more unanswered phone calls, and I gave up.

About this same time a co-worker of mine was also trying to get some information in The Harbinger and was having the same experience with you. She also gave up.

So, what you write those "in a position to act" and they don't act?

Action is the key and I urge you to act.
Sincerely,
Fran Larus
Center for New Students & Orientation

A response to the response

George Saxon

Asst. Business Manager

Yep, it's true.

The facts are there. I guess I will not dispute Mr. Larus's statements since I have no reason to doubt his good word nor his positive intentions. Nor will I deny that I was somewhat deficient in my duties. I am, after all, human and, like most of us, subject to errors in judgment and an occasional lapse of courtesy. For that I offer my most humble apologies to Mr. Larus and a brief explanation of the situation that led to my excusable lack of attention.

My interest in providing the service Mr. Larus desired is as genuine. My intentions were to complete my end of our oral agreement. However, circumstances arose in my personal life that caused me to make a painful decision at that time and shift my attention from the position of Assistant Manager of the Harbinger to my regular full-time job at a local school.

That alone does not justify my lack of response, nor shall it attempt to justify what sounds as blunder and blunder on both my public and self service. I would like to point out that despite Mr. Larus's repeated attempts to contact me I was not made aware of the situation until it was too late. Nor repeated attempts to contact myself were not ignored but rather, failed to reach me. Sometimes in mid-November I was passed a letter from Mr. Larus, dated November 1992, expressing his desire for assistance. Regrettably, at that time, I was not actively associated with the Harbinger and did not respond. Against my apologies and may this stand as a response.

Furthermore, I would like to write this opportunity to point out another significant factor in the overall lack of response by myself and the Harbinger in general. At that time, "late summer 1992" the Harbinger was operating with a skeleton crew and was suffering from the recurring malady of student apathy. If one looks back at an issue from that time, one will note that the majority of positions were either unfilled or filled by "acting" persons. Thus, responsibilities such as copy editing and off-office communications were being carried out by a small number of volunteers who, in many cases, were inexperienced (such as myself) and, quite often overextended in their personal and academic endeavors. Fortunately much of this situation has been resolved and we are all pleased to see that people such as Mr. Larus are reaching and responding to our publication.

Reading and responding. I can come humble and I will gladly do so when I find I have stuck a chord and provided a response. Sometimes, unfortunately, I do not take a walk back in the seat of the pants to get those "in a position to act" facts. But here a good illustration can be drawn. Writing, reading and responding. Objective knowledge in dialogue, then even lines of communication are of considerable importance. Acknowledging our own errors and shortcomings is of equal importance if we are to exist in any sort of harmony with our fellow human beings.

Finally, while this has been mostly an open letter explaining the situation occurred, I would like to remind our readers that it is of paramount importance to understand that response and recovery are the keys to resolving differences and communicating.

Once again, action is the key and I urge you to act. Mr. Larus did and the result was a response. And, if by chance, you find yourself in an uncomfortable situation as I did, accept the reality, respond accordingly and proceed from there.

Remember also that perfection is seldom achieved but in striving for perfection and improvement we can create excellence.

Country demonstrates the hypocrisy of its law

Paul Goodman

Harbinger Columnist

Did you think torture only happened in countries ruled by dictators?

When you think of countries that imprison people for their religious or political views, I bet you think of the former Soviet Union. Well, think again, because it's happening here in the house of our heroes, but dogs and apple pie!

The number one political prisoner in the United States, as proclaimed by the human rights organization Amnesty International is a Native American named Leonard Peltier. Peltier is serving two life sentences for allegedly killing two FBI agents during a shoot-out in June, 1975 on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota. After reading that, you have probably deemed Peltier guilty as charged. The only problem is, there is no credible evidence that he is guilty of anything!

This story goes back to the early 1970's when the traditional Lakota Sioux people on the Pine Ridge Reservation opposed training and arming their lands for highly dangerous urban warfare.

These traditional people were opposed by others who ran the tribal government backed by the U.S. government. The tribal leader, Dick Wilson wanted the mining and he was not opposed to forcing his view on those opposed to the mining. It was during these years of conflict that the reservation held the highest murder rate per capita for the entire United States.

Over a hundred deaths have gone unrecorded to this day. Most of these murders were attributed to the FBI.

Members of the American Indian Movement AIM (linked to Pine Ridge) to help protect the traditional people. The FBI labeled AIM as an international terrorist organization with ties to the Krimian Revolution.

This idea was ridiculous since AIM was there to protect the women, children and older folks who didn't want to sell their land. The FBI supplied Dick Wilson and his so-called OGLA squad with military assault weapons, tactical support and intelligence about the AIM supporters.

The confrontation between AIM supporters, including Peltier and the FBI occurred when agents allegedly followed a Native American around a trading company house onto a family's property. There was also an AIM camp on the property. AIM was equipped with two agents and a Native American man being killed.

Within hours, the largest FBI man-hunt in history was underway. The homes of residents were torn apart by the agents and the people were subject to severe harassment. The death of the Native American man was never investigated.

Four men were caught and indicted for the murder of the agent. One was charged in a self-defense.

Leonard Peltier was found in Canada and extradited to the United States in 1975 based on affidavits that the government admitted were fabricated in 1965. The witness who gave them information said she was coerced into signing the affidavits. At Peltier's trial, there was an atmosphere of fear and intimidation created by the government, together with a judge who rejected all attempts to introduce evidence of FBI culpability. Peltier was convicted of two counts of first degree murder.

Today, the Justice Department has changed its story on who the killer was and admits that they have no idea who killed the agent!

The courts have rejected many appeals for a re-trial. Over fifty members of Congress have shown their respect for Peltier. Millions of people are aware of the world have signed petitions calling for his release. Peltier's story is carried in the foreign press much more than here at home.

The 9th Circuit Court of Appeals has decided that Peltier's trial and previous appeals had been full of FBI abuses and public misconduct, including covering up evidence, perjury, fabricated evidence and the suppression of evidence that would have proved his innocence.

The court also stated the FBI misconduct was "a clear abuse of the investigative process," but they ruled against a new trial for Peltier saying that they were "reluctant to impose further imprisonment to the FBI."

Peltier's attorneys filed another appeal in November 1992. The decision is being anxiously waited for by Peltier supporters.

Leonard Peltier is more than one man fighting for justice. He represents a whole race of people that have been on the losing end of a genocidal movement against them. The Native American people have been surviving oppression for the last five hundred years. It's about time they started seeing some justice. Even if it's starting with justice for one person, Leonard Peltier.

To find out more about Peltier's situation and Native American today, incident at Oglala, a film produced by Robert Redford, in connection with Robert Denver, (Thunderheart), starring Val Kilmer, in the movie Crazy Horse, a book by Peter Matheson and a book called The Trial of Leonard Peltier, by Jim Mesnerheim.

Senate treasurer asks for student assistance

Lee Shen
Guest Columnist

Students that have complaints about what goes on at Harper or even good suggestions need to get in touch with their student representatives and senators. I am one such representative who has spoken to many of you and has worked hard to achieve your goals and objectives. I have fought long and hard for your rights and have never given up. I respect all students opinions and do my best to achieve all I can for you. Last year I took forward to the Board of Trustees, the proposal that soccer should be offered as a varsity sport. In a time of cutbacks especially in athletics, which can be seen best with the Chicago Public School System, I achieved the goal of having soccer approved. I do not play soccer, so I had no personal interest in seeing the sport offered, however, many of you do. I fought for you and your right to have sports and other activities that interest you offered, instead of just hearing what administrators felt was best for you. When I fought for the establishment of a varsity soccer team I faced administrators who said they had tried before in the past but where unsuccessful because the Board of Trustees voted against it. I heard their tale and the Board's tale of the past and knew that the reason it had not been achieved in the past is because the administration was not as passionate about it as the students were. It was not an administration priority. As your Student Treasurer last year, I made it my priority, not because I wanted a soccer team, but because you the students wanted it.

Now I am fighting for something different and I ask that you do more than talk amongst each other about it. I have dedicated myself and time towards representing you here at Harper when I could have been getting prestige and getting paid to do this same thing on the state level or at another school. I do not get compensation for lobbying on behalf of student's interests, in fact I lose money. I quit a job earning almost $8.00 an hour to be here at Harper on Student Government, earning nothing for being a representative, but knowing that I would be able to achieve more for you than anyone else. My reward is the experience I am gaining and the knowledge that we need to take a stand at some point for what we believe is right, and I am taking such a stand.

We all say that there is nothing we can do to correct what is wrong with the system. Well I believe we can, and I am doing something about it by being on Student Government. I am was elected the Student Government President and I stepped down to become Treasurer so that I could ensure that the $600,000 Harper has collected in student activity fees go towards programs and clubs that the students want.

I have heard time and time again about abuse such as chaperones on student spending money on a trip to Washington DC in Los Angeles for conferences at which they did not attend more than a small handful of workshops. I have heard from you that Harper does not offer what you want in programs, or that it does not offer it when you would attend.

Our average age student is 32 years old. These students pay activity fees and would like to be involved in Harper. There are a few people who do not want to be involved, but most do want to have Harper offer something they would find interesting. I have spent a considerable amount of time representing you and fixing the existing abuse of the current system.

Not only has what I have said about the student activity fee fallen on deaf administration ears, they have chosen to crucify me for protesting about it. I have nothing to hide. I am proud of my work here at Harper and have faculty and students that are glad someone is finally standing up to the administrators.

I do not wish to fight the administration. I wish to work with them. The problem is that they have grown accustomed to getting their way with the students and programs offered. They seem to only approve of organizations and programs when they conform to their idea of how things should be done.

Now as the chairperson of the budget committee the administration (Vice President of Student Affairs Bonnie Henry and Student Activity Director Jeanne Pankaus) accuse me of not representing the students and only asking for changes that would benefit me personally.

They can get away with these accusations because you the students I am working for have not been involved to the extent that you have chosen to not fight the system. You have chosen to be apathetic and have given up hope. I am willing to be accused by name for you and fight for you and your rights. I know you do not have the time to fight, but I have made the commitment for you. What I need is a sign of your support. I need you, the students to send letters or call or see me during my posted office hours.

I am even going to make some rounds on Monday nights to see as many of you as possible.

I am here to tell you that I need your support. I need you to stand up for what you believe in. I need you to show/hell the administration how you feel, and I am here to be your representative and do just that. However, the Student Government have been accused of not representing you. If you want to see changes you need to let us know about it, but you also have to show us your support and not objections, or give us the rationale of why we should change the objectives. We are flexible on behalf of the majority.

The administration (director of Student Activities Jeanne Pankaus) has stated that I am not tracking the book but asking the Titans. If I am not representing you properly, please tell me so. I am here for you. Up to this point I have been attempting to correct what you have told me is wrong with the system. I have been here long enough to know the system and I am a benefit to you because of this.

The administration (Vice President of Student Affairs Bonnie Henry and Director of Student Activities Jeanne Pankaus) want me to leave Harper and states they cannot work with me.

I am willing to prove to anyone that I am willing to work with the administration (Vice President of Student Affairs Bonnie Henry and Student Activity Director Jeanne Pankaus).

However, after the administration (Vice President of Student Affairs Bonnie Henry and Director of Student Activities Jeanne Pankaus) crucified me in front of a body of my peers I am afraid that any changes I may suggest in getting for you will be taken away as soon as I leave.

I do not want that to happen. I am proud to report that my fellow Senators and Representatives spoke up for me, but this is not enough.

I am asking you to find out exactly what is going on and decide for your selves. Don't let the administration make the decision for you.

We the student pay the student activity fee, we are supposed to be the ones deciding where the money goes and the ones benefiting from it.

The Director of Student Activities stated at the last Student Government meeting that she is the one with the power to decide where the money will get spent and she feels the Student Government has lost its credibility due to my protest of the process.

Furthermore, she stated she has complete power to strip the budgeting process away from the Student Government and will do so if it does not gain its credibility. Interpretation is that she and Vice President Bonnie Henry was one and I'll leave, then the Student Government will regain its credibility.

I feel I am doing right by the student and as you support me. There is a Board of Trustees meeting this Thursday February 25 at 7 p.m. where the Student Government is going to speak about this issue. Be there to voice your opinion.

The Evil Dead have returned for Ash

Kevin Geese
Guest Writer

Sam Raimi has worked in the extremes of the film world—from the cheapies of the independents (Evil Dead) to big budget Hollywood pictures (Dark Man). His films are filled with extremes—the goriest, the bloodiest, the shakiest (camera work). His latest film takes him to another Hollywood extreme, the long running series. Released by Universal, Army of Darkness, is the third installment of Raimi's Evil Dead series.

Bruce Campbell against Ash as the hulked Ash whose main goal seems to be surviving through to another sequel no matter what they throw at him. In the previous films, Ash's only defense against the evil zombies that wanted to suck his soul was their total disdain for him. Before the end of the second film, Ash lost a hand, replaced it with a chain saw ("Ash" no ghost gonna stand up to a chain saw!) and got himself caught in a time warp that hurls him back to the 12th century. Army of Darkness picks up right there, no waiting, drop him home, he must recover the Book of the Dead.

Things, of course, don't go smoothly on this seeming simple quest. Along the way, in a hilarious Gulliver's Travels send up, Ash accidentally creates an evil twin who unleashes the power of the Deadites and digs up an army of decomposing warriors to attack the local castle where Ash has taken the book. Can our hapless hero defeat the evil army and use the book to return home? Army of Darkness is not nearly as gory as its predecessors. After all, when you crash a skeleton all you get is a puff of dust; it's also not as claustrophobic or as sinister. By taking out the gushing eye sockets and gallons of blood, Raimi may have opened his film to a wider audience, but lost some of the intensity that made his name.

The black humor and the punning satire are all still in place, thanks mainly to the consistently comic book performance of Campbell. He's right out of a Mad Magazine satire, looking danger right in the eye, no matter where on the body that eye is located. He'd be over the top anywhere except in a world where the skeletons try to dunk you in the eye. Ash always manages to get that hand in front of his face at the right time.

If you get into the sense of humor, this can be a great time. Army of Darkness is high art for its genre—cheesy satire—but art none the less. Not everyone's cup of tea, but an enjoyable time at the movies. Overall rating: 2 1/2 stars (out of 4).

Historical music presentation

In the one-woman show "Legacy: Our Wealth of Music," vocalist and entertainer Maggie Brown provides an anthology of the evolution of African American music, from work songs sung on southern plantations to present day urban contemporary rap music. A combination of narrative to the great storyteller tradition and songs demonstrating the various art forms which have been created, this presentation provides an entertaining learning experience for all ages. Highlights are the songs "Afro Blue," demonstrating the foundation of African rhythm, "The Enterpriser," demonstrating the rhythm and telling the story of Scott Joplin, and the typical version of Charlie Parker's "Ornithology," demonstrating bebop jazz style. Brown is the daughter of the internationally famous entertainer/lyricist Brown. In 1954 she developed her own unique vocal style, covering a wide spectrum of musical forms including spirituals, blues, ragtime, and jazz; she started singing and acting professionally at the age of 15, and has toured throughout the country. "Legacy: Our Wealth of Music" is presented by The Legacy Company, comprised of Maggie Brown and Gary Tucker, co-creators, producers, and choreographers of the production.

Talk about Crying...

Ann Kowalski
A&E Editor

So no one is talking about The Crying Game and yet, everyone has heard something about it. The most I can tell you about the plot is a British soldier is kidnapped by the IRA, becomes friends with his captors and before he is executed, his last wish is that his lover knows that he was thinking of her when he was killed. The captor, Fergus, carries through with the soldier's desire and falls for her himself. If I say anything that about the plot, it will ruin the entire film. It is interesting how people aren't going around telling people "the big secret."

The major theme throughout the film is "personal nature." You do what is in your nature. Fergus couldn't kill Jody (the kidnapped soldier) because it isn't in his nature. Each character is stuck—normal changes in their personalities, we just learn more about them and about their pasts. At times, the stagnancy of their lives can be annoying. They just do the same thing over and over and over again.

More and more people are going to see film like this one which isn't necessarily "fun of the mill." Look at some of it's competitors: Loaded, Whisper, Children of the Corn II. This is probably the only intellectual film that is out in theaters right now.

Cut to the chase. This film has named high honors, a full price ticket. And definitely isn't a star. But I must caution you to be prepared for the most unusual plot twist you have seen in a long, long time.

Sumo wrestling coming to the northwest Suburbs?

MELISSA BOOSE
ABC Editor

"Sumo" wrestling in the suburbs? Believe it or not, it's true! The Big Kahuna is hosting Sumo wrestling tournaments Thursday nights on the corner of Algonquin and Golf roads in Arlington Heights. Only not in the pure sense of original sumo wrestling. It is done Sumo wrestling. It is done strictly by audience participation. After signing an insurance waiver (in case of any injuries), the volunteers eagerly wait for their turn in the ring. The athletes hug, fully padded, normally huge, fully padded, wrestlers have to be helped into the ring. The whole event is hysterical in itself, not to mention a gigantic, black, rubber wig to top it. The com- ments are hilarious, and the whole event is really funny, and the step by step (highly exaggerated) moves on the crowd, leaving them wanting more. Unfortunately, some of the people who sign up don't get the chance to participate, simply because they run out of time. It's well worth the trip if you get an opportunity to go. Watch this for yourself any Thursday night around 8 p.m. If anything, it's a good laugh and a great way to experience the Orient in the 'burbs!

Pat Riley, world peace keeper and more All Star Game tid-bits

Lee Friedman
Harbinger Sports Columnist

The time is mid to late June, the place Cairo, Egypt. The occasion is the unopposed round of the Middle East peace talks. The two sides gaze warily at each other and an uneasy rest at the head of the table. The Israeli negotiator gets up and starts pacing nervously. "When will it be so easy?" he asks nervously. "Take a seat, he'll be here," the Syrian negotiator says with an uneasy tone in his voice.

As the Israeli negotiator opens his mouth, the double doors swing open and in steps Pat Riley, New York Knicks head coach/ international mediator. "What seems to be the problem, gentlemen?" he says with a smile.

Impossible you say? "I'll admit it seems ridiculous but after the way he handled the East All Star team on Sunday, I would say it is possible. His handling of the Patrick Ewing/Shaquille O'Neal situation was beyond anyone's expectations. Not only did he handle them better than the player's managers but he showed the fans that they could actually play together. Riley surprised me by not substituting Erving for Shaq or vice versa. The Knicks coach deserves high marks for his handling of the team, despite the overtime loss.

For those of you who care, the Slam Dunk contest was held on Saturday, with some lackluster results. Harold "Jordan" Jones' "Mutt" walked away with the title of Runner Up to Michael Jordan. I know Jordan didn't participate, but he would've dominated if given the opportunity. The contest itself is a waste of time. I mean how many different ways are there to dunk a ball anyway? The real highlight of the All Star weekend was the Shaq lawsuit rapping with Po-Blackman. Maybe we should start calling him MC Shaq in something.

The choice of John Stockton and Karl Malone as MVPs was perfect. If it had been for their season work and a check-off they by the round method of reward. Sir Charles, the West would most definitely fall to Jordan and Carmelo.

Overall, I would have to say that the game was in my short memory. I usually would've fallen asleep by the time the first quarter was over. I would wake up just in time to see the final score, which would be like 150 to 145 or some thing. This game kept me interested for the full 55 minutes. Okay, 50 minutes. I missed the first five minutes of the second half because I was eating my Chinese take out, but I digress. All in all, it was an excellent event. For those of you who missed it, look for the next next February.

A step ahead

Heather Carroli
Morning Editor

The winter sports season has all most come to a screeching halt here at Harper. Many sports are no longer, 'til next year and some are just at the peak of their game. So to be honest, we're really not much going on officially during the upcoming week. But yet there is still enough to keep "A Step Ahead" going.

Saturday and Sunday numbers of the wrestling team will compete in the NJCAA Nationals in Bismark, North Dakota.

Also competing in the nationals will be members of the men's and women's swimming teams. They will swim starting March 3, continuing through March 6 in Fort Pierce, Florida.

Intramural basketball will play Tuesday 7p.m. Starting off the night will be the Bears against the Prime Time team followed by Court Justice vs. Skirmish at 8:15 and the Air IM Team will get it off just before 9p. West and Hit Squad take the court.

Men's basketball team hopes to defeat critics in play-offs

Max Gurnea
Harbinger Sports Writer

Basketball, a sport where you need the speed of a Cheetah and an eye like an eagle.

The players must be close with each other. Coach Ron Croiger says the team has been "short on size and short on depth." But the coach feels that they will be as ready as they will ever be.

They have played very well even though the level of competition has risen tremendously in January and February. And they have also lost some key players to the wrath of academic problems.

The main starters for the regular season were the following: Sam Derwiah, Joe Sims, Rudy Chambers and Mike Young. These five players have shot a field goal percentage of 35.5%. The Hawks have struggled a lot, but all the players on and off the bench have contributed heavily.

As practice starts and the players seem confident that they have done well during the regular season and will continue to do well during the play-offs.

The one person who stands out in this reporters mind is the Assistant Coach Mark Hudson, who has not gotten the publicity that he deserves. During practice Hudson motivates the players along with the head coach and Manager James Fabury.

Some of the students here at Harper don't think that the team will go the way, and the team is showing that they want the championship because they deserve it.

Hawk focus: A Japanese connection

Jin Wakano
Sports Editor

Two of Harper's women basketball players are attending in common different from most basketball players in the United States.

Yuko Minakuchi and Mami Tsukamoto both started playing the game in Japan.

Minakuchi, 21, began playing basketball on a team in Japan about 10 years ago where her father was the coach of her team. In 1980, she moved to the United States to study English. She attempted to play basketball in Washington when she originally moved over here, but because she had planned to move to Illinois, she was discouraged from joining the team.

After moving to Barrington last year, Minakuchi was going to be part of the Hawk basketball program, but a mix-up in the transfer of her transcripts caused her to be ineligible for the team and once again she was forced to wait a year to re-join. Finally making it to the team this year, Minakuchi has found that what she experienced in Japan.

The biggest difference for her was the coaching style. In the school overseas, the basketball team was run much more in a region of approximately 55 teams. To continue a winning reputation, the coach had to be extremely strict with the players on an extent that would probably be considered abusive in America.

The style of the actual play, however, is "about the same" in the U.S. says Minakuchi, except that players here are much taller.

Tsukamoto began playing basketball in elementary school during regular class time. She played on an organized team for the first time when she went to an American high school in France to study English. Returning to Japan halfway through her senior year, she didn't get much playing time.

While in high school Tsukamoto ran both cross country and track, and while at Sophia University in Japan she played field hockey. She enjoyed the sports but has no intention to continue anything but basketball at Harper. By the time she reached where she played basketball had a just-as-winning tradition, and the coaches were much less strict. Tsukamoto's thoughts on American coaches are different from Minakuchi's. While she sees the coaches here as being really the same as in Japan, she sees the athletes in America as the difference. "The players here look like they were born to play basketball," she said.

As far as the future, both players wish to use their worldwide experience in their career. They both came Yuko Minakuchi (left) and Mami Tsukamoto (right) are from Japan. American culture and both will probably bring back their knowledge to Japan with them.

All season long, Minakuchi has had dinner at Tsukamoto's house after each game. They both say the idea of playing in a different country is more comforting when someone you're playing with is in the same situation. "I don't feel like I'm the only one playing differently," said Minakuchi. They may not have even known of each other before the season began, but their common situation has brought them together for now and maybe forever.

Intramural b-ball bounces along

The second week of the IM Basketball League dominated the strength of the league with outstanding displays of both offense and defense by several teams.

Champions again!

Hawks come from behind at home to repeat domination of region teams

Joe Williams
Sports Editor

There really is no stopping this team.

The chips were down and not much time was left, but the Hawks wrestlers were able to walk away from last Saturday's regional meet at home with their second consecutive NCAAA Region IV championship.

After the preliminaries the Hawks trailed Washburne by 13 points, and Coach Lovelace was not impressed. "We're fighting for second place," he said.

In the first match of the final at 118, Tim Raines lost his bid for first place in the region to Peter Stanley of Washburne 3-3.

The second match up of the final at 126 had basically the same results as the first. Matt Hayes was defeated by Juan Puentes of Washburne 8-3.

Glen McGowan was the Harper victim in the third match of the final as the hopes of Harper's repeat in region champs were the lowest. In that third place match, McGowan fell to Ricky Robb of Washburne 7-4.

Steve Bakay, wrestling at 142, was the winner as Harper's first final victory. In the third place match against Mark Tadelman of (once again) Washburne 4-0.

Quay Mitchell at 150 was the only Hawk not to make the final, which came as a shock to head coach Norm Lovelace. Lovelace said that Mitchell was one of the most consistent wrestlers all season, but just had a bad day.

In one of the closest matches of the entire day but possibly the turning point of the entire tournament, Phil March narrowly escaped with a victory over Ted Peltola of Washburne 2-1 for third place in the 158 class. The margin of victory was not as large as Lovelace would have liked to see and he let his feelings be known. "We should've lost that 'cause we didn't wrestle. That's not any kind of winning."

Third place in the 167 weight class was also decided quickly in favor of Harper when James Popp "bopped" his opponent with a head butt just 42 seconds into the match. Left half uncovered on the mat, Doug Howland from College of Lake County defeated by a 3-0.

Leamy's team brother came away from the 177 region championship match with a patial in 6:11 against Roger Williams of Belleville. Popp seemed in constant control in what was the most one-sided match Harper had been a part of during the entire final part of the tournament.

The comeback kid of Harper finally caught up with his dream in the 190 final place match. Jerry Kearns had been a top Illinois wrestler eight years ago while wrestling on the same Harper team as now assistant coach Dan Lopprino, just missing a chance at going to nationals. He returned to the Hawks last year to wrestle, but was injured in his fourth meet and missed the rest of the season.

During his 190 weight championship match, Kearns took absolute control over Ken York of Triton. The only reason Kearns wasn't given the pin until 2:51 was the match was the old time coach "Tied a good point of view to call the pin."

Finally, to secure their second consecutive regional championship, Frank Hammond of the Hawks manhandled Harley Kestler of Washburne in the heavyweight match. The final score of the match was 7-4, but the victory was much larger than that. "This is the highlight of the season," said Hammond.

"Frank just pinned his way to the finals," said teammate Marc Rader.

As always, Lovelace praised his team's success. "We wouldn't have been here at all without him."

Eye on the Hawks

This past weekend marked the half-way point from last year's to next year's winter Olympics. Very fittingly (note the name), Heather and I have chosen a Olympic theme for our column to mark the occasion.

The question is whether or not professional athletes should be allowed to participate in the only true world championships in any sport. There is no doubt that each country has the right and it is at least slightly obligated to put forth their best athletes for these games. It is argued by some (my managing editor and my star columnist included) that the Olympic games should be a time for amateur athletes to show their abilities and a time for the professionals to take a step back and watch. I couldn't disagree more.

If I were an amateur with the chance to play basketball in the Olympics, I would feel guilty to be allowed to compete in the place of Michael Jordan just because I don't make money for playing the game.

Just what would happen if we were to send our best into the games? Chances are Mike Tyson just may have fared well in the '88 Olympics. How about tennis? Is there any question whether or not some fierce competition could come from the games with professionals involved?

Don't get me wrong. I have nothing against amateur athletes or the idea of them playing in the games. However, the Olympic games are meant to be the best athletes in the world going head-to-head for every body to see. The games are a way to decide the right for a four-year period and only the best should be involved.

The Olympics are a competition and a war without weapons, a war with out casualties and a war where every body is involved. It is a point of what they've done. Other countries send the ones they have to the games and so should we. Just because our best athletes get paid for what they do should not be a obstacle to our gold medal chances.

Joe Williams
Sports Editor

Have you ever set a goal in your life and then realized that maybe it could never be accomplished? Things would discourage you and your dream would remain only a dream. Not reality.

That's what happened to me when I was 11 years old.

This week I will discuss my side as to whether professional athletes should be allowed to participate in the Olympics or not.

When I was six, my dream was to play in the 1992 or 1996 Olympic Games.

After watching the games and building up all possible hopes one thing made me realize that it could never be. Professional athletes earned the same pay by one unit it was a professional competition.

HEATHER CAROLL
Managing Editor

At a glance

The thing that bothers me the most is that they have all the time in the world to play in a tournament. Why should they stop to train your ground? They have the US Open, Wimbledon, the Davis Cup and many others. It can't be that they want to play against other countries, that's why they are called "Olympics."

At the age of 11 I couldn't see going up against professionals. Even after putting over seven hours a day into my tennis playing, I still saw no hope. I was encouraged to do my best, but the single thought that I would someday be up against those who play tennis for a job, financial support, not to play at a competitive level here and there.

I still think about the fact that I could probably have succeeded in trying out for the Olympics and sometimes wish I would have kept that goal, not just have made it a dream. Unfortunately now I don't seem to feel quite as bad since a recent knee surgery. I was told I could never play at a competitive level ever again. But the goal was so close down in the ground.

Did the words "No competing" mean anything anymore? Professionals have their playing fields the amateurs should have ours.

Dogs can be a mixed breed. From television Law, to dogs that are trained to help the blind, canines have been prevalent in modern society.

This diversity was on display Tuesday in Kira, a German shepherd from Australia and Trudy, a bloodhound with experience in drug detection, took center stage at a drug detection demonstration.

Copeland Dennis Gullas, from the DePaul County Sheriff's Department, led the presentation, taking the dogs through a series of training drills and exercises of drug detection in the streets.

The crowd responded with applause each time the dogs performed a routine.

The dogs have not always been a part of the sheriff's department.

"The unit was formed in 1984," Gullas said. "Until that time, we had to borrow dogs from surrounding county units, which was very expensive."

Each dog in the unit is trained by Gullas, with the exception of the narcotics, which has been handled in the past by the Chicago Police Department.

"Kira was the second dog trained by that department for our unit."

Trudy was not trained, as all bloodhounds in the unit, by Gullas. "Trudy is one of two bloodhounds currently used by our unit, with one puppy in training," Gullas said.

A fourth bloodhound was recently retired.

Referring to the amount of time spent with the bloodhounds, Gullas said that he probably "spends more time training them, than we get to spend with our families."

It's twist time again at sock hop

Tom Fausst

On March 12, to celebrate its 25th anniversary, Harper College is planning a sock hop in the gym (Building M) which will play music of the 50's, 60's and 70's and re-introduce dances of that time.

Sylvia Kingsley, media relations assistant, says it will be a very interesting evening.

"This is the kind of event which is typical of the area," Kingsley said.

"There will be a limbo contest, a best dancer's contest where the audience will decide the winners and there will be a hole hop contest," she added.

Another contest is where the person must identify old photos of staff and faculty members that have worked for Harper over the 25 years of its existence.

"The photos are being displayed down in Building A," says Patty Roberts, arts, media relations specialist. "The one who identifies the most correctly will win a 'Tom, Lyle's' Wausau prize," Roberts added.

Roberts also said there would be a live auction out of James Dean and Marilyn Monroe.

"The photos will cost $2 apiece," she said.

There will also be prizes, but they are being kept a secret and won't be divulged until the night of the sock hop.

Contributing to the sock hop, Spread Eagle will be selling food, which will be sold at 60's prices.

Among the food being sold is pizza and hot dogs for $1.00 and cookies and pop for a quarter.

For the student entertainment there will be a live D.J., Paul Drake, who is also a former student of Harper.

Continuing Education Program Assistant and committee member, Jacqueline Brown, is in charge of the entertainment.

"In honor of Harper's 25th anniversary, we would like to show the music and dances that were popular when Harper first opened its doors," Blount said.

Some of the dances will include the Waltz, twist, twist, monkey, poppy, and the locomotion.

"Every time we play a record that was a popular dance," says Blount, "I will get up on stage with a group of Janet Kruse Dancers and show how it was done. Then everyone can join in when they like."

Blount says that everyone is invited to participate in the sock hop, not just Harper students.

"As long as they are just high or up, they are welcome to come," says Blount. "But because we don't want any horse play, we can't admit babies or toddlers."

In memory of the 17 seven people who were killed at Brown's Chicken last January, Brown will be held by the student ambassadors.

The money raised will go to the Palatine Memorial Fund, which will be given to the families of the victims to help pay for funeral costs.

Any Huestonians, administrators can reach a coordinator, is the faculty advisor for the student ambassadors.

"We wanted to do something to show our support for the victims of the families killed at the Browns Chicken last January," Hueston said.

The student ambassadors will be selling coverages for $2.00 and bouquets for $1.50. Also to be sold are single, long stem roses for $2.50.

To order a coverage, bouquet or long stem rose in advance, contact Amy Hueston at ext. 2247. Otherwise, you can buy one when you go to the sock hop.

Tickets for the sock hop will be on sale March 2, 3 and 9, 11, at 11:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. at the box office for $5.00 per person. Tickets will also be sold at the door on the night of the sock hop for $7.00 per person.

All are encouraged to dress up in 50's and 60's style, but are not required to.

Soviet advisor to address community

George Arbatov, advisor to Soviet leaders, Khrushchev, Brezhnev, Andropov, Chernenko, Gorbachev and Yeltsin, is traveling to Washington and to the U.N. and has agreed to visit Harper College on Wednesday, March 10.

He will speak to Harper students, faculty, and members of the community at 7:30 p.m. in Bldg. E, Rm. 107, on the current situation in Russia and the future of American-Russian relations.

In the afternoon, Arbatov will meet with members of the Russian Museum Alliance, a group of educators and business persons interested in facilitating and supporting working relationships between the public and private sectors in Russia and the U.S.

Arbatov is the founder and director of the 25 year old prestigious think tank, Institution for the USA and Canada. He has served as a member of the Central Committee and has acted as the government spokesman on the United States.

His political memoirs, The System on a Leader's Life in Soviet Politics, the author's one of the most dramatic events and struggles in recent years.

The introduction to the book was written by Soviet Ambassador to Harper College, recently appointed by President Clinton as the Ambassador to

Many diverse topics to be discussed during Women's History Week

JENNIFER THOMASIAN
News Editor

During the week of March 8-11, Harper will celebrate Woman's History Week. The four-day program will feature speakers focusing on various aspects of women in the arts, politics and sports through films, seminars and demonstrations.

Since 1980 this observance has expanded to five seminars each year covering a wide range of woman's history topics. Local women's young adults are involved in the planning and sponsorship of the event. Harper's woman's history week is recognized nationally as outstanding. In 1992, the Los Angeles Herald, in an unprecedented editorial, recognized Harper's program as having "proven an tradition."

To kick off Woman's History Week, keynote speaker, Ilana Rovner, First Women Judge on the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, will be giving her life's perspective on "Our Woman's Odyssey," on March 9 at 6 p.m. Prior to the address, there will be an reception beginning at 5 p.m. and dinner at 7 p.m. in the building A as in the dining hall. The cost of the keynote dinner session is $20. For more information and reservations, please call 708/397-8000, extension 2560.

Ms. Rovner was law clerk to U.S. District Court Judge James Parnas, the first black federal judge in the early 1970s. At 56 working in the U.S. Attorney's office, first at Assistant U.S. Attorney and then as Deputy Chief and Chief of the Public Protection Unit, Rovner was appointed as Deputy Governor and Legal Counsel to Illinois Governor James Thompson. In 1984, Rovner became U.S. District Court Judge, a position she held until 1992, when President Bush appointed her to the position of U.S. Circuit Court Judge.

"Each day throughout woman's history week topics and issues will be discussed and a question and answer period will follow each presentation."

Two Harper students receive scholarships from National Restaurant Association

Two students in the Harper College Hospitality Management Department have received scholarships from the National Restaurant Association's Educational Foundation.

Susan P. LaQuatra, Ella Grove, and Jacqueline Trick, Schenckburg, are pursuing careers in hospitality management. Criteria for the scholarship includes grade point average, experience, career goals and commitment to the hospitality industry.

LaQuatra completed the Restaurant Management Development Program in December with a 4.0 grade average. He previously attended Harper and received a Business Management degree and continued his studies at DePaul. After working in business for a number of years and recognizing the downsizing trend, he decided to return to school to study food and hospitality management. He is currently interviewing and is hopeful about employment possibilities.

LaQuatra has been a bookkeeper most of her working life. In 1987 she owned and operated a hotdog stand which motivated her desire to someday open a restaurant. She decided to pursue her dream and started by enrolling in Harper's Restaurant Management Development program. She definitely found her niche. Trick's grade point average, a 3.6, along with her commitment to the hospitality field, won her a scholarship from the National Restaurant Association which will pay for tuition to complete her Associate in Applied Science degree at Harper College. She would like to teach in the field for a while and eventually open her own restaurant.

The Hospitality Management Program in Harper includes the National Restaurant Association Management Development Diploma program, certificate programs in Bread and Pastry, Culinary Arts, Hospitality Management and the Associate in Applied Science hospitality degree.

For further information about the Harper Hospitality Management course offerings, call ext. 2874.

Simon hails College Aid Breakthrough:

Clinton economic plan anchors national service to new direct student loans with income-flexible repayments

In what would be a major reform of student aid programs and pocketbook relief for working families, President Clinton's economic package links his national service plan to direct college loans. If enacted by Congress, the plan would open college opportunities to millions of students and end billions in subsidies now paid to banks. Kathy May and others in the complex web of today's guaranteed student loan program. It also would make repayment easier and would reduce defaults.

The issue of switching to direct loans from the current guaranteed student loan program (GSL) had been introduced until release of the economic package in February 17.

"This is direct, tangible relief for the checkbooks of millions of working families and for all taxpayers," said Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., the leading Democratic voice of the direct loan program.

"The changeover to direct loans with income-sensitive repayments ultimately will benefit millions of students, our schools, and the taxpayers." He praised the Administration of "standing firm for the public interest in the face of intense special interest lobbying by those who profit under the present system. Those special interests—particularly Sallie Mae—have been lobbying hard since the election to kill this idea in the cradle."

Simon has worked closely with Clinton for months to encourage the change. The plan Simon has advanced with Sen. Dave Durenberger (R-Minn.) would become Department of Education Assurance Credit (DEA Credit). Other leading advocates of the plan include Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Bill Bradley, D-N.J. Key House sponsors are Chafe, Reps. Thomas, Pritz, and Wicks.

Rob Andrews, D-N.J., bill Ford, D-Michigan, and George Miller, D-Calif.

The President's national service plan merges the current features of IDEIA Credit—direct loans with income-sensitive repayments—to the national service program. Like IDEIA Credit, the President's plan allows payments based on students' incomes after graduation. It is available for life-long learning, as expected to be automatically available to students—regardless of family income—and is likely to be repaid through IRS withholding. The Administration calls for a complete phase-in from guaranteed student loans to direct loans by 1997, saving $1.5 billion in the year alone the personal builds on a pilot program, projected at $500 million in savings, or 10 percent of the savings of the current GSL program—advocate said Simon and others as part of last year's rewrite of the Higher Education Act and last July after an intense threat by President Bush.

His address to the nation on February 17, the President noted the loan plan will give students "the option to pay the loans back, but at the time, so they can't beat the bill."

"We waste millions in the student loan program," said Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen in testimony February 18 before the Senate Budget Committee. "Valuable dollars that could be invested in education are being squandered for commercial banks to operate the program. Converting to a direct loan program will save money that now goes to middlemen while preserving our commitment to students and their families."

Student stupor 101

Good morning. It's great to see that you all made it to class. Let's get right to today's discussion.

Our conversation, rather, my talking and your note taking, will deal with the subject of apathy.

Apathy is a lack of interest or emotion in something. For example, apathy exists at a football game when the home team is losing. Now that we know what it is, can anyone give me an everyday example of apathy?

Come on now. Speak up.

Since no one wants to answer, I'll tell you. It is right here in the classroom. No one really cares, or tries, to answer my questions. Nor do you like to put effort into outside projects.

Ah, I see eyes looking at me with anger and disbelief. Well, I stand by what I say. No one puts time or energy into class work.

If there is a group presentation due, you prefer to remain confined to your "safe little world," behind your desks, rather than get up in front of class.

If a speech is due, or a question asked in class, I get reluctance for a response.

Does anyone remember how to communicate? You know, the process of exchanging thoughts and ideas between people. Judging by the response in this class, I would have to say a resounding no.

My point class, is this. Don't be so afraid to talk in class. Let others know where you stand on current events. Answer questions with no hesitation. Right or wrong, at least try. A little imagination and elbow grease aren't too much to ask for when doing school work.

Well, the clock indicates that it is almost time to go. Don't look at your notes and remember what I've said. Really think about it. It's strictly your decision. Either dare to be different, or stay stagnant and apathetic the rest of your lives.

-Kenneth Dillard

There's only one way to live

Convenience the latest substance to hit the country

Paul Gaudreault

There is an addiction that has swept through our country, an addiction so strong that most of us are taught up in it that we will not admit it exists. This addictive substance is available in virtually every street corner in America.

That, along with the fact that our government considers the addictive behavior makes it extremely difficult for the addict to get clean.

What is this substance? Is it sold over the counter or by prescription? How could something so horrible be legal?

The drug that I'm writing about has a very nice sounding name and a clean-cut, All-American image. This drug is called CONVENIENCE.

How is the drug of convenience injected? It goes into your brain directly through an immense device found in almost every American home: TELEVISION. The dealers of convenience always give you a free sample to get you hooked.

They give you images of fast food, disposable everything, magic chemicals, cars, cars, cars, "time saving" appliances and the list goes on and on and on.

How do you know if you are a slave to convenience? If you drive your car to work corner store to buy a quart of sugar or drink in a disposable cup and a microwave dinner, you're hooked. If the dealer gets you to use paper towels instead of cloth towels, you know you're hooked. If you find yourself working extra hours to afford "time saving" devices, you know that it's time to quit.

What is so bad about all these things? They sound pretty harmless when you hear them, but when you add the millions of people who are practicing these "wonderful" ways, you've got major problems.

What is the real cost of our convenience? The price is so high that it cannot be measured in monetary terms. It can be weighed in terms of the health of life on earth and the earth herself.

The real cost of "convenience pollution" is as measured by the 120,000 Americans who die each year from air pollution alone.

Our air, water and land are being poisoned by our own wastes. We are literally living on our own human waste!

We breathe it, we drink it, we eat it and if that's not enough, we even swim in it!

What can be done to break this horrible habit of convenience? First of all, educate yourself! Take a class here at Harper called Man and Environment. It shows all the effects that the human population has on the earth in terms of resources, politics, science, culture and ethics. It helps you to learn about the daily processes that we all depend on but take for granted. I'm sure most of us think we know where our food comes from the local super market, right?

Wrong! Food is grown in the ground on a farm. That is a ridiculous example but just shows that people don't think about where their sustenance comes from or where their waste goes to.

If we become more aware of the effects our daily actions have on the future of life on earth, I'm sure we would act much more responsibly.

Take advantage of your local library for books and magazines like "Businessweek," "E," "Garbage," "Stern" and "Wiredale." These are great sources of rehabilitation support for the convenience addict. So get help before it's too late: visit your local library today!

Vice President becomes caretaker of recent demise

Dear Mr. Simon:

I am writing in response to your article entitled "Death of Customer Service: Lesson Learned?" in the February 11 Harbinger edition. I appreciated reading your extremely well written article. As a person responsible for some of the areas alluded to by you, I feel extremely apologetic for any poor service which you may have received. I am pleased to see, however, that at least some of your experiences were positive. Try as we may, we are aware that our customer service is not always perfect.

We have attempted to provide customer service training and are hoping to expand our efforts in that area. In addition, we also plan to implement certain tenets of Total Quality Management which include receiving customer feedback on customer satisfaction surveys.

Unfortunately for you and other students not all of those mechanisms are in place. Although I would prefer that each individual effort would be directed from you, the consumer, regarding your praise or condemnation, I am pleased that you took the time to bring your negative experience attention. We really are here for you, the student, and despite our "bad days" we hope that we can demonstrate that as a student.

Sincerely,

Bonnie Henry, Ed D.

Cartoonist praised for efforts

Dear Mr. Dillard:

I think the cartoon on page 4 of the February 11th issue is the best cartoon I've ever seen in The Harbinger during my 24 years here at Harper. It's worthy of publication in any major newspaper.

In short, it is superb in every way. Please pass my compliments on the cartoonist. (I can't make out his name in the cartoon.)

Sincerely yours,

Frank Oliver

How about some apples instead of lemons?

Consumers need a better product, not a better sales pitch from car dealers and manufacturers

Paul Ficken
Harbinger Columnist

They know what you want.

You want a $7,000 car that gets around 20 miles to the gallon, has a good name, won't break down a lot since the 3 year warranty runs out, and a salesman who has a little inconvenience since the one he wants to sell you is the best deal for your money.

Well if that's what you really want, then it just proves that the old proverb about a fool and his money will hold true.

But you're not alone, fool.

P.T. Barnum bet his colleague Bailey that there was a sucker born every minute (insinuating that everyone is a sucker).

Bailey sucker for it. Inside the big top, just past the ticket taker, Barnum planned a sign that read "this way to the egress" with an arrow under it.

Egress is another word for exit. Everyone who paid to see the big top that day walked in and then right back out again, following the fads who were following their instincts -- as well as the sign. Those who wanted to see the show had to buy tickets all over again, thus proving he was right.

The good impression of this story is, now that you've learned it, you're not doomed to repeat it. Right?

Well, if that was true, then all the car dealers on Cliff Road would be out of business because people would demand what they want, and not settle for the gamble involved in buying a new car; people wouldn't settle for the gamble.

Maybe you think that the $7,000 car is the best deal you can make, but chances are you will get what you pay for. Every day people are sucker for deals just like this one from corporations all over the globe who could care less about what you want.

They're much too concerned with selling you what you will settle for; they're in the age old business of making money.

A new car for seven grand ain't worth the thirty-eight in bill of sale it's printed on. Oh sure, it's a good deal NOW, but most major car companies make their really big $$$ on after market products such as stereos, alternators, transmissions, clutches, brakes, and those ever important items, sunrims. A few. One way or another they plan on getting your money; the deal you make in the show room; you make up for in the shop.

So do what you want to do, demand only the best.

I don't know about anyone else, but my first new car is going to be my last. It will come with an unconditional, unlimited, lifetime warranty covering everything from the engine to the tires for the REST OF MY LIFE. Any money spent on replacing any thing other than seat covers, air fresh-eners, and fuel will be paid for by the warranty.

Any and all rust will immediately be taken care of by warranty, which may spawn them to make a load of more reliable materials than metals. I want to be able to upgrade the car (I need speed) without voiding the warranty and I will wait until all of the above is offered before I give them any of my spare earned money.

I will gladly pay $1,000 down and $50 per month for the REST OF MY LIFE. If any car company decides to give me what I really want.

Of course, I'll have to convince my insurance company that it is impossible for such a car to ever be damaged beyond it's worth, but if I can't -- HEY INSURANCE GUYS! I'll gladly pay $100 every month for the REST of my natural born LIFE to any agent willing to hypothecate ally speaking, insure such a car.

Of course this is all hypothetical, but it is also exactly what I want. Maybe if everyone demanded the same thing (or whatever they really want), everyone would get it. No longer would the public be open to manipulation by car companies. And if everyone would settle for nothing less than the best, maybe the car companies would stop designing more modern, gentler lighters and start designing cars WORTH PAYING FOR.

They say you can't please all the people all of the time, but that's assuming you're trying to please the people with what they don't want (e.g. FUNK). Some people settle for that, some don't. I sure as hell won't.

Once you refuse to follow the masses because "that's just the way the world is", you may have to wait a while and put up with laughter from fellow car freaks who got taken by the system, but you have also taken the first step towards real progress.

Towards being content with your purchases. Towards the big top.

Selective hiring is a new problem

Jason Beaver
Guest Columnist

Since the hiring of the new Attorney General I've recently noticed a trend in the job market that will interest a great deal of students.

The days of equality in the job market has finally come, or has it. I've recently had a chance to listen and talk with a highly respected columnist and a sports editor from the Daily Herald.

Two people that have earned their positions in the journalism community.

They both gave good advice of the job and don't let that accompany any job, but what they stressed the most was the hiring of minorities and females.

When the editor said that she had written a number of jobs on the fact that she is a woman including her current job at the Daily Herald. I had to sit up and take notice.

Since then I've found a lot of different employers have taken this stance in the way that they hire.

I can help and understand the reasoning for this.

But doesn't this raise the question of hiring the best qualified applicant?

I know for a fact that there is a lot of racism and sexism in the hiring of low level and high level positions, but do two wrongs make a right in this case?

I'm neither a minority nor a female and I have no problem with not getting a job because I'm not qualified, but when I can't get a job because I'm the wrong gender or because of the color of my skin.

That's when I begin to question whether we are going backwards or forwards.

When a recession is looming over our heads like a dark cloud.

I don't understand why employers are looking at race and gender when they should be looking at qualifications and experience.

Is this the way we come out of a recession? Hiring people who are unqualified, just to right a wrong that has been made by ignorant people over the past thousand years?

I think we owe it to ourselves and to our children to break the bonds that have been holding us back, and not fall into the same trap that has been set for us.

Mexican Red Bean Soup

1 tsp. olive oil
3/4 cup celery, chopped
3/4 cup green pepper, chopped
1 large onion, chopped
3 garlic cloves, crushed
2 (15 ounce) cans red kidney beans, drained
1 (2 ounce) can crushed tomatoes
1/4 cup onion
1/4 cup vinegar
2 tsp. chili powder
1-1/2 tsp. parsley
1 tsp. basil
3/4 cup oregano
3/4 cup ground cumin
1/2 tsp. salt
1 bay leaf

1/2 tsp. mince
1/2 cup shredded part skim Mozzarella cheese

Season celery, pepper, onion and garlic in the oil until tender. Stir in remaining ingredients, except the cheese, and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, for 1 hour. Uncover and simmer an additional 30 minutes, until a desired consistency is reached. Remove bay leaf and sprinkle with cheese.

Serves 4
Per serving, approximately 6.6 g fat

Hot and Soup Soup

"sensational coupling of flavors"
4 large, dried mushrooms, soaked until soft, and sliced
1 can bamboo shoots
1 tsp. "hot" soy sauce
4 cups chicken stock
salt, white pepper to taste
1/4 pound very lean ham, chopped
1 cup salsa, cubed
3 tsp. cornstarch, mixed with 4 tsp. cold water
2 egg whites, slightly beaten
1 green onion, chopped

Combine the first 6 ingredients and bring to a boil. Simmer 5 minutes. Add the salsa and vinegar and bring to a boil again. Slowly stir in the corn starch mixture and stir until soup thickens slightly. Gently add the egg whites. Garnish with green onion.

Serves 4-6

Village Salad
"old world flavor"

Adjust the amount of ingredients to the number of servings desired. Any combination of the following: sliced cabbage, sliced carrots, sliced green, red, yellow pepper; sliced, chopped tomatoes, sliced cucumbers, feta cheese, cubed, salt, pepper to taste.

Combine 1/2 of dressing (recipe follows) with the onion and prepare and marinate 1 hour. Toss with remaining ingredients and dressing. Pass the pepper mill.

Dressing

2 parts lemon juice to 1 part olive oil oregano, salt, pepper to taste

Whisk together all ingredients.

Suggestion: combined in a pepper mill equal amounts of white, black and green peppercorns.

Basil Bread

3 cups flour
1-1/2 tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. dried basil
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 cup butter
2 tsp. unsalted butter, melted
1-1/2 cups non fat buttermilk vegetable oil spray

Preheat oven to 450°F. Coat a round pan with vegetable oil spray. Combine the first 5 ingredients in a large bowl or processor with a dough hook. Mix to blend. Pour in the buttermilk and mix while slowly pouring in the buttermilk. Mix until soft. Turn out onto a floured surface and knead until smooth. Shape into a round loaf and place in prepared pan. Sprinkle top generously with flour. Bake 35-40 minutes until nicely browned.

Misunderstanding Taxes

Taxes are possibly one of those subjects that you would like to know more about, but would just as soon not ask about. The following are responses to some tax myths and misconceptions.

- Having someone else do your taxes doesn't make you any less responsible for what the return says. Pick your tax preparer carefully and check your return before signing and mailing it.
- Tax law can be complex, but fortunately no one needs to know all the tax laws to do his or her own return. Persons who feel they can't do their own returns should check their next tax package. More people can now file shorter, simpler tax returns.

Filing your tax return either late or early in the tax filing season has nothing to do with whether or not your return will be audited.

- An audit or examination is simply a formal request for more information about how a tax return was figured. Some audits actually result in taxpayers receiving tax refunds.
- If you are audited and you disagree with the IRS's examiner about the outcome, you can appeal those results. Your auditor will tell you how that can be done. Such appeals/hearings are held often, and they may result in adjustments in the taxpayer's favor.

The money you may earn from part-time weekend work is just as subject to taxes as your "regular" salaried job. In short, income from whatever source is taxable unless expressly excluded by law.

Generally, you can make your federal tax refund larger or smaller by simply changing the amount of your federal tax withholding on Form W-4, "Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate." However, this is not a very good way to save money because interest is usually not paid on refunds.

If you receive a notice from the IRS stating that it appears you owe additional tax and you believe it is in error, say so. No one wants to pay taxes that he or she doesn't owe. You will of course be expected to produce the records or facts to back up your statement.

Just because you have income does not mean you have to file a federal tax return. Well over a million relatively low income tax returns are filed each year that really don't have to be. The largest group of persons filing tax returns who don't have to are individuals 65 years old or older.

Check your tax status items or call the IRS at 1-800-829-1040. For more information about taxes, get IRS Publication 17, "Your Federal Income Tax," and Publication 910, "Guide to Free Tax Services." Get both free by calling 1-800-829-3676.

IRS Gets New Look

You do the best you can. You worry over its weak points and glory in its strengths or you pay some one else to do it for you, except for the worrying. Then, off it goes. Your federal tax return has begun its journey—a journey that is changing dramatically for the better.

A vast high tech restructuring is taking place within the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) that will result in the total integration of its electronic data processing system. These changes are going to reduce some taxpayer worrying, speed up the processing of tax returns, and make tax collection much faster.

Those changes that will most affect individual taxpayers will include:

- Improved service to taxpayers. This is the first priority and it is taking place now. Almost all of the billion-plus pieces of tax information necessary to process tax returns will be turned into electronically integrated records. These records can then be accessed in minutes to answer taxpayer questions about their tax accounts. By the IRS tax assistant the taxpayer reaches on his or her first telephone call.
- Far fewer IRS contacts will have to be made with taxpayers for such routine information as taxpayer identification data, or to identify inadequately labeled payments or tax returns. With access to electronic files, the majority of cases where issues will be resolved quickly.

• Less time will be required to solve tax problems because more tax information about an individual's account and general tax law will be at the tax assistant's fingertips. Electronic filing of tax returns will increase.

• By increasing the use of computer matching of tax records and the integration of these records, compliance with the tax laws will be improved. This will help assure that the honest taxpayer will not have to, in effect, pick up the tab for the taxpayer who doesn't pay his or her fair share.

• Electronically stored taxpayer information will be doubly safeguarded. Access to an individual's tax data within the IRS will be tightly restricted to those who need the information to do their jobs, and special computer software will be installed to guard against computer viruses.

These IRS modernization measures began with the start of electronic filing nationwide in 1990. They will be completed by the year 2000 and the tax return filing process will never be the same. Paying taxes may never be totally pleasant but the IRS says it will be faster, fairer, and simpler.

Backstage Pass

With Ben Jovi coming to town, Beyond Therapy in the works and Patty Loveless in the near future, you are going to be introduced to what goes on behind the scenes from a rehearsal stagehand's point of view.

More times than not, the call is at 8 a.m. First thing, we checked to see what crew we were on—lighting, sound, stage, props. The truck pulled into the dock, and everyone had gloves on. It was cold. We were all ruffled by the smell of the exhaust. We unloaded the truck—armed by how much fit into the back of the vehicle. Commands were shouted to direct the madhouse: "Stage left! Stage right! Center stage! Epistle! You're first!"

Once everything was off the truck, the real work began. Lighting crew began by directing the rig to their appropriate position. The rig was hoisted up by five to ten people to their upright position.

One person directed the rest: "One, two, THREE!" and, in unison, the crew responded, "Three, six!" It's barely only theater people can appreciate.

All the circuits were connected, gels checked. Around 10-15, coffee and donuts were inhaled in the green room (the perfect union food). The break only lasted 15 minutes then we all went back to work.

The lighting designer, or master electrician, checked the lighting positions and focused them that needed to be adjusted.

The genre was rolled center stage and someone was directed to climb "to heaven" to aim and focus the lights. The run of an entire rehearsal crew pulled the genre around or back another break.

The worst job, in my opinion, is the task of light board operator (LBO) during the focus. You sit up in the lighting booth and once in a while, reposition a slider or two. Rather boring.

Meanwhile, stage crew set up the scenery, organized props, laid out walkways and laid down glow tape by blocking during the show. For the Nykites, an acappella group, there was a huge sphere, maybe 12' in diameter, and a sail with two enormous drops which were flown in and out.

Launch never comes too soon. We all enjoyed an entire hour off—some got the entire afternoon off, depending on the crew. Most of the hour was used for that all important afternoon nap with only a few minutes devoted to setting down Taco John which helped us through the rest of the day.

The finishing touches were adjusted, the van lights were set and programmed. The light board operator then pulled out the joystick to control the van lights. We all were very impressed. The performers were scheduled to arrive around three.

The sound check began at 3:30 p.m. and lasted a full three hours. Trying to move ladders around during a sound check was a mere challenge and the commands were not as easy to understand since we had started rehearsal. The sound check ended (for some) and we break for dinner. We all went home and changed into our black and garb and put in time to wash the end of the sound check.

The performers went to dinner and a crash diet rehearsal took place. We ran through the cues so we were just a little bit acquainted with the show. Then spent the day in the show, so I could know my cues to prevent any confusion during the show. We then sat around until the house opened.

The audience piled in when the doors opened. Warnings and calls echoed across the headliner's—hurry, hurry, hurry—about audience members and what happened at the last cast party.

The house lights went to half and the audience began to cheer. My heart began to pound. This is the moment I live for as theater. The opening!

Backstage, the performers opened themselves up—ready to roll.

House went out, the curtain went up, the lights illuminated the stage and the show was on.

The show ran smoothly. It is interesting to watch the show when you are part of it, knowing what is going to happen next. You are the one who will make it work.

The crowd chortled and you know that part of that cheer is for you. The show was over (it went so fast), the house filtered out, I raced down from spot to begin the strike. Now the opposite of what we spent the whole day working on happens. Everything comes down, you put away the tape comes up on enormous rolls, cables are coiled, road boxes are full, the truck is loaded, lights are laid out and later and then it is actually it is time to go home.

No matter how exhausted we all were, we all went to Denny's, some went to someone's house for a party. The next day was no rehearsal for the reality for when the next show comes to town.

Y. gets live it.

There is poetry to be slammed!

POETRY SLAM AT O'TRINA'S LAKESIDE INN in downtown Wauconda 110 S. Main Street, Wauconda

Poet, performer, and "Emcee Extraordinaire," Mac Smith has brought national attention to Chicago's poetry community with the establishment of the Poetry Slam—the nation's most visible, vibrant and often outrageous poetry reading exhibition. He has influenced and inspired Chicago poets to shake off the recession notion that poetry belongs to the high minded. He is the Grand Master of Chicago Style Slam Poetry, and he's turning the slam to EXURRIA—via Wauconda!

This is performance poetry. There will be a piano. There will be an emcee. Everyone is invited to bring their own poetry and participate. Professional poets, amateurs, students, novices—this is your opportunity to put your poetry where your mouth is!

Wednesday evenings at O'Trains, 7:30 to 10:00 March 3, 10, 24 & 31. Sponsored by Wauconda Area Library. Call 526-6225 for details or directions.

Cover Charge: $3 Per Person (Free Admission if you show your show your Wauconda Area Library Card).

Mac Smith, nationally renowned poetry "slam" guru and founder, is coming to Wauconda in March to emcee a series of slams sponsored by the Wauconda Area Library. Smith started a movement in Chicago's poetry scene six years ago in Chicago when he came up with the idea of reconnecting American people to poetry—any poetry by transforming poetry readings into entertaining events—called "slams." The idea is to get people relaxed in a comfortable setting, keep them entertained, and demonstrate the emotional power of poetic language with no pretense.

Why Wauconda? Leslie Geist, Wauconda Area Library's programming coordinator, asked Smith after one of his shows she attended at Chicago's Green Mall Lounge, where the poetry slam has become a tradition, if he would be interested in doing a poetry slam in downtown Wauconda. Smith drove out to Wauconda the following week to check it out and immediately decided that the atmosphere was perfect. Smith agreed to emcee four slams sponsored by the Library, to take place at O'Trains' Lakeside Eatery and Tavern.

Tom Kem, Director of the Wauconda Area Library, sees this series as an opportunity to bring entertainment and business to Wauconda while at the same time boosting the Library's image as an active contributor to the cultural growth of the community. "This is a big event for Wauconda," says Kem. "Although most Wauconda residents have probably never heard of Smith and the movement he started in Chicago, that's not what this is all about—it's about using language—having fun with it—being inspired by it and inspiring others with it. That's why the poetry slam movement caught on in the first place." Kem expects the series to draw an audience not only from Wauconda but from the entire north-west suburban area.

ARTS AND ENTERTAINMENT

The Hottinger, March 12, 1993 9

The Iguuanas bring a little bit of Tex-Mex to us

Is it? Joe Cabral, Rod Hodges, Steve Cannon, Derek Huston, Willy Parker.

A piece of music from the Iguuanas has the basic elements of soulful, raucous expression and engaging rhythm, but any attempt to categorize or label the New Orleans-based band is impossible. At their debut album on Margraveville Records shows, they find the right quality for Iguanas music in everything from New Orleans rhythm and blues to Tex-Mex conga music and all points in between.

The Iguanas kick off the album with the two-part instrumental "Late At Night" and then move into steady rock with "Pursuing the Dream." From that point, any style of music is fair game, from the country rock of "This Night of Sin" to the Mexican polka of "Take Your Pickers." Their Latin And Your Ring" from the twin instrumental sound of "I'll Tame You" is the accurate lead on "Dark And Dangerous Love." They create a hypnotic atmosphere for legendary New Orleans writer Allen Toussaint's "Fortune Teller," a contrast to the rocking good advice set forth in "Don't Treat Him Mean." Lyrically as well as musically, the Iguanas keep the scenery changing constantly, from the poetic Spanish imagery of "For Me Camacho (Along My Way)" and the romance of "No Te Olvidare (I Won't Forget You)" to the direct one-on-one confrontation of "Put Your Hands Up" and the other-worldly situation of "You Make It Hard."

The sound of the Iguanas came to life in New Orleans in 1990, but it is rooted all across North America in the diverse backgrounds of the five band members.

*Joe Cabral, vocals, tenor sax and bongo (a Mexican rhythm guitar), was raised in Omaha, Nebraska, and has first musical experiences came in his father's Mexican band. In college in Missoula, Montana, he discovered Chicago blues, New Orleans R&B and honky-tonk players.

*Rod Hodges, vocals, guitar and accordion, began playing guitar in San Francisco area blues and rock bands at the age of 14. Later, while playing in a blues band in Colorado, he rediscovered the conga music that was a part of his mother's Mexican heritage, and inspired by master musician Flaco Jimenez, he took up accordion.

*Willy Parker, drums, began playing blues in his hometown of Chicago while aged 17. He has performed with such blues greats as Junior Collins, Albert Collins and Junior Wells.

*Steve Cannon, bass, is a native of New Orleans. A professional musician since high school, he has toured the U.S. and Europe, and his recording credits include Alex Chilton, guitar, Slim Jr. and Willy DeVille. He also produced an album for The Fab Four's Paul McCartney in Memphis.

*Derek Huston, tenor sax and background vocals, grew up in Washington, D.C., playing rock-rock. New Orleans R&B and rockabilly music. He majored in music at Duke University and moved to New Orleans on Halloween, 1990.

In the late 1980's Cabral and Hodges moved south from Colorado to pursue their favorite music: the distinctive New Orleans style of rhythm and blues. Forming the Iguanas, they played New Orleans style music initially. When Cabral and Hodges threw in more music from their Mexican heritage, their fans loved it. The Iguanas quickly became the hottest new band in New Orleans, winning the 1990 Big Easy Award for Best Emerging Talent, and the following year a Big Easy Award for Best Rock Band, a spot on the Jazz and Heritage Festival and tour dates with Jimmy Buffet. Their debut album was produced by James Newkirk, a veteran of the Chicago blues scene.

The Iguanas introduce a unique new sound, and the only remaining problem is what to call this kind of music. The many musical ingredients have prompted comparisons to a bowl of gumbo. One journalist called them a "Tex-Mex meets New Orleans R&B dance band" and that's the short story. Another successfully summed up the Iguanas as "the best band in New Orleans." Band member Huston says of their music, "It's about dancing, about a groove and about having a hell of a good time." Like anything truly unique, their music defies itself, and in the future, music that combined the best of New Orleans and Tex-Mex and everything in between will be known simply as Iguanas music.

The 70th annual Midwest Beauty Show, "93," impacted the O'Hare Expo Center last week, February 27 through March 2, introducing the latest in beauty needs. Over 300 professional beauty corporations were represented in new-line product booths and innovative fashion presentations. Among them were such well-known corporations as Avon, Clairol, Coty, Helene Curtis, Mary Kay, Paul Mitchell, Revlon, Rusk, Sebastian and Tinsal.

Freddie Ficklin, the undisputed master of style, performed live demonstrations to packed audiences. The charming, French hairdresser's unique method of bringing out an individual's style and beauty has earned him an elite group of regular clients, such as Demi Moore, Mariah Carey, and Madonna New York. There is a show mode waiting line to undergo Ficklin's artistry at his Beauty Center in New York's legendary Bergdorf Goodman.

Other high-energy presentations featured the creative talents of the internationally known Xenos, Russell Parks from Jacksonville from Miami and locally, Mario Tricca.

The Beauty Show was open to the public although cosmetologists benefited the most from the array. In addition to exhibiting, staged technical shows, there were also educational workshops and seminars and lots of shopping. The Midwest Beauty Show enables parents to purchase discounted equipment for their trade or for their own personal needs from acrylic nails and hair dryers to herbal body wraps and wigs.

The Show has packed its bags and swept the hair off the floor, but it'll be back next year to show what's in store for '94.

Jimmy the Geek introduces a new column this week for gamblers only

Jimmy the Geek
Harbinger Guest Sports Columnist

We regains to inform you that our crack reporter, Ian Ferguson, is on vacation this week and didn't leave us a story. We were able to find a last minute substitute for his column, though.

Hi, my name is Jimmy the Geek, local oddsmaker and sports aficionado. A little something called bookmaking charges you to read me from giving you tips and/or betting information on actual events, so I'll stick to "hypothetical" situations.

Let's start with the odds on the Red Sox playing the Cubs in the World Series anytime... let's say the next hundred years or so. I think it would be safe to say the line would be approximately 1/1000 to one. I never did well with numbers, so I'll put that into layman's terms for you. The odds of that miracle occurring are the same as my old blacked American made boytoy Playboy for the article, for any Harper madmen without the parking lot was a little closer to their class.

Another interesting wager could be whether or not the Bulls can "throttle" a couple of months ago no books, I mean oddsmakers, who valued their life, would take that bet. But now, with the addition of Ed Neely, the bets are flowing. Most people still think the Bulls are a lock for their third championship, but remember the old adage "A fool and his money are soon parted." You could submit me "A Bulls fan" for "A Fool" and not lose anything in the translation.

Being an oddsmaker has its advantages. I am witness to the sheer stupidity of the average sports fan. Most of you will bet a favorite, no matter what the odds. Take this guy Ian for example. He'll bet on the Red Sox or the Braves in almost any situation. Given both their recent histories, I'd say he has kept me in business all by himself. As a matter of fact, he might have taken this "vacation" to avoid paying up on his last bet. He actually thought that the Bird vs. Celtics could be the former Beaver from the East, Detroit, on the Pistons' home court.

I'd like to finish up with some more baseball "predictions." Two teams are starting from scratch, but all the Spring teams here at Harper are well into their pregame practices. Here's an overview of how things stand on March 2:

Baseball
Head coach Norm Garrett couldn't be more pleased with the team he's working with. Garrett said he won't really know just how the team works together until the Spring trip to get to Miami, March 20. Because of the weather, the Hawks must practice in the gym, severely cutting down on the actual "real game" situation. Garrett has learned to work around the weather, though, stating "You just have to accept it."

Sofball
Being both head women's basketball and the new head softball coach, Jennifer Jensen doesn't have much transition time between seasons to get to know her players and their abilities. Jensen does know that Diane

Intramural basketball teams continue exciting season

Clear demonstration of the bad odds of the IM basketball League was apparent for all to see in the third week of the season. One great game followed another throughout the evening. Here is the rundown of the Feb. 25 games:

5th Ward 66 Unouchabulls 64

The Hawks ran their season record to 10-0 but have yet to take a walk game. With the Hawks dominating tonight on a 43-25 half time lead, the Unouchabulls Five kept picking away at the margin in the second period. Greg Kelley's 19 second half points and some timely foul shooting by Joe Emery helped the Unouchabulls close to within two points and control of the ball with 30 seconds remaining, but Dominick Hardin's 10 long run at three in the first half and Derrick Harris stepped up play in the second half to pull out the win.

IM Team 44 Hit Squad 37

The IM Team evened their record to 1-1 for the season with an impressive hard fought win over the top rated Hit Squad. The game saw the lead change several times with the IM Team holding a lead when the first round of the IM Team got balanced scoring from all eight players on their line up and played textbook team defense when the going got tough. Not to slight a great effort by the Hit Squad, they have been unlucky to draw most of the toughest teams in the league in their first two outings. Be as the Hit Squad.

Beats 50 Big Dogs 41

The Bears jumped out to a 29-19 half time lead over a determined Big Dogs and had to keep up the pressure throughout the second half to keep them at bay. Tim Longmire and John Schuler provided the offense for the winners. Larry Price scored 15 points for the Dogs. Games with the Dogs are now a walk in the park as there is no quit in them from start to finish.

Court Justice 77 Prime Time 48

Court Justice got their first win of the new season with some great first half shooting from Chris Sanguant. He posted four straight dimes which went with Mike Lowrich's strong in and out to give the CJ a 43-30 lead. The prime Time players improved their play this week and added some new players to add more depth to the line up. Greg Fox continues to be their main production man leading the team with 20 points, 12 coming from the three point line. Mark Cason added 16 for players.

Spring sports hit halfway point in preseason

Jim Warren
Sports Editor

Some are building up, some are undermanned, and some are starting from scratch, but all the Spring teams here at Harper are well into their pregame practices.

Here's an overview of how things stand on March 2:

Baseball
Head coach Norm Garrett couldn't be more pleased with the team he's working with. Garrett said he won't really know just how the team works together until the Spring trip to get to Miami, March 20. Because of the weather, the Hawks must practice in the gym, severely cutting down on the actual "real game" situation. Garrett has learned to work around the weather, though, stating "You just have to accept it."

Sofball
Being both head women's basketball and the new head softball coach, Jennifer Jensen doesn't have much transition time between seasons to get to know her players and their abilities. Jensen does know that Diane Knoblocks, Michelle Chosen, Lauren Kerling, and Dana Lombardo will be returning from last year and that last year's team ended the season with a 3-18 record, but it's still too early to know much more.

After only one practice, Jensen takes what she sees "from what I've seen, they all have good fundamentals. There's a good talent there," she said.

Tennis
While things looked very promising for the Hawks in the first meeting in October, head coach Roger King doesn't like what has happened to his team since.

The best of nine players that team has King less confident than last year before the season. "Right now we're just trying to fill a team, regardless of the talent," said King. The team was then again's top last year, but right now their coach thinks they're possibly the weakest.

The team still has Justin Eggstaff and Dave Mistry who King believes are "as talented as anybody," but more talent is still being sought on campus.

Men's Track
"This is the best team I've ever had," says Head Coach Renee Zellner of her men's team. Zellner says the overall numbers are the highest they've ever been and thanks to a fully returning department with only one true sponsor (sorry Gary), what the team lacks in the short distances they make up for every other elite.

Women's Track
Coach Zellner has the reverse situation with her women's team as she does with the men.

The entire team from last year is gone, and this season can only be considered a "major rebuild year" in the eyes of Zellner. With only six athletes, the team may not find its true team competition, but the individual results may be strong.

Sherry Holmes hopes to qualify for nationals in discus, and Zellner says Amy Morgan is "doing remarkably well" in long distance. Also on the team are Laura Kuhn (middle-distance), Kim Stodine (thrower), Vanessa Marfil (sprints and hurdles) and Monica Peroutz (thrower).

Nationals? Nationals? The men's and women's swimming teams are leaving to compete in the NJCAA Nationals this weekend in Florida.

Intramural basketball continues this week on Tuesday and Thursday. On Tuesday the Bears will take on the Skinkies at 7 p.m. At 8 p.m. an IB Team will go head to head with Court Justice followed by Hit Squad vs. Prime Time. Ending the evening will be the Unouchabulls and Big Dogs.

Starting off the night on Thursday will be Big Dogs vs. Skinkies at 7 p.m. Tailing behind at 8 p.m. Court Justice and the Bears compete on the court. 5th Ward and Prime Time play at 9 p.m. and Unouchabulls and Hit Squad take the court at 10 p.m.

Season openers for fall sports are coming up quickly this year. Home openers are as follows:

Men's tennis will open their season against Wakeham at 2 p.m. on March 30.

Softball teams will open April 5 against Trion at 1 p.m.

Baseball will play at home for the first time on April 8 at 2 p.m. against Wakeham. Their season opener is on March 20 at Blackhawk and they will travel over spring break.

Track will start the season off in the Wharton Open at Wharton on March 27.

Good luck with the new season!

Dana Marshall, who excelled in only one diving but in the relay times as well. This will be the last national meet for Draschel and Giesler to be seen by colleges and universities. Jim Giesler is the NJCAA's male that an individual can only participate in the nationals twice. This rule makes this meet extremely important for the swimmers.

This will be the second year attending the nationals for O'Brien, but for Head Swim Coach Gordon Aukerman and Trainer Doug Spivak, it will be nothing new. Aukerman and Spivak have been part of Harper's many top placements at the nationals and the team is confident that they'll do it again.

Although chances are slim of making the team, but one spot does in the relay events. In the past, Harper should have one more top ten trophy to add to the accomplishments of its outstanding swim team.

Hawk wrestlers put an end to successful season at nationals

Jim Walcott
Sports Editor

Maybe the team actually can be stopped.

It took the greatest wrestlers from the best schools in the country, but for the first and last time this season, the Hawk wrestlers left a contest without first place honors.

The NCA National tournament was held this past weekend, Feb. 27 and 28 in Bloomington, Minn., and most of Harper's wrestling team was able to take part in the event.

It was a tough situation to be in for the Hawks, who had just hosted the Region IV tournament at home a week earlier.

Most of the teams in the country have a two-week delay, enough time to prepare mentally and head physically for the grueling heat of the country event.

Head Coach Norm Lovelace was very proud of his team after and as mentioned that instead of the fourth place of all non-scholarship schools, the Hawks could have easily walked away with first place again, saying "I've never had a tournament where we lost so many close matches."

Five of the seven national qualifying Hawk wrestlers ended up in the All American Wrestling round, and unfortunately four of those lost their matches by either one point or lost in overtime.

Had it not been for some missed opportunities

Of the AAW round matches, Tom Rasmussen (113) lost to Steve Bailey (142) lost a match decided in controversy. Near the end of the match, and Bailey winning 2-1, both wrestlers were off the mat and onto the concrete floor. Both wrestlers stopped what they were doing, and the referee gave the opposing wrestler two points for almost getting caught. The match ended with Bailey losing 4-2, and the other wrestler going on to become the best in the country in his weight class.

Tom Lemmy (167) and Larry Popp (177) lost their AAW round matches 3-2 and 1-0, respectively.

Frank Hammond, the heavy weight powerhouse that just may have won the region championship for the team a week earlier was the only Hawk to receive national ranking.

Doing very well early in the tournament, Hammond was "covertly aggressive" in the initial of Lovelace during the quarter final round. While trying for the pin when he could have sat back and waited, the time limit, Hammond made a hasty mistake and lost the match by one point, but walked away with sixth place honors in the heavy weight class.

"Comeback kid" Jerry Kearns finally got his chance to wrestle on the national level, but the results weren't what he had hoped for. After winning his first match, Kearns lost his second match by one point, ending his week end.

"This was a great season," said Lovelace. The goal was to win nationals, and they did. Sharing the coach of the year honor with assistant coach Dan Loppert for the region was an achievement of proof that this season truly is a team.

As far as this year's team was concerned, Lovelace said he couldn't be more pleased, "I'd like a dozen of them."

Steve Bailey controls his match until controversy cuts into the decision

Swimmers head to Florida for nationals

Paul Koon

Out of the 16 members of the Harper swim team, 13 have qualified for five (unfilled) competitive days in the swim Florida run at the National Junior College Athletic Association's (NJCAA) National Swim and Diving Meet, March 3-6. In the past two years, the Nationals were held in Oklahoma City and Orlando, FL, but this year the meet is being held in Fort Pierce, Florida, giving the most competitive junior college, Indian Rivers, the home pool advantage.

Most of the team qualified Feb. 20-21 at the College of DuPage regionals. More than half of the region winners at that meet went from Harper College.

"I think the girls will do well in the relays," said Stacy Dinsch, Captain of the women's swim team. "An average of the last two school records from last year, and they'll go on to win at the nationals."

"The guys hope to break at least three school records in the relays," added men's team Captain Jim Ciesler.

Six women and seven men make up the roster of Harper swimmers that qualified at regionals. Among (See Swimmers on page 11)

Eye on the Hawks

No folks, your next grating means: This should be familiar to you.

Last week Heather and I had quite a bit to say to each other regarding the participation of professional athletes in the Olympics. In fact, we had enough to say that we've decided to continue the subject this week.

In the last issue I gave my thoughts on why the pros should be allowed to compete and now I plan to explain to you why amateurs should not be in the Olympics.

First of all, amateurs simply do not deserve to be in the games. Heather's opinion that pros have the best of their lives to compete and should step back down is bold water.

In the NCA All American basketball tournament, so my knowledge at least, it has been suggested to let high school athletes play because the college kids have the rest of the year to train their staff.

Imagine the reaction of the youth training two men, James Naughton in the World Series. Jim LeFebvre brings Ken Dillard, a pitcher from Harper College into the game because, after all, Harper College players have all year to fight their abilities.

To me, these situations sound a bit serious and the same idea stands for the Olympics.

My second argument against having amateur athletes in the Olympics is something I really don't agree with, but it is the truth.

Money. The more big names and personalities in the Olympics, the more big dollars will follow.

personally paid $40 for a pair of Olympic Air Jordans for my two year old nephew last summer during the dream team's domination of the rest of the world. It's a pretty good guess that me and millions of other people like me would not have spent the money had we been paying for Olympic Air Jordans.

I will agree that money is the root of all evil in sports, but it's not the point where the financial aspect can't be reversed.

The Olympics are for the best athletes to compete, and thus the way it should be.

Well here we are again. Another week but the same old topic. Here are the pros and cons of the whole situation. (Thanks Tom)

First the pros. Being that the Olympics is so serious which country is the strongest athlete ally we need to need to need. And as Jim mentioned professional athletes are our best. But there are quite a few top playing amateurs out there still with best against best. It's a fight for the top ranked position in the world. That's about all I really have for the pro side of the story. So onto the next subject: the cons. The cons are, first of all, amateur athletes in the world are not given a chance to show off their abilities when up against the professionals. Secondly, when there are professionals from one country and another country sends a sprig of amateur, look at who has almost no chance. The amateurs.

What ever happened to good clean competition in our world today? Where did all the amateurs go? Would the true meaning of the game please step forward?

Most of them disappeared or turned professional themselves as the Olympics became a professional fighting ground. Excluding swimming, track and field and the other sports that don't have a professional aspect outside of the Olympics. To some athletes in their sports the Olympics is as professional as they can get.

Amateurs are not given a chance any more. There are plenty of good athletes coming out of high schools and colleges that could represent the United States in any country. They just need help and get the job done. Non professionally.

If the Olympics is going to remain at the professional level we should work on a dividing line. For as many professional athletes competing there should be just as many amateurs in the world.

School denies new meeting times

KENNETH DILLARD
Editor-in-Chief

The college administration has refused to incorporate the new Saturday meeting times set by the student senate surrounding the senate with yet more controversy.

Sharon Alter, student senate adviser, has yet to condense the new meeting times, nullifying any future decisions made by the senate.

"The form that requests a room for club meetings has to have an adviser's signature," said Jeanne Parkman, student activities director. "If the form did not have the (adviser's) signature on it, nullifying their decision to make the time change."

Supporting Parkman in the decision was Dr. Bonnie Henry, student affairs vice president, and Dr. Paul Thompson, president.

"The senate is a learning experience," Henry said. "Without the adviser, there is no such experience." "I agree completely with the school's decision," Thompson said. "It was the right decision."

Senators were informed through a phone call, made by a member of the program board, two days before the first Saturday assembly.

Reaction brought criticism from senate members.

"I find it a little surprising that they wanted to call until two days before the meeting," said Melinda Niekamp, a senator.

Charles January, senate president, said "I'm upset about this."

Niekamp contacted Henry after the phone call to confirm the decision, but was unsuccessful in changing Henry's stance.

Asking for explanation why the senate decided to change the meeting times, Lou French, senate treasurer, said "They (the senators) were having problems attending the meetings, the scheduling conflicts in their work schedules, but I wanted to get accurate information."

A d d d Smith, "We wanted to make the meeting times more accessible for the student senators who wouldn't normally be able to attend a Friday meeting."

Refuting these claims, Parkman said "They are basically meeting on their own, out of the type of the student body and their adviser."

Debate over the change came back to a Feb. 23 meeting in which three senators, in a quarter, decided to vote for the change. During that meeting, three other senators left that to be held.

Apparently, not knowing that the vote was taking place.

"Until they go back to their adviser meeting times, that were published in the student activity calendar, any decision made will not be formally recognized," Parkman said.

"We've held meetings without the adviser before," January said. "So I don't see what the battle is about."

As to the controversy does not appear as right, as neither side is willing to give in to the other.

Senators say they prefer to keep the new meeting time, continuing the decision making process that they have used all year. Meanwhile, the school won't back down on its stance as not recognizing any formal decision made from that point on.

Budget cuts could affect programs

JENNIFER TECHAMON
News Editor

Harper's administrators and faculty have been instructed to cut their budgets, possibly affecting programs and services, due to an estimated $167,000 budget deficit expected in the 1994 fiscal year.

Cost center managers are meeting with the vice president, in academic affairs and student services to put together packages of recommended cuts. Each manager will cut approximately 3 percent from their programs. The 3 percent cut will save about 1 million dollars.

How much individual programs could be hurt by the cuts might be decided on the basis of whether or not the program is viable. "It will depend on whether there's enough students in a program to warrant it," Veen Mankie, vice president of administrative services said.

"Small programs such as hospital arts could be hurt because so much of the budget is tied up in salaries," Suzanne Marhe, Journalism Program coordinator said. "Course offerings will have to be limited because I'll have to cut from either faculty overhead or adjunct faculty funds."

However, Mankie said he does not foresee any one program being hurt substantially by the cuts. Mankie was not willing to name some of those programs.

"We are primarily looking at the Education Fund," Mankie said. "However, another fund that I'm looking at closely is the Auxiliary Fund, a fund that's one of things such as food services, the bookstore, continuing education programs, child care programs and athletic programs."

"We are seeing a deterioration of these programs very quickly now, because they are not supported by taxpayers," Mankie said. "All of the revenue generated for these programs comes through tuition and fees, and apparently, they are not always able to keep up with expenses."

"The question is how to hurt the services to students the least," Lou Vapori, interim dean of learning resources said. "Harper's Learning Resource Center already doesn't meet the standards set by the Association of College Research Libraries. A cut could only worsen the figures."

"The economic environment poses a unique dilemma for us since we have a high demand for our resources contrasted with a strong movement among our citizenry to freeze or lower property taxes, our largest means of support," Paul Thompson, president of Harper College said.

"The state's resources are given on an annual basis and are dwindling," Muske said. "Local taxes this year were capped on our statement increases. We anticipate that next year will be some form of tax cap probably for Cook County which does not exist now. These two factors are going to contribute significantly to budget problems," Muske said.

The decisions regarding the cuts and recommendations are expected to come by March 15 from cost center managers for the Executive Committee review.

The John Fischetti Scholarship Award

The Requirements:

The John Fischetti Scholarship is presented annually by the Joint Civic Committee of Italian Americans to students who are majoring in journalism or communications. ## Harper takes 2nd; wins newspaper competition

Tom Fium
News Editor

The Harbinger took second place in the 2-year college category of the student newspaper competition at the Associated Colleges Press "Best of the Midwest" conference in Minneapolis on Feb. 27.

The conference was attended by students and advisors from 35 colleges covering eight states in the Midwest.

Those who attended were: Ken Dillard, Heather Carroll, Ann Kovachik, Cindy Jett, Jim Walzina, Alina Chahand, Arlene Wagner, and Suzanne Hevlic.

The conference was held to educate students in the field of journalism and to make them more aware of what goes into creating a newspaper. They also gave the students the opportunity to meet and talk with other editors, advisors and staff members from other parts of the Midwest.

"I learned that controversy is better for the paper, and that stirring it up adds 'flavor' to the paper," said Dillard, Managing Editor, Heather Carroll, said she learned how to serve the reader better by getting a different aspect on the story to keep reader's attention.

"After attending the managing of a two-year newspaper session, I learned to keep the paper humorous, but interesting and informative," she said.

All events took place on the Minneapolis campus.

A journey for fulfillment

The past two years, I have been on a quest. It's a quest to find out where I can have fun.

My quest began in the bars across the country. I figured that these "watering holes" were the place to go out and be social.

Strike one. Nothing but smoke and rude people greeted me each time I entered one.

The next stop, according to my map, was the local mall, where I could hang around with some friends in the parking lot.

Strike two. The police decided to interfere at our get-together and tell us to disperse because we were loitering.

Finally, I looked to the school to let loose my joyous little self.

Strike three. While I was becoming involved in a water fight, I was interrupted by guard from public safety, who informed me that I was being rude and childish.

So much for having a little bit of enjoyment in life. It's not as if I was harming anyone aside from myself and my opponents.

Ok, maybe I was a little bit loud. And I do admit to being somewhat obnoxious.

But does that mean that I should be reprimanded for being myself.

Everywhere I've been, criticism and harassment have followed me just because I was displaying my feelings of happiness.

Is there some great unwritten law that states that "Thou shalt not have fun, anywhere,"?

That is something that I have yet to find on my quest for fulfillment.

One day, in the near future, I will grow up. But for now, I want to enjoy what free time I get.

When I finally graduate college, and finish yet another quest, I will put aside my childish behavior, maybe.

But until then, I'm having a blast!

COMMENTARY

Jack or Jill, it's all downhill

Paul Posen
Harbinger Columnist

Once upon a time, in New York, there were two lovely Hill street neighbors—Jack, and Jill.

They were the epitome of minority qualifications. Jack was a black, Nazi, homosexual, Vietnam veteran and Jill was a book, on the pill, religious, abolition activist taxi driver. Their love was mutual.

One day, Jack was walking home from a hunting trip with his old beat-up friend, Al Kahlala Sr. when Jill ran them both down, speeding to her as traffic controller training class. It was then that Jack decided to show his love for Jill on a more personal level.

When Jill came home that night, Jack told all the air out of the tires on Jill's cab. Satisfied with himself, he went to the liquor store and bought himself a porn mag.

The next morning, Jill was late for work. She barely remembered what had happened the day before but a coke line quickly made it insignificant. When she called a tow truck, the accident had been too Jack's truck.

Jack, however, was in the truck and wasn't upset. He had some love of gangbangers to jump and rape Jill.

for a list of money. When they jumped her, she offered them double to kill Jack.

But Jack was an Italian scumbag and had plenty of protection. When the gang showed up, he had them all arrested for loitering.

And thus began the "war on Hill street." Jack would lose Jill's apartment and Jill would shoot at Jack with an .44.

Their love was paramount. Then Jill got some of her friends from the media to publicly humiliate Jack. She went on the air and exposed Jack for all he was. "He's wicked and evil and deserves everything he gets."

Soon the music city was divided between black, Nazi, Jew, homosexual, Vietnam vet beer drinkers and what, sexy, born again, armed, drug addict taxi drivers. The love ran rampant.

Children were sold and hate was loved. Rap concerts were raided by white college students and choruses were bombed by radical, left wing, fascist Army distributors.

Death rained in on a black boxer, was killed for his tape, and served as a delicacy in a hole in the wall Chinese restaurant. The world was in chaos.

THEN, it happened.

Every TV set in the world received the same picture from an unknown source. At first there were static maps, color crackles, picture pops and general interference signals.

Bathrooms and glaciers alike paused in their tracks, turning to see the sparking tubes.

What was going on? Who was broadcasting this garbage? Where were the Brady's?

SUDDENLY, only for a moment, the picture cleared up—and the world was at privy.

An alarm officer with big black eyes, a dragon nose, and a small mouth with no lips appeared to his superiors in a monotonous, staccato voice: "They have almost eliminated themselves. Dispatch the mining ships now."

We are fortunate that they are not intelligent creatures, we would have gone broke trying to buy their sedimentary rocks for fuel.

But at the rate they're going, the planet may be unhabitable once the mining ships get here, so we have commenced the complete disintegration of their current layer in an effort to aid them in their extinction, while preserving their valuable resources.

It'll make a mess, but it's quick, and we're almost out of it."

The world froze in fear.

Nations laid down their arms.

The hand of karma found.

And in a moment of desperate silence, the world, blessed Jack.

Auction to benefit Crisis Center in Elgin

The Community Crisis Center Celebrity Auction will be presented on Saturday, March 13, at the Crystal Lake Holiday Inn. The fundraiser, in the circus theme of "Under the Big Top," begins at 6 p.m. with a silent auction and entertainment. Buffets of hot and cold hors d'oeuvres and peas provided by Baker's Square will be served. Entertainers for the evening are Crisis Center board members Patricia Piper Golden and Carolyn O'Neal. Terry Dunning of Dunning's Auction Service will conduct the live auction at 9 p.m.

The public is invited, couples and singles, and reservations are needed by Friday, March 5. The cost is $30 per person. Over 300 items and services have been donated by area businesses and individuals and by entertainers and sports celebrities. Items range in price from $15 to $5,000. Tickets and autographed sports items have been donated by the Chicago Bulls, Blackhawks, and Cubs and some players. Movie stars and the casts of TV shows such as "Evening Shade," "Reasonable Doubt," "Hansel and Gretel," and "L.A. Law" have sent autographed scripts and props.

Christina Slater, Dolly Parton, Jay Leno, Jack Lemmon, Walter Payton, Jose Baez, Whoopi Goldberg, and many other celebrities have donated. Four "Boys Show" tickets are up for auction.

Featured items include an autographed print from Michael Jordan, a White Sox sky box party donated by Xerox Corporation, and a fine art framed quilt "On wings of Freedom" handmade by Prairie Friends Quilters. Sunshine Travel of West Dundee and Carnival Cruise Lines are sharing the donation of a seven-day cruise to the Eastern or Western Caribbean on Carnival's newest cruise ship.

Other items include a hot air balloon ride for two, home security system, an 1891 pocket watch, household items, dining certificates and theater tickets. A new feature is a "Career Day" opportunity, a day on the job with a professional to be purchased for a person interested in pursuing a specific career.

Vacation spots include a home for a week in St. John, U.S. Virgin Islands, at Great Cruz Bay; getaways to Wisconsin and Michigan; and a bed and breakfast getaway to Iron Horse in Dundee.

All proceeds benefit the Center, a temporary shelter housing 35 women and their children each night and providing off-site shelter for males and families with males.

Since 1975, the Crisis Center has served the victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, and other individuals and families "in crisis."

Around the clock services include a 24-hour hotline and crisis intervention as well as support groups and individual counseling. The Crisis Center also manages the Health Center, the community's only free clinic for those without resources. Located in Elgin, the Crisis Center serves the northwest suburbs, northern Kane County and the Fox Valley area.

For information about the event, auction items, or for reservations, call the Center, 897-2380 or (TDD) 708-742-4057.

Beware the dangers of a stroke

Many people consider a stroke a sudden and devastating occurrence, a blood-vessel rupture or blockage that prevents blood from flowing to the brain, killing brain cells, causing disability or death.

The fact is that not all strokes are "sudden" occurrences. Early intervention can minimize damage and preventive care may reduce the risk of strokes, according to the American Heart Association.

There are several major types of strokes. The two most common types are caused by clots or other materials that plug an artery that supplies blood to a part of the brain. Ruptured blood vessels cause the other two.

"Three kinds of treatment are proving very successful in preventing strokes," said Louis Cohen, M.D., president of the American Heart Association of Metropolitan Chicago.

"There are two groups of new drugs that can slow or prevent the forming of blood clots. Another treatment, the one surgical, can relieve severe blockage in the neck arteries restoring blood supply to the brain.

"Strokes need to be treated with the same sense of urgency as a heart attack," said Cohen. "And in order to get immediate treatment, people must be able to recognize the warning signs of stroke."

The warning signs of stroke are sudden weakness or numbness or the face, arm or leg on one side of the body, sudden dizziness or loss of vision, particularly in one eye, loss of speech or trouble talking or understanding speech, sudden severe headaches with no apparent cause, unexplained dizziness, unsteadiness or sudden falls, especially along with any of the previous symptoms.

"We not only know more about managing a stroke as it evolves but also how to stabilize a stroke patient and begin early therapy which can reduce the damage due to stroke," Cohen said.

The good news is that major progress has been made in both prevention and treatment of stroke. But because people are now living longer, the total number of strokes in America is increasing. "The estimated 500,000 people who suffer from a stroke each year in the United States usually have one or more of the following risk factors that can be changed or treated: high blood pressure, heart disease, or transient ischemic attacks (TIAs)—temporary stroke-like symptoms which are strong predictors of stroke. For more information on stroke or heart attack, contact the American Heart Association at 1-800-AHA-USA1 or your physician."

Spaghetti With Meat Sauce

- |  |   |
|--|---|
| 1 1/2 pounds lean ground beef            | 1 teaspoon each black pepper, oregano, basil leaves and garlic powder |
| 2 cups chopped onion                     | 1 cup chopped green bell pepper                                       |
| 1 cup chopped green bell pepper          | 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce                                     |
| 2 cups chopped celery                    | 2 bay leaves  |
| 1 28-ounce can Italian plum tomatoes     | 16 ounces spaghetti   |
| 1 6-ounce can no-salt-added tomato paste | 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese  |

Sauté ground meat in a stockpot over medium-high heat, stirring frequently, until no longer pink. Add onions and continue to sauté. When onions are slightly brown, add bell pepper and celery. Cook slightly. Add all other ingredients except spaghetti and Parmesan cheese. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 2 hours.

Allow to cool, then cover and place in refrigerator overnight. Simmer off the fat that hardens on the surface. Cook spaghetti according to package directions, omitting salt. Meanwhile, heat sauce, stirring occasionally. Drain spaghetti and serve individual portions with sauce on top. Sprinkle each serving of spaghetti with Parmesan cheese.

Away at Tax Time?

Being out of the country may have its advantages, especially at tax time. If you are required to file a U.S. income tax return and are traveling or living outside the United States on April 15, you may be allowed to extend your filing deadline.

By filing Internal Revenue Service Form 4868, travelers can receive an extension until August 15 to file their federal income tax returns. Payment of additional taxes must accompany the request. Generally, both Form 4868 and your payment must be filed with the IRS by April 15.

U.S. residents in foreign countries may qualify for automatic extensions of time to file until June 15. They must attach a statement to their tax returns explaining that their home and main place of business were outside the United States or Puerto Rico on April 15.

Visit your nearest U.S. Embassy or Consulate for forms or write to Internal Revenue Service, Forms Distribution Center, P.O. Box 25066, Richmond, VA 23061-0666.

'Comedy of Errors'

MICHAEL TULLER
Staff writer

"The Comedy of Errors," the first comedy penned by Shakespeare, will be performed at Harper College on Friday, March 12th.

The work will be dramatized by the National Shakespeare Company, which is currently celebrating its 30th year. The group, which performs to over 100,000 people per year, consists of 12 members who were chosen from among over 1,000 who auditioned. The group's motto is "Classics for Everyone."

First performed December 28, 1594, "The Comedy of Errors" is Shakespeare's most simple comic plot. There is no deception among the characters, for they are all completely ignorant of what is going on. Indeed, the audience is allowed much more information than the characters. As Bernard Evans puts it, "...the great resource of laughter is the explainable gulf spread between the participant's understanding and ours."

The show is heightened and silly, at times reminiscent of early silent Hollywood comedies. It is fast, bright, and funny, and has been called one of the best examples of farce comedy in the English language.

The show will be held on Friday, March 12th, at 7:30 p.m. in Building A. Tickets are $6 for Harper students, and are available at the Box Office, ext. 2547. Hours are 10-7 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 10-4 p.m. on Friday.

Harper College Theatre and Student Activities Present

Beyond Therapy

The loonies are coming to Harper!

Harper College students will present this spring play, "Beyond Therapy" at 8 p.m., March 19, 20, 26 and 27. A dinner theater package is available Saturday, March 20, and a matinee will be presented at 2:30 p.m. on Sunday, March 21.

An absurd comedy by Christopher Durang, "Beyond Therapy" pines several eccentric characters as they try to discover what love in the 90s is all about. One of the characters is not quite sure of his sexual orientation. He meets a woman through a newspaper single's column who wants a male companion to the doctor's really care about his confusion. To help them cope with their miseries, they seek the guidance of psychiatrists, only to find that the psychiatrists are also beyond therapy.

Playing the leading roles are: E.J. Simon, Harrington, as Bruce; Bob Quigley, Barten, as Charlotte; Tom Benke, Harrington, as Andrew; Mike Komet, Arlington Heights, as Bob; and Deb Vyleria, Schaumburg, as Prudence.

This play contains explicit language and is not recommended for children. Ticket prices are $7 with discounts for students and senior citizens. The dinner theater package on Saturday, March 20, is $19.95 and begins at 6 p.m. For tickets and information, call the Harper College Box Office at ext. 2547.

HARPER GRADS TRANSFER TO ROOSEVELT SIMPLY, SWIFTLY, SUCCESSFULLY.

Each year, hundreds of Harper graduates transfer to Roosevelt University's Arlington Heights campus to complete their bachelor's degrees because Roosevelt is the northwest suburbs' largest, most comprehensive university.

Harper students Kathy Winbel and Dan Liu tell why they chose Roosevelt.

Roosevelt accepted all my Harper credits, and registration was a breeze," Kathy says. "The campus location was ideal."

Roosevelt gave me a scholarship," Dan explains. "And all my Harper credits were accepted. I particularly like the small classes, and the fact that the campus is close to home."

If you're interested in joining Roosevelt University's many successful Harper students, come visit us or call an admissions counselor at 708-437-9200 to let us help you plan your transfer.

Intramural basketball teams give an alternative to Hawk fans suffering from the 'off-season' blues

The mid-way point of the IM Basketball League has been reached with the 5th Ward Hawks leading on to a one game lead over the Bears.

The league now plays on Tuesday and Thursday evenings for the month of March with the Playoffs starting in April. Here's a look at action from Tuesday, March 9.

Bears 64 Hit Squad 57
Two of the league's best struggled through a slow changing game with the Bears coming back from a 20-28 half time deficit to compile win. Tim Canfield and Jeff Schuler stepped up their game in the second half to force the game for the Bears. Justin Adams had 22 points and Vic Brown tossed in 17 for the Hit Squad.

5th Ward Hawks 70 Skisquags 66

The Hawks shot a 14-0 lead in the first ten minutes of the game and never looked back. Skisquags dropped their first of the season to the defending champions who were nearly flawless. The remarkable shooting of Larry Dennis (11 points) and Derek Harris (27 points) sealed the game. Eric Scott chipped in 16 points and Scott Weary and Dennis Hawkins had 15 for the team.

Big Dogs 61 Prime Time 40
The Big Dogs got on the winning track for the first time this season with a dominating 61-40 over without Prime Time. To lead balanced scoring throughout the interquart. Leroy Prasadewicz again paced the winners with 19 points for the evening. Guy Foss continued to be one of the league's top scorers posting 20 points for the Prime Timers.

IM Team 48 Unusachaballs 41
In the best game of the evening, a strong IM Team prevailed over the determined Unusachaballs 48-41. This affair was in doubt until the last few minutes of the game when the scales tipped in favor of the IM Team. Dennis Baguio led the league in scoring with 33 points with 17 points coming from team mate Chris Moore. The Unusachaballs are perhaps the most determined five in the league and no lead is safe against them. They force you play the 40 minutes and to end Greg Kelly paced the Unusachaballs with 17 points.

Here's highlights of the action from March 9:
IM Team 58 Skisquags 50
The IM Team posted their second win of the week over friendly rival Skisquags. Maintaining a 27-21 half time lead through out the second half PJ McQuillen did the job on the defensive end and league leading shot maker Dennis Baguio provided the punch when needed with 14 points. Baguio now has 100 points for the season to date. Chris Anderson had a game high 30 for Skisquags.

Hit Squad 99 Big Dogs 40

In a battle of teams composed of Harper football team mates, the Hit Squad out-paced the offensive line men in a highly competitive affair. The Patton-Gold combination posted 14 points each for the winners. Leonard Williams played his strategic game of the year knocking down 12 points and had outstanding hard work throughout the game.

5th Ward Hawks 71 Court Juniors 56

The Hawks picked up their second win of the week beating to 71-56 win over a hard working Court Justice team. Larry Dennis topped with 23 points and Jason Dixon chipped in 18 points for the winners. Chris Santiago posted 17 points, most from three point range and Mark Lovins had 14 for CJ.

Unusachaballs 51 Bears 49

In the most continuous game of the year, the determined and unflappable Unusachaballs posted a narrow 51-49 win over the previously undefeated Bears. Chris Iverson's remarkable right to left free throw without a miss was the key for the young 'Bulls. The contest was highly contested from the beginning and flared by many fouls in critical points of the game.

Ian Ferguson returns to work with plenty to say after a well deserved 'vacation'

Ian Ferguson
Harbinger Sports Columnist

WARNING: The Harbinger General has found gambling to be extremely hazardous to your health. Possible dangers are broken bones, appendages and unexpected drug use during said only by content orthopedic shoes.

I would like to take this time to welcome myself back to Harbinger. My time week vacation was certainly taken on short notice, but we only described as necessary. My good friend Jimmy the Cook was nice enough to fill in for me on short notice, and I am very grateful for that. I'm even more happy that he kept me from harm so I could pry my darts.

Well, the last week was an interesting one if you were basketball fan. The Albany Chicago Bulls lost an early one to the San Antonio Spurs. Sam Maiz was on the hospital getting the evening crowd scraped off his multi-million dollar feet, but he is no statue.

The once mighty Boston Celtics took on the Spurs at the Garden and scheduled them on the game. Even without the Celtics' marquee player, Reggie Lewis, the aging team beat the younger Spurs by 41 points.

To add insult to injury, straight after the Bulls lost in OT, the Spurs lost to the second worst team in the NBA, the Minnesota Timberwolves.

Now the Spurs may have been tired, but so is Tim Duncan. (Come on, Mike.)

Okay you say, but the Bulls are still the best in the East and look to stay that way. I would agree that being a half game up on the Knicks isn't much to brag about, especially after seeing New York play Orlando into overtime and only win by two.

Someday else might argue that Jordan leads the league in scoring and holds a good lead in both categories. I would bring up the point that Mike is the only Bull in the top six in scoring. Pippen works in as in 22nd as of Sunday night. Aside from three games showing, the Bulls don't have anyone else in the top ten of any statistical category.

What does this prove, you ask? Absolutely nothing. The Bulls keep winning, and with a little luck might make the finals. The only reason I brought up these stats is to prove, albeit weakly, that the Bulls are some home team. The time has come for everyone to relax and look for real team to win the crown. I submit the Phoenix Suns so that team. Steve Barkley is a showboat, but with team players like Kevin Johnson, Danny Ainge and Tim Chambers, the Suns are much more team oriented.

I know I keep harping on the Bulls, but I enjoy it. I promise not to say anything else derogatory about the Bulls for at least two weeks unless they blow another game that is destined for the win column.

Swimmers leave Florida seventh best in country

Jim Walcott
Sports Editor

In the fine tradition of Harper sports, the men's and women's swimming and diving teams held their heads high after last week's NCAA National meet in Fort Pierce, Florida.

Of course, they had to hold their heads high. They were under water Monday, March 1 and arrived home to the frog water of Chagallatland Sunday, March 2 at the seventh best community college swimming diving teams in the country.

Head Coach and swimmer Jim Walcott said, "They had a tremendous meet. You couldn't ask for any thing more."

The small numbers on the team seemed to be cause for worry early in the season, but it definitely did not keep them from being crowned with the best. Asksman said that both the men and women "exceeded expectations based on discipline" and both teams had a "great deal of pride. Greater than ever."

Both men's and women's teams finished seventh in the country, a goal both had headed into the week of swim along. "The teams expected to do at least as well. Anything else would have been unacceptable by them."

It would have been very hard for the Hawks to fare any better than they did at nationals under Harper's current recruiting system.

Asks the complaints of every Harper coach, Asksman explained how the Harper sports programs would place much better if Harper were a scholarship offering school. Of the teams that beat our swimmers, all six were scholarship schools on the men's side and five of the six handed out scholarships on the women's side.

Asksman went on to say that during the national meet 12 Harper all time swimming records were broken by the Hawk team that, for the most part, will be returning next year.

Co-captains Jim Gaskin and Stacy Mitchell will be leaving as well as a third national qualifying swimmer, Jenny Bickel.

While the presence of these swimmers will definitely be lost, Asksman says he is very grateful to only be losing three from this year's team.

It may be tough to replace the three lost swimmers, but it does appear that plenty of people are willing to try.

During the seven days the team was gone, seven inquiries by prospective swimmers for next year found their way to Asksman's desk, a dream for any Harper coach. "I think it's indicative of the job this year's team has done. It's definitely gotten the program for next year in the right direction."

Even with the possibly unlimited talent from high schools pouring in,

Maria Costantino prepares to dive

Asksman says he still believes "The success of next year's program will be predicated on this year's group training over the summer."

Eye on the Hawks

What makes a champion a champion? To me the answer is simple. A champion should be the best person (or team) in the particular area in which they claim highest honors.

Our "One on one" question this week is whether or not the Bulls can be considered "world champions." While I do admit that in sports like baseball where some countries (Japan for example) put effort into building strong traditions, maybe a "world champion" should not be decided by a mere 28 wins, 26 of which came from the United States.

Baseball has been a very popular sport in this country for close to 100 years and throughout the world for decades. The game has been played seriously in other lands for a long time, so maybe gag champion in baseball should not be considered the "world champion."

Baseball is not the same game. The game struggled through its early existence and never really picked up steam until the 1970's. The game really wasn't even played with high attendance on a regular basis until about 1980 (and for some teams, not even today).

Today, baseball enjoys as much worldly fame as any sport in existence. Kicks from all lands, all backgrounds, and of all colors are now playing.

The game may stem from the fact that a great deal easier to play basketball than baseball or football. If kids can get hold of a ball, most playgrounds have the hoops.

The problem with assuming the NBA does not have the "world champion" is this. There are no countries with teams in the world that could beat an NBA champion. The NBA is the only league in the world that has a championship.

No matter how hard they work, no matter how much they want to, they cannot beat the Bulls. The Bulls are the only team in the world that has a championship.

The Bulls are the only team in the world that has a championship. The Bulls are the only team in the world that has a championship.

The Bulls are the only team in the world that has a championship. The Bulls are the only team in the world that has a championship.

One On One

Surprising thing happened here at the Harbinger this week. I was talking with a reader and I was given an idea for "One on One." In fact, there were many ideas and comments on the about our column but this one in particular stood out and had character.

The next surprise was that Jim and I actually disagreed. Second time this season a part of our nation. Or in France? No, right? Neither of them are or any other country in Asia, Europe, Africa, South America, or never-the-less are parts of North America.

In the NBA tournament did Da Bulls or any other NBA team play any country on any continent?

If they were Da Bulls considered "The World Champions?" Could someone please let me know besides Jim. He has already mentioned his side to the left of me.

Something new that we would like to see happen is more reader input. We want to hear your ideas and views about this week's topic and any other topic that we discuss. Let us know your side of what is discussed in "One on One."

Nancy Caruso
Managing Editor

At a glance

tournament, The Olympics.

The Bulls have not played in such tournament that leading to the fact that they are not the "World Champions." Why give a team all the glory of being such a great team when they were never up against all the competition in the world?

Don't get me wrong, they play a good enough game to be considered the best in the world, but don't freely give away the title of it down to the team currently.

Being technical, Da Bulls are the National Basketball Association (NBA) Champions. Key word here is National. Now a Belgium a part of our nation? Or in France? No, right? Neither of them are or any other country in Asia, Europe, Africa, South America, or never-the-less are parts of North America.

In the NBA tournament did Da Bulls or any other NBA team play any country on any continent?

Harper hosts employment fair '93

Tom Fellas
News Editor

The 1993 Employment Fair will be held in Building M from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on March 23. Over 100 employers from various companies in the Northwest suburban area are scheduled to attend. Career Specialist, Krutzn Spence, is assisting in the planning of the fair. "The purpose of this employment fair is for people to come in and talk to employers to either secure an interview for the future, or even secure a job on the day of the fair," Spence said. "Another purpose is for employers to be able to recruit people for a variety of positions," Spence added.

To prepare people, two one-hour, pre-fair seminars are scheduled for March 22 at 12:10 p.m. and 7 p.m. Spence encourages students to attend these seminars so they will have a better understanding of what will happen during the actual fair.

"The pre-seminars tell you how to dress, what to bring and what questions to ask," said Spence. "The seminars are free, but if you plan to attend, you do need to call and register," Spence also said. "The fair is free."

To find out what companies are coming, there is a sensitive list available in Building A307.

Chris Kraus, coordinator of the fair, believes all students should attend the fair. "Students looking for jobs should take advantage of this fair for their future career," Kraus said. The employers coming to the fair will have actual jobs available Kraus said. "There will be representatives from park districts, banks, hospitals and many other organizations at the fair," Kraus said. Kraus also said that what employers are in how they perceive you.

See "Preparing For the Fair," page 6, for suggestions on getting ready for the fair.

Loveless performs tonight

Country-Western singer Patty Loveless will perform at 7:30 p.m. March 19. Appearing with Loveless will be Big John Howell and the US 99 Band to Bop Band.

Loveless has recorded five albums; her most recent one, "Up Against My Heart," includes her first "Hot Me Had" (It's a Good Good Way and I'm Not Bored) - Her first singles, "If My Heart Be Still" and "Because a Poppy" - make it to the top. Followed by other hits such as "I'm Not Falling in Love," "I'm Not Falling in Love," "I'm Not Falling in Love," "I'm Not Falling in Love."

The Kentucky native, who had written 30 songs by the time she was 14, has worked with such country greats as Clint Black, Alabama, George Strait and students and senior citizens and may be purchased through the Harper College Box Office, Ext. 2547.

Clinton service program a trade-off

Asking the nation's youth to join him in "a great national adventure," President Clinton has outlined a broad-based service program that eventually would offer up to 100,000 college students a chance to get education and in exchange for community work.

"National service is nothing less than the American way to change America," Clinton said March 1 at Rutgers University in New Brunswick, N.J. His speech was greeted with loud cheers by the students who packed the university's gymnasium.

Among other tasks, students in the service program would help rebuild neighborhoods, clean up environment and counsel children, Clinton said. In the process, they would earn tuition vouchers of forgiveness of student loans and get in return a new national commitment to service.

Students would also have an option to repay college loans by deducting a percentage of their salaries after graduation.

Some details of the program, such as how much of a stipend community volunteers would be paid and how much of their college loans would be forgiven, have not been worked out yet.

The president launched his program to the GI Bill after World War II and the Peace Corps in the 1960s. One difference is that Clinton said his program would allow for substantial local autonomy.

"We make progress when people and their governments work at the grassroots in true partnership," he said. "I want to empower young people and their communities, not empower a new bureaucracy in Washington."

Clinton provided only modest budget details of his proposal, which could cost an estimated $7 billion during the next four years. It would begin this year with a "summer of service" for 1,000 young people who would receive leadership training, work at jobs throughout the nation and then meet at the end of the summer for a Youth Summit.

The government would fund this $15 million summer program through the president's short-term economic stimulus package announced last month. Clinton asked students interested in this program to send him a postcard at the "White House marked national service."

The White House envisions 25,000 students participating in service programs in fiscal year 1994 at a federal cost of $400 million. That figure would grow to an estimated 100,000 students in fiscal year 1997 at an annual cost of $1.4 billion.

Students generally would trade one or two years of community service for financial assistance with college. A cap will be set on the loans that will be forgiven by the government.

"When people give something of valuable merit to their country, they ought to be rewarded with the opportunity to further their education," Clinton said. The president later made the case for his program to an nationwide audience on MTV.

So far, the president's program has drawn generally favorable reviews, although most groups want more details.

In Washington, the United States Students Association welcomed the emphasis on service but emphasized that it will reach only a small segment of the nation's 5 million college students.

"I think a lot of people will be inspired by the idea of service," said Steven Lerman, USSA's president. "But it will be no way replace the need to strengthen the existing student aid programs."

Another issue in the debate is the extent students would receive during their years of service. USSA said since of the figures revealed minimum wage or as little as $100 a week might limit participation only to those who could live at home while they serve. The student group recommended a stipend of at least $10,000 a year, with higher pay for older, non-traditional students.

An educator who specializes in community service also warned more details about Clinton's plan, expressing concern that it unfairly may target low-income students most in need of aid.

"It's another heavy piece students may have to jump through," said Arnold Mitchem, who has helped build support for programs that recruit low-income and minority youth for college. Mitchem, who heads the National Council of Educational Opportunity Associations, said he had "mixed feelings" about the plan because the neediest students are most likely to participate.

"It makes a distinction between a middle-income student and a poor student," he said.

For his part, Clinton said his support for programs that recruit low-income and minority youth would help reduce the college dropout rate, which he described as twice as high as the dropout rate in high schools.

Rovner gets praise for keynote speech

Jennifer Thomason
News Editor

During women's history week, Ms. Elana Diamond Rovner, First Woman Judge on the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, gave us the pleasure of her presence at the reception and dinner of "Our Women's Odyssey."

And on Odyssey it was, but the impression that Rovner left with the audience is that it was a privilege and an honor to have the opportunity she had in her professional life. However, it appears that family and life's experiences have also played a part in bringing balance and self assurance to her persona.

While attending law school in the early 1960s, Rovner had little or no role models, from a professional standpoint, to look to for guidance. "It was a difficult struggle and a lonely existence. We were treated differently, either constantly being called on by instructors or being ignored all together," Rovner said, the only representation in those days was to become a legal secretary with a law degree.

In 1972, Rovner says, U.S. District Court Judge James Parsons made a big effort to hire a female law clerk. By 1974, Rovner was the first supervisor. After serving under Judge Parsons, I was given many offers of employment in the private sector. However, I certainly was not ready to make a position in private practice. To serve others would be the greatest privilege of all," Rovner said.

Rovner was asked a question by an audience member about her opinion on "why do you think people in this country do not seem to appreciate the opportunities before them." "My parents always said to do something constructive with your time. Ideals and rules were just strict in this country than in Europe," Rovner said.

The same person asked about her seemingly gentle demeanor and what is she like while performing her responsibilities on the bench. "The role of justice is to interpret and apply the law. More than anything in life, all I want is to be part," Rovner said.

Rovner goes on to tell the story of that first day she heard a case. "The first day I sat on the bench my parents were present in the courtroom and prior to the case I thought - how am I going to sit; should I be stern, tough, how should I act? I sat down when the case started and my behavior was such that my parents wondered if I knew what I was doing. Later I found out that they both agreed that I would learn. Overall, Rovner was very warm and had a great sense of humor about her professional and personal life.

But on a more serious note, Rovner's closing was both insightful and thoughtful as she offered these words: "We are women's history. If we let others decide our fate, then we will become victims in our own society. Silence will allow words to exist, silence is the only shame."

Elana Rovner, first female judge on seventh circuit court of appeals

Oops!!!

• Last week we neglected to give credit to Skip Chidester and Scott Young for their contributions to the budget article by Jennifer Thomason.

• Vern Manke was misquoted in last week's article. It should have read "I'm not going to say that because there could be a program here or a program there, but it will be done on the basis of whether or not the program is viable."

Shedding light on taxes

"Understanding Lump Sum Distributions," will be presented Wednesday, March 24, 6:30-9:30 p.m., in Building A, Board room 315A.

Beginning Jan. 1, 1993, a new tax went into effect on lump sum pension payouts which allows the government to reduce your distribution by as much as 20 percent. Learn the special tax treatment available to you as well as the penalties if you are among those employees receiving a lump sum distribution because of retirement, job change, or loss of job.

Financial Consultant Robert C. Wilson, CPA, will discuss five and ten year averaging, rollover IRAs, and special tax treatment. He will also perform an analysis of individual retirement needs.

The cost of the session is $30. To register, call 337-3377 and specify course #LXN07. For additional information call 337-3377.

EDITORIAL

Who pays the price?

President Clinton is again the subject of recent conversation. It seems his tax plan has its backers and detractors, both speaking loudly on the subject.

And while many in the public have stated that they are willing to pay extra, if it cuts the deficit, others are making known their opposition to paying any new taxes to help curb the cost of government.

These detractors say that they pay enough in new taxes. They say that this is a typical example of Democratic tax-and-spend. They say that they know better ways to cure what ails America.

But they haven't faced facts. The persons who are being directly taxed the most are the ones who got away with the most during the past twelve years.

Clinton's plan raises the top tax rate on those that make more than $180,000 per year to 36 percent, plus a 10 percent surtax on incomes that exceed $250,000 a year. Those poor babies may have to pay real taxes for the first time.

If this plan is tax-and-spend then the proposed cuts in government that equal approximately $246 billion wouldn't exist. Useless programs such as nuclear power research are being eliminated to divert to programs that need help. It sounds a bit more like scrip-and-save.

And they know of even more cuts than the president has seen. But, ironically, a group of Democrats found some more ways to cut wasteful government spending.

Yes, it is Republican bashing. But until they learn that the time for blame is over and that it is time to work together, then they deserve to be chastised.

They don't want to face up to the nation's $400 billion-dollar deficit.

It is time to share in the responsibility of fixing our country. It is time to work TOGETHER to secure our future.

If we don't, we could go the way of the dinosaur. Extinct.

COMMENTARY

Another senseless faction

It's great, it's fun, it's the Y.W.L.O.M.M.

Paul Foster
Harbinger Columnist

That's it! No more mister nice guy!

I've had it with all those pretty faces demanding their right to be heard, while blaming other "major" social groups for all their well-inflicted personal problems.

Women awareness week is finally over. Black history week is through. Even national condom week has had its time.

Well, I'm declaring this week young, white, long haired, oppressed male majority week. I hope I don't OFFEND anybody. I'm declaring that all Y.W.L.O.M.'s collaborate by refusing to acknowledge those who refuse to acknowledge the heartache and strife therein pass. Anglo-heros I go through on a daily basis.

I'm prejudiced by doctors who automatically assume I have some of cash to give away for their "expensive" diagnoses.

I'm prejudiced by cops who figure I deserve what's coming to me, because I'm "on drugs." Not.

I'm prejudiced by militant little Boy Scouts trying to tell me something

I don't want (here we go again).

I'm prejudiced by employers who tell me they can't hire me with long hair, but when asked "What is the required length?" they say "Oh, well, you know."

I'm prejudiced by people who think I look like somebody on America's Most Wanted.

I'm prejudiced by women who hate me because I believe Hillary Clinton should get in the kitchen and make some sandwiches.

I think the time has come for America to stand up and acknowledge it's permanent, perpetual, punning and purging of such a dominant class of people. I call for the uniting of all the young, white, long haired oppressed male majority to a greater cause—Pur-raise on Fridays at the expense of the government, so we too can educate the public about this atrocity and get our government to take action against our oppressors.

Perhaps a 1,990 number to answer questions (1,800 if you're a con- dition) and a parade downtown with an anti-guarantee aspect can help to alert the world about our real culture, and di- minish myths as to our abuse of minori- ties.

I have a dream, that one day, all men will be perfect carbon copies of each other.

But until then, the world will have to be lenient to our cause and try not to file us in with other mental discrimina- tions, all the while getting us lost on the bandwagon of "Hey look at us! Alone we are vulnerable, together we are fools!"

God forbid we ever put down our arms and listen to each other because we're human (condemned). Then we wouldn't feel that belonging—that squishy little comfort zone feeling that allows us to cream our beliefs down other peoples' throats under the guise of education, with the world as a (no pun intended) captive audience.

We need a way to vent our sexual frustrations on others without admit- ting that what we really want is to get laid.

We need to tell off the world with eloquent wording so the world won't know it's being told off.

We need to have common enemies so we can be friends.

We need glass stomachs so we can see with our heads up our asses.

Quite frankly, I think we need to start over.

P.S. The Y.W.L.O.M. Majority is accepting donations in the sums of $100 to go for traveling expenses not related to the fictitious organization.

Letters To The Editor

President Clinton encourages student help

To the student body:
I want to challenge you to join me in a great American adventure—national service.

I make this challenge because our country and our communities need help. Government alone cannot provide. Government can make resources available to children, but alone it cannot administer them to them all. It can put more police on the streets, but alone it cannot stop crime. It can improve the quality of our public schools, but cannot alone improve children to live up to their potential.

It is time for Americans of every background to work together to lift our country up, neighborhood by neighborhood and block by block. It is time to rediscover the excitement and idealism that makes us Americans. That is what national service is all about.

Through national service, thousands will have the opportunity to pay for college by rebuilding their communities, serving as teachers, police officers, health care workers and in other capacities. But it will take time for them to get to that point. We must start now.

That is why I have called for a Summer of Service—this summer. More than 1,000 young people will serve in hotbed areas around the country, learning to lead and getting children who are at risk ready for school. There are many who believe that young Americans will not answer a call to action. They say you are apathetic, and that you measure your success in the accumulation of material things. I know they are wrong. I know you will answer this challenge. You can become an agent of renewal—either through the summer program or on your own. Write and tell me what you are doing, or what you want to do.

The White House
National Service
Washington, D.C. 20500

Your efforts and your energies can lift the spirit of our nation and inspire the world. Please answer the call.

Bill Clinton
President of the United States

Sincere thanks for the return of a lost wallet

At 1 p.m., March 12, 1993, Kevin King, Supervisor of Public Safety, brought my wallet to me in my office. It had apparently slipped from my pocket in the cafeteria.

It had relatively little money in it, but enough that it might have been worth keeping.

Of course, it held the usual client list and items that would be of value only to me.

Anyone who has ever had a wallet torn or missing can imagine what my state of mind would have been, had I realized it was gone.

The wallet was given to Officer King by a student from Harper, the individual did not provide a name.

Therefore, I wish to thank my head as for publicly, and to thank, let every one know that some good deed, done anonymously, reflects in the credit of every student in this campus. May you be worthy of your fellow.

Respectfully,
Ted Agonia

Think before eating that cow

Paul Gossens
Horbinger Columnist

It's noon. Your class starts at 12:15. You race your car to the local fast food place. You order a greasy hamburger, greasy fries and a thick brain sucking milkshake. You see that the price of the burger went up from the last time you rushed by this drive thru! You mumble a few obscenities about the price of beef and proceed to pick up your beef burger.

How much does a hamburger really cost? According to Beyond Beef, an educational organization, and author Harvey Diamond, the real price is too high to calculate! The toll on human health is incredible! It is amazing how so many people are eating them, when to eat early death! The #1 cause of death in the United States is not cancer, homicide or AIDS, but cardiovascular disease! Someone dies from this every thirty five seconds in our country! Forget the war against Iraq or drugs, we need an educational assault on the plague of eating animal products!

We hear so much concern about levels of cholesterol in our diet, but if you people would realize that you can only get cholesterol from animal products, then we might see a large drop in cardiovascular disease.

How does beef affect life on earth besides your digestive system? First of all, beef promotes hunger. Seventy percent of U.S. farm land is used to grow grain for livestock. This is enough food to feed every woman, child and man on earth each day! More than forty million people around the world die of hunger and related diseases.

I'm sure that you are aware of the fact that rainforests are being burned and cut down. You may not know why this is being done. We can trace the reasons back to your local hamburger outlet. Seventy percent of cleared rainforest land is used for cattle grazing. Every time you order one quarter pounder, you can be assured that up to fifty five square feet of forest was wiped out! That's an incredible three of destruction by American taste buds!

Beef cows can even create drought. One cow can consume up to 60 pounds of vegetation a month. 85 percent of American rangeland is degraded while droughts are growing by 1.5 million acres a year worldwide.

When it comes to the precious resource of water, livestock own about half of our fresh water supply. Natural underground aquifers are being depleted in many states, sometimes causing the ground to sink.

You might think that the #1 source of water pollution in the U.S. is nuclear waste or toxic pollution from factories. Well these are close, but once again, our friendly livestock industry wins the prize! How does cow pollute? Their organic waste weighs up to a billion tons per year. The waste material produces ammonia and nitrate which drain into surface water, contaminating aquifers and destroy aquatic life.

Beef also has a hand in global warming. It may sound funny (or even smell funny), but cattle flatulence is a contributor to climate change because it is composed of methane gas. They break wind each year to the tune of one of millions of tons. A mere six tons of methane gas is enough to melt all of the fossil fuels burned to produce cattle feed and petrochemical for plastics.

If all these incredible facts haven't made you consider changing your eating habits, then maybe you should give yourself the ultimate challenge! Go visit a slaughterhouse to experience first hand how your burger is transformed from a living, feeling being to a slab of meat in your mouth. You'll see hundreds of cows cut up and bled out upside down while their blood drains out of their bodies. The conditions in these cholesterol factories can be nauseating. The inspection process has been streamlined by recent regulations that allow the meat company, not the government, to inspect the meat. Needless to say, production has skyrocketed since then, and diseased meat is more likely than ever to show up on your dinner plate!

The three goals of the Beyond Beef campaign are "REDUCE individual beef consumption by at least 50 percent by the year 2000; REPLACE beef in the diet with quality plant based grains, vegetables and fruits; REFORM the current cattle production system and promote humanely and organically raised beef as an alternative for those who include some beef in their diet."

If you would like to join in the Beyond Beef education effort, they are running an "Adopt a Cow" campaign in April and May of this year. They would like to get 1,000 teams of four or more people to adopt a cow and raise it in their area. Each team will attempt to speak with 1,000 customers. Information will be shared with the public through leaflets, school assemblies and billboards. If you would like to join in this effort or become a member of Beyond Beef, write to Beyond Beef, 1150 Seventeenth St., N.W., Suite 300 Washington, D.C. 20036. Phone: (202) 775-1132. For local campaign information, call (703) 551-2447.

What a fighter...

After graduating from Duke University in May, 1987, twenty-one-year-old Wendy Marx moved to San Francisco from her home in Rye Brook, New York, to pursue a career in advertising. Five months later, she fell into a coma and was given twenty-four hours to live unless she received an immediate liver transplant. Wendy had been diagnosed with hepatitis B just three weeks earlier.

With the help of her friend, Olympic athlete Carl Lewis, national attention was called to Wendy's plight and, within days, she underwent a successful same-hour liver transplant operation. But her recovery from hepatitis B has been long and difficult. Wendy required a second liver transplant when her liver was infected with the hepatitis B virus that she still carries.

"I almost died from hepatitis B, a disease I'd barely heard of before, and my life has been permanently changed because of it. I certainly didn't know that there was a vaccine to prevent infection," says Marx, now 25 and working at a marketing company in San Francisco. "You hear a lot about AIDS only, but nobody really talks about hepatitis B, even though it's a much more contagious virus."

Hepatitis B is a potentially deadly virus that is 100 times more contagious than HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. It infects 300,000 Americans every year and, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control (CDC), the leading mode of transmission for hepatitis B is through heterosexual contact. However, in the case of Wendy Marx and nearly 30 percent of those infected, the source of infection remains unknown. Since many of the 1.25 million chronic carriers in this country suffer no symptoms, they are capable of spreading the disease to others unknowingly.

"The most tragic thing about my illness is that it could have been prevented. If I'd known that hepatitis B was so serious and that anyone could get it, I would have been vaccinated," says Marx. "Nobody should have to suffer from this disease like I did, and no one should ever die from a disease if a simple vaccine can prevent infection."

Although Wendy and her family have suffered enormously from her illness, she has been fortunate compared to many others. Fourteen Americans die every day from hepatitis B, related illnesses such as cirrhosis and liver cancer, despite the fact that safe and effective vaccines have been available to prevent hepatitis B for over a decade.

Less than a year after her second transplant operation, Wendy is back at work full time, although she still lives with the consequences of hepatitis B infection. "My life may never be the same as it was before I got sick, but I still consider myself very lucky. I just hope my experience teaches others to protect themselves by learn-

How to survive a first job interview

So they took the bait, huh? They brought their brainy resumes about "contingued manuscripts," what was your really old was a fact check "would you do in this hypothetical situation?" "Draw on your skills and previous experiences to explain how you might handle the problem."

How ever you did it, you got your foot on the door (or at least your big toe), and now it's time to put your best foot forward at the interview time!

What do you say? What do you do?

How will you know if it will work? Sure you do, but remember, beforehand, knowledge of the character and personality of the employer is a great asset. You want to make a good impression from the start, so you'll want to make a good impression from the start.

Employers generally are looking for a certain type of person for the organization, the recruiter says. You want to fit that mold or you won't. Don't waste time during the interview trying to figure out what they're looking for, or trying to be someone you're not—it's obvious to the interviewer.

Preparation for an interview is a two-part process, says Russell Katschinski, New York's regional training and recruitment manager for the Chubb Group of Insurance Cos. The first phase is self-assessment, he says. Think about your personal and professional needs, and how those needs fit them as well as further your career goals. Is there a match?

Be prepared for the open-ended question: "So, tell me about your self." If you've assessed your capabilities beforehand, you can calmly reel off an outline of past accomplishments and show how they're relevant, without going off on tangents or trying to summarize your whole life. With this sort of outline, you're also prepared for the infamous, "So what would you do in this hypothetical situation?" Draw on your skills and previous experiences to explain how you might handle the problem.

The second step in the preparation process, says Katschinski, is to research the company you're interviewing with. Do a search in the library to see if the company has been in the news recently, and check for information about your school's office of career services. You don't have to know what their sock lining is, but any knowledge of the company reveals the extent of your interest in the interview, and allows you to ask informed questions about training, and current projects.

Katschinski said he was impressed with good oral communication skills. Consider previous goals you've set for yourself and how you achieved them. Highlight these successes during the interview. "How successful a candidate has been in the past is the best predictor of future performance," he said.

Harry Hamilton, senior associate at the recruitment firm Morgan Stanley is inclined toward candidates with high levels of motivation and initiative, the ability to analyze problems and come up with different solutions, and the ability to communicate those ideas effectively.

Katschinski said strong impression, one way or the other, can be made. "You shouldn't come out feeling like you got the job or that you didn't. If you feel like you're still in the running, you've done well," he said.

Team players are extremely important, he said.

Paul Marchand, manager of executive recruitment for the department store Lord and Taylor, looks for "the ability to juggle many things at once." Energy and enthusiasm are a must, which should spring from the research which should be forthcoming, Marchand advised that candidates play up their own revealing dedication, commitment and determination to reach goals.

Act professionally, dress your best and maintain good posture, he advised. "Just because the interviewer takes his or her jacket off and slouches doesn't mean you can take yours off," he said. One successful strategy to use in an interview, said Katschinski, is to think of yourself as the salesperson and your interviewer as the customer. Your job is to sell your skills in the interview. Approach the interview with the attitude, "Here's what I can do for you, not what can you do for me."

March and also said, "Interview with as many companies as you can." That's the only way to get better interviews, he said. Some graduating seniors report feeling under their own steam about their interview performance.

March said, "I've seen you come out, you think you did well, but you never know," said one New York University business student who interviewed with Morgan Stanley.

Katschinski said strong impression, one way or the other, can be made. "You shouldn't come out feeling like you got the job or that you didn't. If you feel like you're still in the running, you've done well," he said.

Food Matters

Jean Guenther, program specialist for the Culinary Arts Department

This Lemon sauce is a perfect time to get loaded on fish and seafood dishes.

For those of you a bit leary of cooking fish, Oven Crisped fish is an easy recipe. The fish is coated with Parmesan bread crumbs, lemon juice, and olive oil.

The microwave is also an ideal way to cook fish and keep it moist. Allow 2-4 minutes on high for each pound of fish.

You might try French Fish with a Red Pepper Coulis or some black pepper or paprika and chopped fresh dill weed.

RED PEPPER COULIS

"sauce on the presentation"

- 2 large sweet red peppers, seeded and cut into 1" pieces
- 2 tsp. sliced green onion
- 2 large cloves garlic, crushed
- 1/2 tsp. dry dill
- 2 tsp. dry white wine
- 2 tsp. evaporated skimmed milk
- fresh ground white pepper, to taste
- dish salt.

In a microwaveable plate, combine the first five ingredients. Microwave on high for five minutes, stirring several times until soft. Transfer to food processor blender and mix until smooth. Add the milk, pepper and salt. Mix until well combined. Serve warm as a base for simply prepared fish or chicken. Garnish with parsley sprig.

Serves 4.

POACHED FISH

"simple elegant" served with Red Pepper Coulis

- 2 pounds fish fillets, any type
- 1-1/2 cups dry white wine
- 1-1/2 cups lemon juice

Place fish in a microwaveable baking dish (12x8). Pour wine over. Sprinkle with lemon juice. Cover loosely with plastic wrap. Microwave on high for 6-7 minutes until fish is opaque and flakes easily with a fork.

Serves 6-8.

Suggestion: serve this superb simple dish with an assortment of vegetables. Accompany with Chardonnay.

OVEN CRISPED FISH

"simple to assemble"

- 1/2 cup dry breadcrumbs
- 2 tsp. grated Parmesan or Romano cheese
- 2 tsp. lemon juice
- 3/4 tsp. mayonnaise
- 1/2 tsp. sweet paprika
- 1/4 tsp. dry dill
- 1/4 tsp. garlic powder
- 1 pound fish fillets
- 3 tsp. fresh lemon juice
- 3 tsp. dry white wine
- 1 tsp. Canola oil

Preheat oven to 425°F. Combine the first seven ingredients. Mix. Slice and pat dry. In a shallow pan, combine the lemon juice and wine. Lightly spray a 13x9 pan with cooking oil. Dip each fillet into the wine mixture, then into the breadcrumb mixture until well coated. Place fish in prepared pan. Drizzle each fillet with a little of the oil. Bake 20 minutes, or until fish flakes easily with a fork.

Serves 4.

Help With Taxes

These are typical of questions asked by taxpayers and are presented as a public service of this publication and the IRS.

Q I always do my tax return myself, but I need a little help this year. Does the Internal Revenue Service have any employees available to answer questions?

A IRS has employees in many cities to help you. You can get help in person at a local IRS office. To find out in your area, call the IRS telephone number for your area, listed in your tax package or local telephone directory.

If you do not want to go into an IRS office, or if there is no office near you, the assistant that answers the telephone can help you with many of your tax questions.

In addition, IRS "Tax-Tax" has recorded tax messages in many topics. For a list of topics and the Tax-Tax number for your area, see your tax package or order Publication 910, Guide to Free Tax Services.

Q I work all day during the week. Is there any way I can get help with my taxes during the evening or weekend?

A For those with touch-tone telephones, Tele-Tax recorded tax messages are available 24 hours a day. Also, IRS trains volunteers who help with taxes in many neighborhoods. Call the IRS to ask about Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) or Tax Counseling for the Elderly (TCE). Volunteers can fill out basic income tax returns for persons with disabilities, the elderly, non-English speaking people and those who can not afford paid preparers.

Q Is there other free tax help?

A IRS has more than 100 free publications on specific tax topics. Also, many public libraries have tax forms and publications available for you to photocopy.

For more information on free tax services, call 1-800-829-3070 and order Publication 910.

Harper's 'Beyond Therapy'

ANNE SCHWARTZ
A&E Editor

This weekend, Beyond Therapy opens here on campus for a two-week end run. Beyond Therapy is a twisted, black, absurdly funny soap opera, trying to find love in the '80s. Both week therapists to help untangle their conflicts but ironically, it's the therapists who need help. The therapists slowly manipulate the patients into believing that they are more insane than they are. So, in a nutshell, they are all Beyond Therapy.

"It's a fun play to do," said Todd Valentine, director. "The script makes you question what is normal and what isn't." Sometimes you need to be a little abnormal to become "normal."

The most challenging situation the actors faced was finding human characters in outlandish situations. With such crazy characters, it was difficult to find believable characteristics to develop into a "real person." The psychologists' characters are as exaggerated while the patients' characters are pitied.

E.J. Sutton plays Bruce, the male half of the couple who seeks therapy to help him through his relationship. Prudence, the female half, is portrayed by Deb Vylene. Bruce's favorite love, Bob, is played by Mike Korman. The two psychologists are Bob Quipley as Charlotte Bruce's therapist, and Susan, Prudence's shrink. Tom Bonkle plays Andrew, the waiter.

You may have noticed the warnings included on the flyers and posters.

This is because of adult situations, sexual implications and bad language. "This show is not for everyone and some may be offended," said Valentine. The script pokes fun at psychology and romance, how they intertwine and repeat each other.

Valentine also explained that the show is full of energy because of the emotions it requires to balance the comedy. The play is full of jokes, the energy gives it that extra "oomph."

Ticket prices are $7 with discounts for students and senior citizens. The dinner theater package on Saturday, March 20, is $19.95 and begins at 6 p.m. For tickets and information, call the Harper College Box Office at ext. 2457.

Cultural exhibit sounds interesting

To complement the opening of Beyond Therapy, A Maori Meeting House (Wha wha) (P.O. Box 100) (MAUW) (Mauw) Field Museum will host Te Waka Toi: Contemporary Maori Art From New Zealand (tel: 0414 444 444) (March 10 through May 9). The exhibition features 50 works of contemporary art by the Maori people of New Zealand. They cover a wide range of media, such as, and techniques including carving, weaving, painting, video, sculptural construction, bone and gemstone carving.

The pieces speak of a culture that is firmly embedded in tradition as it seeks new ways to express the values central to the Maori people.

The most important forms of Maori art are sculpture, sometimes in whalebone, ivory, or jade, but predominantly in wood. The carvers themselves have always been experts (no age whakare). They began their training as apprentices in their youth.

Knowledge of carving and the ability to carve were included with leadership, courage, religious learning and generosity, the ideal attributes of a great chief. The songs or whakata, they created was thought to accumulate power through their ancestors and to link the living with the dead. Whakata means any and all possessions handed down by ancestors including dance, language, oral traditions, crafts, history and legends.

Te Waka Toi makes a contribution to the public recognition of the creativity and importance of the work of contemporary Maori artists. The scope of the pieces range from a 6' carved figure, Manawa (Lure) by Ross Hoppers, to fine weaving by Rangimarie Hetherington and clay vessels by Bert Eklund. The artists represented in Te Waka Toi are recognized in New Zealand as leaders in their field.

Te Waka Toi: Contemporary Maori Art From New Zealand is free with regular Field Museum admission: $4 for adults, $2.50 for children (1-17), senior citizens and students with I.D. The museum is free on Tuesdays. This exhibition is presented by Te Waka Toi: The Maori and South Pacific Arts Council, New Zealand and will be displayed in the Special Exhibit Gallery located on the ground floor. The Field Museum is open daily 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and is located on Lake Shore Drive at Roosevelt Road. For further information call (312) 932-9810.

Attention Poets!!

The National Library of Poetry has announced that $12,000 in prizes will be awarded this year to over 250 poets in the North American Open Poetry Contest. The deadline for the contest is March 31, 1993. The contest is open to everyone and every 17th grade.

Any poet, whether previously published or not, can be a winner. Every poem entered also has a chance to be published in a deluxe, hardbound anthology.

To enter, send ONE original poem, any subject and any style, to the National Library of Poetry, 11419 Conridge Dr., P.O. Box 706, The X1 Owings Mills, MD 21117. The poem should be no more than 20 lines, and the poet's name and address should appear on the top of the page. Entries must be postmarked by March 31, 1993. A new contest opens April 1, 1993.

Jewish murals on display at Art Institute

A famed set of murals, created by Russian painter Marc Chagall for the decoration of the State Jewish Chamber Theater in Moscow in the early 1920s travel to The Art Institute of Chicago after closing at the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum in New York.

On view in Chicago from March 19 through May 7, 1993, Marc Chagall's Jewish Theater Murals presents richly crafted works that Chagall considered his personal masterpieces. Exploring themes of music, dance, drama, and literature, these murals are complemented by paintings, photographs, posters, costumes and set designs, and props, some of which will be seen only in Chicago.

The exhibition presents a fascinating look at the development of the secular Jewish theater movement during the extraordinary period of freedom, innovation, and experimentation in post-Revolutionary Soviet Russia.

During the early years of the Soviet Union, Chagall was involved in a campaign to promote a national Jewish art program. The members of the State Jewish Chamber Theater, who were active in this movement, set as their mandate the creation of a genuinely modern national Jewish theater. Chagall created murals for the walls, painted the ceiling, and designed the curtain for the theater's opening night production on January 1, 1921, and the small but successful playhouse later became known as "Chagall's Box."

In 1924, the State Jewish chamber

Theater moved to a larger auditorium, and Chagall's murals were moved along with it. Because of growing anti-Semitism and the closing of theatrical groups under Stalin, the murals were taken down and hidden under the stage in 1938. In 1950, they were moved to the State Tretyakov Gallery in Moscow, where they were held in storage for almost forty years. They were finally rediscovered and restored in 1990, and made their debut outside the Soviet Union in Marburg, Switzerland, and Frankfurt, Germany. Now on view for the first time in the United States, Marc Chagall's Jewish Theater Murals presents the master at the height of his powers, expressing all he wished to say as an artist, and actively relating his ideas on the development of a national Russian Jewish theater.

Advance tickets are available by calling Ticketmaster at 800-350-5500. Same-day tickets, subject to availability, may be purchased at the Art Institute when the exhibition is on view. Tickets at $6.00 for adults, seniors, and students. From March 20 through May 10, 1993, Marc Chagall's Jewish Theater Murals will be on view concurrently with the Margritte exhibition. Advance and same-day tickets for viewing both shows are $10.00 for adults, and $8.00 for seniors, students, and children. Per order and per order service charges apply if ordered through Ticketmaster. Both exhibitions are free to members of the Art Institute.

School art project bombs

So what is art, anyway?

Ann Kowalski

Art Editor

Did you hear what happened in Edmond, Oklahoma?

Two hundred students were evacuated and explosive experts were called to school after teacher thought a student's art project was a bomb.

"She doesn't touch art," the principal of the school said. (Well, that's obvious. She doesn't know art when she sees it.) "So we went through our normal procedures, which is to conduct a search."

An off-duty police officer at the school examined the object and (probably) burst out laughing! (Heer mused it may be a bomb. A television station interrupted programming to announce the report of a bomb, sending frantic parents rushing to the school. Yes, the media is causing lotsa trouble - again.

The bomb squad eventually dismantled what was called a "junk art project." The bomb squad came. What is this world coming to?

"It really did look suspicious or we wouldn't have contacted the police department," the principal said. "But it was an overreaction by the media! It caused some hectic movement up here for about 40 minutes (hey! I'm not that same tough as a chess player)! Coincidence or pre-meditated?"

School administrators refused to identify the student artist. Alas, another great work signed, simply, "Anonymous."

HARPER GRADS TRANSFER TO ROOSEVELT SIMPLY, SWIFTLY, SUCCESSFULLY.

Each year, hundreds of Harper graduates transfer to Roosevelt University's Arlington Heights campus to complete their bachelor's degrees because Roosevelt is the northwest suburb's largest, most comprehensive university.

Harper students Kathy Wrobel and Dan Liu tell why they chose Roosevelt:

"Roosevelt accepted all my Harper credits, and registration was a breeze," Kathy says. "The campus location was ideal." "Roosevelt gave me a scholarship," Dan explains. "And all my Harper credits were accepted. I particularly like the small classes, and the fact that the campus is close to home."

If you're interested in joining Roosevelt University's many successful Harper students, come visit us or call an admissions counselor at 708.437.9200 to let us help you plan your transfer.

Former women's league baseball player visits during Women's History Week

AUSA CINCINNATI
Staff Writer

Baseball, a sport dominated by men, has been 1943-54 the All-American Girls Professional Baseball League owned the field.

It was their time at bat. The AAGPBL was created during World War II by chewing gum entrepreneur and Chicago Cubs owner Philip K. Wrigley to fill a void in American culture. After major league players were drafted into the armed forces, the women's league kept the public's love of baseball alive.

Former league member Terry Donohue spoke during Women's History Week about her days of glory.

Donohue, a center fielder in Canada years before she joined the league. Her sports-minded parents introduced her to the ball field before she attended first grade.

"I grew up during the Depression," Donohue said. "There wasn't much money in the country. There was no theater. I played ball because there was nothing else to do."

"The whole family played ball right in our backyard. My brother tried to throw hands to me, but he kept hitting me. I tried to make him miss. This was to my advantage. I became pretty good."

In 1945, the Major League Baseball (Donohue's softball league) was the Western Canadian Championship One of Wrigley's success was moving the United States and Canada searching for talented ballplayers. He asked Donohue to try out for the league.

"The next holiday I went home and told mother and father. My mother said, 'No way. That's another country. It's too far.' I said, 'Listen I have to go. I've got to know if I can make it. If I can't, I'll come back and be happy.'"

Teams were already established in cities including Kenosha, Racine, Rockford, South Bend and Milwaukee. Tryouts for two new teams, Peoria and Muskegon, brought hundreds of female players to the Peoria Locks, for spring training. Only 30 players would make the league.

"On the second day, I was sitting in a big room with hundreds of girls waiting for our names to be called," Donohue said. "I got quite popular when I remember my name being called for the Peoria Redwings. I even told the team that came to my room and that the way that I didn't have to go back home."

The girls ranged in age from 16 to 28 and earned salaries of $50 to $125 a week, more than most of their fathers. With the new income and responsibilities came restrictions.

"There was no drinking or smoking," Donohue said. "We could not wear slacks. We could not have short hair. We had curfews—you had to be in your room two hours after a ball game. It was very strict. And I think it had to be because we were young and it was the first time we were away from home."

Once situated, league members within the ball diamond. "When the league was first formed, it used 12 inch softballs and we had the lead off," Donohue said. "And very quickly the ball got smaller and the bases lengthened. Then we got into the stadium pitch. Eventually it was overhauled and became regular baseball."

The women had to look good on and off the field. Even though their makeup and hairstyles changed, one thing remained the same—the uniforms. "Wrigley wanted us to look like ladies and play like men," Donohue said. "People came out because they thought it was a novelty to see women play baseball in a one-piece dress. They were there for a good laugh. But when they saw how well we played, they came back."

From 1946-49, Donohue, a utility player for the Peoria Redwings, was on the field six days a week with a double header on Sunday.

Donohue fondly remembered her first experience as a catcher. She was asked to replace the team's regular catcher, who broke her finger.

"I'll never forget that game," Donohue said. "It was the first game I ever caught and I went 19 innings. We had to sleep at midnight because there was a rule that you couldn't play after 12 o'clock. I'll never forget the date. It was August 21, 1946. The next day was my birthday. I knew and my knees knew we had gone 19 innings."

The league attracted more than 1 million fans during its heyday. Yet it disbanded in 1954. Donohue attributed the league's demise to the introduction of televised games, the return of war veterans, an upswing in the economy, the departure of players and the reorientation of leisure activities.

The AAGPBL was virtually left out of history books and forgotten. "I think we were left out of history because we're women," Donohue said. "If we were men, we would have been well known."

Eventually the league was recognized and inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown. A permanent exhibit—including balls, uniforms, mugs, photographs and a plaque honoring every girl who played in the All-American—shows their accomplishments.

The silver screen was also a vehicle for the AAGPBL. The league's tale unfolded in the movie "A League of Their Own."

Before production began, the league members felt uncomfortable about the casting of Madonna. "We were upset when we read they had signed Madonna to be in this movie," Donohue said. "At the time, we asked a Columbia Pictures executive, 'What are you trying to do to us? We know who Madonna is. We had a very strict league and there wasn't one of us girls like Madonna.' And he said, 'We signed Madonna to a contract. She has a very small part but we have her under control.' And we said, 'You better have.'"

Penny Marshall got 50 or 60 league members to meet the stars in July 1990 to ask questions, throw balls and talk about their experiences.

"When we saw the movie we were very nervous," Donohue said. "They did give Madonna a bigger part than they had originally planned. But we all felt she did a very good job. All the actresses did. We were very proud and pleased. I think Penny Marshall really did right by us."

After retiring from the baseball league, Donohue spent 36 years as a bookkeeper/accountant for an interior design firm before retiring in 1990.

"I'm grateful to Mr. Philip K. Wrigley for giving us the chance to prove women can play professional ball and play well," Donohue said. "I'm also honored to be associated with the women I played with."

"I would love nothing better than to see a professional women's baseball league today. I believe there are women out there who are qualified to play. I don't know if they'll play as well as we did. We would love it and support it."

'March Madness' sets in as NCAA basketball tournament begins

Lee Peterson
Harbinger Sports Columnist

I'd been feeling a little under the weather last so I went to the doctor's office.

After a routine examination and what seemed like a three hour wait, the doc returned with the results. "I thought you were showing symptoms of spring fever, but I could be wrong. I showed your results to a colleague of mine and he confirmed my suspicions. You are suffering from a common variant of the fever known as March Madness. The only treatment I can recommend is watching at least half the games in the NCAA tournament over the next four weeks."

I thanked Dr. Duggan and headed for the local Seven Eleven to stock up on soda, chips and dip. I knew it was going to be a long recovery.

My apologies to Dick Vitale for using March Madness, but I'm pretty sure he didn't coin the phrase. Just in case, I'm reciting a prayer.

The time comes as every college basketball season to start the road to the national championship. This year seems to hold the promise of an upset filled season, but I'm picking few underdogs to advance to more than one round.

I'll start in the East Region, only because it seems to be the easiest to call. North Carolina drew the number one seed and away first three rounds.

Their opponents until they meet up with St. John's in the Regional round. Look for the Tarheels to go to the big dance in New Orleans after beating Cincinnati in the Semis. Kentucky has what could be a walk in the park if unless Wake Forest and then Florida State don't play up to their potential. I picked FSU to beat Semin Hall in the regional only because their school's football helmets have the same logo as the high school I graduated from. (Now you see why I lose so many bets.) The Wildcats of Kentucky should book their reservations in the Big Easy now.

The Midwest Region is loaded with power teams, and should provide for the best match ups. Indiana and Louisville, the first and fourth seeds respectively, should meet in the regional with the footcure coming out on top. Duke and Kansas, the third and second seeds, should also meet in the regional. You can't call the Blue Devils an underdog in any game, and they'll prove that by beating the Jayhawks and then Indiana to squeak into the Final Four.

I'm picking Michigan to be the fourth of the four, but only because they are so much fun to watch. The Wolverines are up heavy with talent, but are right at a feather in the experience department. They'll play well, but don't look for them to be cutting down any nets in April. Fifth, I'm deferring my picks for the Final Four on the off chance that I'm incorrect.

I know I promised to be nice to the Bulls, but after losses to the Heat and Detroit, I couldn't think of anything nice to say.

I'll let them off the hook this time, but the next time they have a week like that, no promises will save them.

Intramural basketball teams head towards 'April Madness'

The intramural basketball league's balance down through each place is going to set up an interesting league play-off.

A hot shooting, lower-placed team named team will press any of the top ranked five. The final place alone will be determined with that week's play-off.

This is how the games from March 19th:

Beats 53 Skitswags 52

In one tough game for both sides, the Bears prevailed over Skitswags in the week 53 game. The lead changed hands throughout the battle, but Chris Schuler's 20 points and Tim Longhouse's free throw shooting at the wire the Bears had enough to hold on at the finish. Jeff Anderson and Eric Scott provided most of the offensive punch for Skitswags. Anderson's last second jump shot at the horn drew screaming from the IM Team fans who had pulled off the relief of the Bears.

IM Team 61 Court Justice 52

After dropping their first game of the season, the IM Team have run off five straight wins to move into contention with the league leaders. Chris Adams and Dennis Bagnoli lit up the board for a combined 47 points to pace the victory. Jason Tappi did his usual hard work and Mike Lovich provided 19 points for the C.J.'s.

Hill Squad 66 Prime Time 52

Wayne Patten's 21 points led a balanced scoring. Hill Squad in their second win of the season over an improving Prime Time five. Guy Foss chalked up 20 points while again good the Prime Timer in the offensive department.

Unsubscribing 81 Big Dwaags 62

The well-oiled Unsubscribing team continues to impress all with their unselfish style on the offensive and good crisp defensive movement. Kelly Emery and Scaglietti coordinate with passing and scoring while Marchetti and Jensen do the heavy duty board work.

Lenny Proscawicz continues to Lenny Proscawicz supplied most of the K's offense with 16 points.

5th Ward Hawks to Prime Time 49

In a back and forth, the top team vs. the cellar dweller, the Hawks counted to a one-sided win. The battling Prime Timers were full of fight all night, but when sharp shooting Guy Foss went down early in the game with an ankle injury, their future was dimmed. Derek Harris and Larry Dennis again provided the lion share of the Hawk offense and D. Dunn a season high of 21 points.

Unsubscribing 66 Hill Squad 59

The U-Subs pulled into league heavy weight region with another impressive win over a talented Hill Squad team. Both teams needed good efforts to be competitive in this game of their schools would have been blown off. Wayne Patten and James Adams led the Hill Squad on the offensive and all night. However, the great team play wore down the H Squad with Greg Kelley and Joe Emery holding her hands all night.

Eye on the Hawks takes time to speak his mind

Jim Walters
Sports Editor

Sorry, folks. No "One on one" this week.

As much as Heather and I truly enjoy attempting to verbally beat each other's brains in, we just couldn't think of anything to talk about this week.

So for any of you three or four people who read the sports page last weekend, it's the return of your much-loved (but much less witty than before) "Eye on the Hawks."

It took a while since you've heard from me as an individual column other than during Heather's sickness, so I'll try to make it interesting.

The first thing I would like to mention is the pay I feel in the soon to be beginning baseball season.

It's a truly strange feeling to be looking forward to the beginning of the season as a Cub fan, especially considering the fact that the nearby apes Andre Dawson and even winning Greg Maddux have both moved on to bigger and better contracts. I can't say the Cubs deserved to keep either of them, but hey, what players 30 years ago would have turned down a contract for a team because of "a couple hundred thousand dollars."

When you think about it, doesn't it kinda make you sick?

I mean sure, the Cubs treated both players with no respect what so ever. Yet, they both gave more than their fair share of time and energy to the team. But why, if they wanted to get away from the regulations, no body, did they bother with contract negotiations?

If you have plans to not sign with a team, you don't spend months at the bargaining table just to walk away for pennies (well, it is compared to what they make).

Anyway, if the entire team stays relatively healthy, the north sideers actually have a reasonable chance of winning the National League East, the weakest division in all of sports.

I wouldn't expect the team to head to the World Series, but hey, if a team like the Cubs has a chance to win their division, I'm not going to argue. After all, I may be a Cub fan, but I am realistic about their chances of true success.

Now, I may have already have lost the faith of some of my (dare I say it?) "loyal" readers, but at the same time, I guess you'll have my argument as to just which team (Cubs or White Sox) fans are better.

On to the next subject.

As far as the Harbinger sports page is concerned, I've got to say just how thankful I am to have the page I do each week.

I've seen the other college newspapers around here, and to say the very least, I'm shocked.

I'd been complaining early in the semester that I (actually at the time it was "we" for Heather and myself) needed more room to give quality coverage of Harper's sports. The more I look around and see what other sports editors are given to work with every week, the more I'm content with what I've got.

To begin with, having one full page on a college newspaper is a rarity, much less two pages each and every week. Besides, even between seasons coverage of Harper's sports. The more I look around and see what other sports editors are given to work with every week, the more I'm content with what I've got.

I do realize that according to MAC rules Harper is not allowed to provide scholarships to it's athletes. However, if we did, imagine just what kind of teams we'd have!

There is a good deal of reluctance to hand out scholarships for athletics, and rightly so. However, if the people in charge of scholarships were to actually monitor the athletes' academic performance, there would be no problem. Athletics would have no choice but to study their number one and I have similar writing notions.

One more subject I would like to clear up before my space runs out in this "Jimmy the Cook" business. Just what kind of an idiot would openly call himself an idiot, in print or otherwise???

While I do admit the style of writing did seem a bit like my own, everybody seemed to have completely ignored the fact that Ben Ferguson and I have similar writing notions.

Do you have any idea that I just may have become someone other than that worst of cooks?

GET A CLUE!!
Jim Ferguson is Jimmy the Cook!
Thank you.

Former cosmonaut to inform campus of life in Russian space program

Three times designated "Hero of the Soviet Union and Order of Lenin" for his brilliant contributions to the Soviet space program, cosmonaut and spacecraft engineer Georgy Greshko will appear April 6, at 7:30 p.m. in Building J Theatre Dr. Greshko, sponsored by the Astronomy Club, will deliver a 45-minute presentation, "Russians in Space."

Dr. Greshko began his space career as a ballistics engineer working for the design bureau headed by Sergei Korolev, the father of the Soviet space program. He worked on the trajectory calculations for Sputnik, the world's first satellite, and Vostok 1, the spacecraft that carried Yuri Gagarin, the first man in space. His work includes lunar research and he is widely recognized in Soviet spacecraft literature.

Dr. Greshko was chief scientist of communications segment on dense space missions.

He has spent a total of 134 days in space for more than any American astronaut. Clearly, Dr. Greshko distinguishes himself at the cutting edge of the Space Age.

Presently, Dr. Greshko is head of the laboratory of the Russian Academy of Sciences with his emphasis in atmospheric research.

Admission to the program is free. For further information, call Paul Supera, Ext. 2374.

Senate hammers changes in policies

Precipitous decisions make their way through student government votes

The student senate begins deliberation during Tuesday night's special meeting.

Senate contradicts itself on deadlines

Deadline to remain firm says Student Activities Director Jeanne Panaknin

Kenneth Dulan
Editor-in-Chief

Tuesday night's senate meeting extended the deadline for nominees for upcoming elections.

Originally scheduled to end March 17, the senate approved, by a vote of four to two, to allow for an extension of the run-off date to give interested students a chance to file a candidacy for a senate position.

Senators discussed their reasons for either being for or against the idea.

"I find going by what is in the constitution," said Bonnie Henry, applicant for senate president.

"I verified it with Jeanne [Panaknin]."

Diane Sprague Jones, student trustee felt that due to a "lack of communication, we should extend the deadline by 72 hours."

Panaknin, student activities director, responding to the change said that "to expect to those who did file on time, the deadline will remain as of last."

Deadlines were originally established in December to coordinate with the student activity calendar and with The Harblinger publishing deadlines.

"This is another example of some senators having no integrity or credibility," Panaknin said.

"They were told on Feb. 19, that the senate elections would be held in conjunction with the spring student trustee elections."

Senators opinions were mixed over the deadline.

"I didn't even know about a deadline," said Prudence Rawal, senator.

"We are going against what is in our constitution," stated Art Weston, senate vice president.

The constitution states that the elections committee "has the authority to establish rules and regulations for nominations and elections; however, their decisions should be ratified by the Harper College Student Government."

Jeff Bunko, election committee chairperson, said that he "knew of the previous deadline, but felt that students weren't notified in time."

Melinda Nienhauser, senator, said "I was told two days before the deadline, by the secretary in the student activities office, that they were unsure if the deadline was in effect for both student trustee nominations and senate positions."

"I guess was about that day, so what could I do?"

Charles January, senate president, said "It benefits the students who were aware of the deadline."

"It gives them a chance to run."

The administration complied with the deadline the senate originally stated," Panaknin stated.

"They wanted it in link with the student trustee election."

Lisa Smith, senate treasurer, said "Jeanne never contacted Jeff, Charles, or the senate about the deadline."

Kenneth Dulan
Editor-in-Chief

With seven voting members present, the Student Senate introduced changes in recent policies.

The senate, by a vote five to two, extended the deadline for nominees wishing to file as a candidate in upcoming elections. The deadline was extended from March 17 until April 5.

Other action at the meeting included the approval of the current president and vice-president to step down from office upon official results of the senate elections.

The vote allows the winners of both positions to take office during the current school year.

Further action taken by the senate included a request by Senate President Charles January to nominate Michael Dolan and Kim Hagen to senate positions.

"I felt that I distanced them when that was not my intention," January said.

"I was merely trying to give the senate a chance to ask questions of my choices, rather than 'walkover' down onto their positions, which I felt some senators thought."

A decision on Dolan and Hagen will be made at the next senate meeting.

Tuesday night's decisions all included discussion from senators on both sides of the issues.

January, chairing the meeting, extended each senator the opportunity to voice his or her opinion during a session called a "committee role."

Candidates in the 1993-94 senate elections

These are the current candidates for next year's senate. Nominees are running unopposed in each position except for student trustee, which has four nominees. Nominees are described below, with their name, position they are running for, status at Harper, and a quote on why they should be elected into their respective positions. Voting takes place April 6 and 7 and student turnout is encouraged. (photos by Phillip Anders.)

Name: Bonnie Jones

Position: president

Status: Freshman

"The key to successful leadership of the student senate is based on leadership which is carefully constructed and organized. My previous managerial experience and my active involvement with the student senate and the Honors Society are some examples that would reflect my ability to be qualified as the president of Harper's Student Senate. I look forward to serving the students of Harper College as a leader who is dedicated and willing to reunite the senate for the prosperity of all the students."

Bonnie Jones

Cheryl Brandt

Name: Cheryl Brandt

Position: vice-president

Status: Sophomore

"I would like to run for vice-president of student senate because I believe I can provide the leadership needed by working with the president and others to get things accomplished, and encouraging the entire student senate to work together to do what is best for student body. I would like to see students make the most of their college years at Harper by getting involved in extracurricular activities."

Name: Kim Hanson

Position: senator from Student Development division
Status: Sophomore

"I feel I would be a good representative for Harper College because I am involved on campus in the Student Development Division and would adequately voice its opinion or concerns. I am a student aide in the Career and Personal Development Center and familiar with several counselors and coordinators. This is my fourth semester here and I feel I would lend a realistic student perspective to the Harper College Student Senate."

Kim Hanson

Garrick Yorgil
headed, and is in tune with the students' feelings. The student senate must project a positive attitude towards the administration and the community."

Name: Garrick Yorgil

Position: Senator from the Liberal Arts Division

Status: Freshman

"I feel that the student body needs to be represented properly by a student who is willing to be fair, level-headed, and is in tune with the students' feelings. The student senate must project a positive attitude towards the administration and the community."

1993-94 Student Trustee election candidates

Name: Chris Lopez
Position: Student Trustee
Status: Freshman

"I would like to be a member of the Harper College Student Trustee, because the experience would be new opportunity, and a big challenge. I am secretary of Collegiate Blind Association of the deaf, and vice president of Sign Language Club at Harper. For a long time, I have been involved in community service. I own my own landscaping business and I'm involved in many community activities."

Chris Lopez

Art Weston

Name: Art Weston
Position: Student Trustee
Status: Freshman

"I would like to become a student member of the Harper Student Trustee to fulfill a personal objective to learn from the experience and to represent the students of Harper College. After serving as vice-president of the Harper's Student Senate, I have grown concerned with the Senate's apathy and inability to accomplish significant goals. I could express the concerns of the student body to a group of affluent men and women who can act on issues and accomplish goals."

Name: Mary Ann Crosby-Anderson
Position: Student Trustee
Status: Sophomore

"I hereby pledge to dedicate myself to serving the Harper community in a professional manner, and to strengthen the relationship between students and the administration."

Mary Ann Crosby-Anderson

Alfred Norris

Cost of the seminar is $122 and includes lunch and materials. A group discount is available. For more information, call 708/997-1377 and specify course number LL5079-001.

Americans arrested for carrying drugs abroad

In 1992, almost 5,000 American citizens were arrested abroad. More than 1,000 of those arrested were held on charges of carrying or possessing drugs.

We know that many college students plan to travel abroad during the spring and summer breaks. Perhaps you have begun buying and packing necessary items like a toothbrush, sunscreen, sunglasses, etc. We hope you will think twice before packing something that will not only destroy your trip, but could easily destroy your life.

The global war on drugs is heating up and there are increased efforts by all countries to stop the flow of illegal narcotics. If you think there is no danger in buying or carrying a "small" amount of drugs in your overseas trip, you are in for an unpleasant surprise. Americans have been arrested for possessing as little as one ounce of an ounce of marijuana.

You might assume that, as an American citizen, you are immune from prosecution under foreign laws and that the U.S. Constitution will protect you. You might think that you are "innocent until proven guilty" because it is that way in the U.S. Not so in most countries. Americans are surprised to find that in some countries, even the death penalty, in some foreign countries, it is not uncommon to spend months or even years in detention, only to be sentenced to a lengthy prison stay without parole. Once you leave, U.S. laws and constitutional rights no longer apply. U.S. consular officers can visit jailed Americans to see that they are being fairly and humanely treated, but cannot get them out of jail nor intervene in a foreign country's legal system on their behalf.

You should be wary of persons who ask you to carry any large or drive a car across a border. Once that pack or anything in the car is in your possession, you become responsible and there are increased efforts by all countries to stop the flow of illegal narcotics. If you think there is no danger in buying or carrying a "small" amount of drugs in your overseas trip, you are in for an unpleasant surprise. Americans have been arrested for possessing as little as one ounce of an ounce of marijuana.

If for medical reasons you must take medication or other prescription medications, carry a doctor's certificate attesting to that fact and keep all medications in original and labeled containers. Getting involved with drugs overseas can do more than ruin your vacation, it can destroy your life.

Spaces, spaces everywhere but not a place to park

Alright! Who do I blame?

How about the snow? How about the person who had the faulty car of yellow paint? How about I just blame each person individually?

Yes, that's what I'll do.

The problem is the parking situation at the school. Only this problem isn't the distance people are walking, or where they park. It's how the people are parking.

I drove to school one recent Monday morning, attempting to park in front of building M, like I normally do. The walk to the school isn't bad, no matter where I park.

So I pull into the lot, searching for a place to park my mode of transportation into a completely open space. Buzzer on that idea.

As I drove around, I noticed that almost everyone had double-parked their car. That is, they double-parked or angled their cars.

Now, is it too much to ask for people with cars that look better as six-packs to keep their car confined and leave the rest of the lot for others of us who require only one spot?

I'll make a deal with those of you who are guilty of this most heinous crime. You arrive late one day, due to uncontrollable circumstances, and drive around to find a parking space while I take up a couple of places myself. Why, now that I think about it, I'll just park sideways and use three to four spaces just to have room to pull out when I leave school every evening.

Then you can feel the agony of being on the other side of the wheel. In return, I'll have the pleasure of knowing that my car has its own personal parking spot(s).

So, to all students who arrive early, do the rest of us a favor. Use the yellow lines. They have a purpose. They let you know that each car is entitled to one full parking space. Unless, of course, you own a space shuttle.

The intent of tax-and-spend

Uncle Sam wasting taxpayers money on military might

Paul Goussiers
Harbinger Columnist

Have you even been in a classroom to realize? Even the number of innocent women and children? Of course not, you say. But if you are a United States taxpayer, then you are guilty of aiding and abetting in the deaths of hundreds of thousands of human beings. I'm sure your response to this accusation is one of outrage! But I'm sorry to say that it is true!

America's tax money has been used by our military and covert intelligence forces to ensure U.S. dominance in the world for well over a century. Our hard earned dollars have been used to fund the gross wild campaigns against Native Americans, dictatorial takeovers in Central America and the interests of huge multi-national oil companies in Iraq. This is only a short list of the shameful campaigns that our government has waged in people's lives. If this sounds outrageous to you, I suggest that you educate yourself about U.S. foreign policy.

We have been getting blood on our hands for a long time. I couldn't believe this myself when I first started reading about it. I guess I used to have "Mr. Smith goes to Washington" attitude about our government a few years back. I thought that those people in Congress had honor and integrity. Now I know better.

Do you feel perfectly justified in funding murder? I hope not! I have been doing some research lately and have found a publication called "Conscience and Military Tax Campaign: A Magazine for War Tax Resisters".

This organization is based on the idea that if a person doesn't feel right paying for war, then that person should not have to pay. People who are morally, religiously or politically opposed to war are allowed to file for conscientious objector status, so why can't these people also refuse to pay for killing? An analogy would be "I won't tell that person, but I'll pay you to do it!" Is this right?

Have you ever wondered where all your tax dollars go? 53%, yes 53% goes to current and past military expenditures! 20% goes to human resources (education, health and human services), 11% goes to the general government fund (justice, Dept., 20% interest on the national debt), 10% goes to physical resources (agriculture, commerce, transportation).

These percentages amount to $317 billion per year being spent on current military expenses! That comes to $26 billion per month, $880 million per day, $36 million per hour, and $10 thousand per second! All this money being spent on weapons we don't need while our schools are scraping by and cutting programs left and right! We are selling our future to war!

Just to give you an idea when all this military money could be doing to rebuild America. $940,000 buys 1 million children through the National School Lunch Program for 1 year. $300 million pays for 6 hours of military spending or the support of 1600 rape crisis and battered women's shelters. $1 billion pays for 1 day of the Persian Gulf War or nutritional supplements and prenatal care for 2,127,000 low income families. $1 billion also pays for 24,000 military related jobs, but would create 30,800 civilian jobs, and finally $4.5 billion pays for the research on the Star Wars missile defense plan or mass transit subordinated to none other!

Would you rather pay for war "games" or programs that will make war less necessary?

America needs to wake up from its apathetic major and take back our country before our short sighted "leaders" lead us to disaster!

What can you, as an American taxpayer do? Here are a few suggestions. File the EZ PEACE form with the Alternative Revenue Service, a project of the War Resisters League. Use this form to redirect money from the military to projects that serve human needs, instead of destroy human needs. Refuse to pay the 3% federal excise tax on your phone bills. This tax has been used symbolically as a war tax since World War I. Nonpayment does not result in a cut off of phone service. Though illegal, nonpayment of the tax is almost risk free. The thousands of people now refusing this tax have made it virtually uncollectible. Refuse to pay all or part of your income tax. This is also illegal, but thousands of Americans are openly participating in this protest. Contribute your required war taxes to an organization working to help people (e.g. day care centers, health clinics, food banks, housing programs) or to an alternative fund which gathers tax dollars from war tax resisters and allocates funding for human needs and peace organizations. Demonstrate and leaflet on April 15 at the IRS or a post office where returns are mailed at the latest time. Develop a community of support for those doing so considering war tax resistance. This movement is strengthened if people feel support from other people. Write your public servants and tell them to support the U.S. Peace Tax Fund bill in Congress (HR 107, 5089). Write or call for more information. War Resisters League, NY Lafayette St., New York, NY 10012 (212) 228-0450. Alternative Revenue Service, 339 Lafayette St., New York, NY 10012. ### Angry student voices opinion of senate vice-president

To The Editor:

I am a 52 year old student who has attended many student government meetings because I am very concerned about the way the administration is dealing with students and their suggestions for change.

I am not a member of student government and after last Saturday's March 20th meeting that Art Weston chaired, I can understand why a lot of students feel that Art is immature.

At Saturday's meeting, Weston, who was in charge of the meeting, named me Mr. Hyde when he could not get his way.

Art lost his composure, screaming and using profanity as his fellow students who were asking to choose a more suitable time where all senators could attend, instead of a time that he knew only half of the senators could attend.

Instead of calmly compromising on a time that would work for everyone, he insisted on Friday, and resorted to demeaning, juvenile behavior.

Lisa Smith, the student senate treasurer, actually had to walk across the room and ask numerous times for Art to stop his inappropriate behavior and gain his composure so that everyone could work together instead of against each other.

It took a while for Art to calm down, but he still lost credibility due to his unstable behavior.

Art Weston resorted to attacking the treasurer's character after the meeting adjourned. He did not even have the courtesy to speak with her beforehand to verify if things he had heard were true.

Instead, he chose to continue to promulgate rumors that had no backing or foundation in them.

The other senators were very upset with Art's behavior and how he was embarrassing action through the student government.

Art claims he represents student concerns, but instead is working for administrative concerns.

Art, you showed your true colors at last Saturday's meeting.

You need a few more years of experience in dealing with people as well as more maturity than you displayed to be able to properly function as a leader in any kind of capacity.

Pat Goodman

Weston explains recent senate actions on Saturday

To the editor:

This letter is in response to the Student Senate meeting on March 20, 1993.

Due to the president's absence, I chaired the meeting per procedure. Strong issues were brought up and voices heard.

After receiving a letter from Jeanne Paulsen, director of Student Activities, on March 11, I felt it imperative that the requests for our advice and administration must be addressed.

I proceeded to recommend the motion that meeting times should change back to Fridays at 1:30 p.m., so that our advice would be consistent, and the administration would validate our actions.

Senator Cheryl Branch motioned for the meetings to be changed to Fridays at 1:29 p.m., and the vote resulted in a tie. At that time, I broke the tie in favor of Friday meetings.

Hopefully this discussion will stand for what our actions are legitimate, allowing us to effectively serve the students at Harper.

I can't believe I bought the whole thing

Paul Froom
Horbinger Columnist

Advertising in America is aimed at the general public.

But is the general public as stupid as the super advertisers think?

From what I can see, yes. I recently had to get a TV for my computer as I was very online. I needed watching it randomly and have discovered that Rodney D. Young is an advertising genius. No lie! He did create all those things associated with bad advertising: bad acting, poor scripts, cheap props, and a childish logic. And although I usually am very long in the tooth, I can honestly say I love his commercials.

Because they don't stink my intelligence. The only thing I don't like is the lack of information, but the entertainment value can only be matched with The Rules.

However, too many times the real reason we discover for the sake of entertainment.

A chocolate milk commercial gives you seven reasons to drink it, the last one being "It's a great idea." Your friends like it and my personal favorite, "I'm not making this up—'he you really need a moment?"

Hope I'm a mindless fool who's easily entertained and would do any fool thing my intelligence was being misled. Speaking of which, there's a radio commercial which asks the listener if he's paying too much for car insurance, then tells the listener not to raise his hand, to keep it on the wheel and just listen.

Like I'm seriously going to pay my insurance payment with a company that assumes I never can say no to guys with physical gestures—while on the road! Hope they aren't giving their advertising efforts to the drivers who are in tune with REALITY? What kind of food risks his money with a company that assumes mindless buffoons will fall for drivers trying to make their own Whole Foods you say?

My vote for the King of the Cynical goes to be those 1-800-DEN-TAL commercials, in which a woman whines about her friends not having enough information about a great dentist. So she called the number and received the "real information" that she wanted—the kind of super secret, confidential info you can't get from friends or doctors themselves.

Like, let's face it, if he likes kids, can you make an appointment, how long has the dentist been a dentist, and my favorite, the dentist's marriage, with the dental board.

The dental board isn't allowed to release bad info unless the dentist says it's okay.

REALITY CHECK: THEATRE PRESENTS: Denture of a Madman. DENTAL BOARD: Dr. Boon, we tell everyone about you 30 years in San Quentin for accessory to the sex murder of an entire south-western coast congregation?" DR. BATES: "Well, um, I don't think so. People might think I'm a little bit... far from away. It's neither right nor matter. Okay mother... PSYCH!" But you can tell them I hold a master's degree.

DENTAL BOARD: "Very well then, Master Boon, we won't mention it." Here's the important part—they won't even mention it to 1-800-DEN-TAL.

Normally I'd say this number is a rip-off, but it's a free number that on NO WAY will be reflected in the dentist's bill although he has to pay an ENORMOUS amount of money for the 1-800 service.

Seek and Ye shall be rewarded. Remember, when you are being all paranoid at the question that—if you were a dog—would your tail be wagging?

If so, well they're done throwing the ball at you and answer this question: If you were dying, and you wanted to tell me—specifically because you were dying—what the dentist would you give an earthly person, or would you say something along the lines "Sweetie? Remember a satisfaction."

Sorry, but I would not be satisfied enough with that answer, and your death would be in vain.

Basically, it all comes down to what Billy Sasser dubbed "The Spoils." Come on with an entertaining thought, and we'll do whatever you want us to.

But most of the time, I think they're just "smoking" themselves.

Massage therapy rubs away pain caused by sports injuries

SANDY GALLWAY
Staff writer

Why does it seem in athletic activity you only lose your mind causing pain and frustration?

Whether you're a seasoned athlete or an occasional player, pain and frustration generally mean you've overused your muscles. The terms overuse mean too much too soon.

But excessive training isn't the only reason people suffer from overuse injuries.

Lack of prior conditioning, use of improper techniques or use of incorrect equipment are factors that may contribute to overuse of muscles and the pain associated with overuse.

But that pain is the one factor most people will ignore. Sometimes they'll even allow it to alter their lifestyle for years.

Pain, however slight, is a message. It comes from soft tissue damage or muscle spasm. Athletes tend to play through that pain, hoping it will get better on its own.

But when pain prevents you from being effective at your athletic activity or keeps you from pursuing activities you enjoy, it's time to face reality.

Just what can you do about it? Surgery, the most invasive treatment, has obvious disadvantages. Sometimes, but not always, it's the only alternative.

In some cases, physical therapy falls short, if the treatment stops at rehabilitation without diagnosing the reason for the injury and ways to avoid re-injury. If physical therapy doesn't include muscle therapy, the treatment may not bring the biggest benefit to the patient.

The most beneficial treatment option is individualized muscle therapy and exercise rehabilitation. It's a dynamic concept offered at some chiropractic offices and uses the expertise of a chiropractor and a certified sports massage and neuromuscular therapist. The goal in muscle therapy/exercise rehabilitation is to ensure the patient is educated not to repeat the actions that caused the injury.

Muscle therapy works. It's that simple. Many challenging the United States Olympic Speed Skating Team, use it to enhance performance.

"Sports massage techniques used during training and competition can increase joint range of motion and allow quicker recovery from intense training by decreasing excessive soreness," says Cheryl Timmer, a physical therapist and a member of the American College of Sports Medicine. "It gives the muscle greater ability to sustain a contraction," she notes.

Home here for the U.S. Olympic team is Timmer's practice at the Comprehensive Edge Sports Medicine Clinic. "The body position in speed skating requires the ability to sustain a contraction," Timmer says.

"Each skier receives individualized therapy, depending on their event

Some get half hour massages every day, and some may get an hour massaging them a week," Timmer notes. "This is injury preventive and performance enhancement therapy."

It's not only Olympic-caliber athletes who benefit from muscle therapy. Rick Katz, a M. Prospect tennis player who suffered through six months of pain in the lower leg and ankle from an injury sustained while playing, currently receives therapy. "There is hope," she says, summing up her experience with therapy.

Katz had given up playing tennis because of the pain. Receiving professional massage was a relief, she said at the Chiropractic Health and Fitness Center Inc.

Whichever the sought help given. She calls the therapy a "team effort" between Constance C. Hein, director of the center, the sports medicine and fitness center and her staff.

Sandra Tate, a golfer who lives in Rickford, lived for three years with chronic pain from elbow tendinitis before she was referred to the Chiropractic Health and Fitness Center last summer.

"At times the pain was so bad washing and drying my face was agony," Tate says. "I had been treated using immobilization, cortisone shots, Lidocaine with numbing and anti-inflammatory drugs. Nothing really changed," she recalls.

I went to Mayo Clinic, where they suggested surgery to move the ulnar nerve and rotator's muscle."

Tate describes her treatment as "a nontraditional alternative to surgery."

Her level of discomfort has decreased dramatically. She is able to play golf pain free. Tate is an enthusiastic weight training program and now says she has "hope of being pain free."

Katz and Tate are my patients. An experience similar to theirs started me on the road to becoming a sports massage therapist.

Running and weight training are my sports. An overuse injury from racing brought me to the Chiropractic Sports Medicine Clinic in Joliet. The therapy and rehabilitation I received allowed me to come back stronger as an athlete. The professionals there sparked my desire to be involved with that type of sports medicine.

But my experience, like those of other athletes who've benefited from this treatment, isn't a fluke, nor is sports massage therapy a fad.

Hein calls rehabilitation "the treatment specialty of the present and the priority specialty of the future."

"The sports massage therapist's education and experience provide the patient relief from the injury," Hein explains.

"Next, education in a rehabilitative exercise is selected to counter the patient's specific problem," teaches the patient how to properly strengthen muscle. This gives the patient maximum results in a minimum amount of time," Hein adds.

Application of muscle therapy covers a wide range of techniques. When working with a chronic injury, the therapist works on the exact tone to stretch or relax tissue to restore muscle or tendon function.

"The pressure exerted in the massage therapy positioned the exact spot where I felt pain while running," patient Laura Doherty of Chicago, says. "I could feel the pressure and pain release as the therapy continued."

Hein's problem was that flexibility had not been restored after surgery to her knee. Personally, Doherty had physical therapy but no specific muscle therapy.

In her exercise rehabilitation, Doherty, a marathon runner who competed in a Bud Lee Trailblazer, was taught the Active Motion stretching technique for hip and upper leg muscles.

Mattis is a nationally recognized registered kinesiotherapist and coach who specializes in rehabilitative training and exercise therapy.

Doherty says she's confident about retaining her training schedule. In time, she'll probably be joined by others who learn about this growing treatment.

Hein sees a strong future ahead for sports medicine/chiropractic centers as more athletes learn and experience the benefits of sports fitness and massage therapy.

"We stress a holistic approach."

"This is injury-preventive and performance-enhancement therapy," Timmer

We're seeing patient referrals increase since adding the fitness and massage therapy segments of treatment to our range of services," Hein says. "Professional and Olympic sports teams already embrace the concept. It's a matter of time before more athletes and athletes learn from the expert advice of the pros and let this treatment for their own performance," she adds.

"At times the pain was so bad washing and drying my face was agony," Tate says.

"Across the board, all professionals and athletes involved in this concept of combined treatment and exercise are vocal about its success and growth."

It could be that rehabilitative sports medicine is gaining support as a treatment because the professionals and the athletes are working as a team. That team attitude precludes passive treatment by the therapist. Rehabilitating athletes involves educating the athlete.

The whole reason present to teach the patient to be aware of any glitch in the mechanics of how his or her body works and respond to changes in the body. The reason for a mechanical breakdown could be as simple as improper shoe selection, incorrect placement of one foot in front of the other while running or something else.

Patients learn that body awareness is a key element in their health. Athletes must change their behavior to heed the messages the body sends. The pain message is loud and clear. Don't ignore it.

Katz sums up one lesson she's learned: "Don't wait until all else has failed. Get treatment immediately."

Editor's note: Sandy Gallaway is a sports massage and neuromuscular therapist who recently was graduated from Harper College with an A.A.S. degree in Cardiac Exercise Technology. She is certified by the International Academy of Neuromuscular Therapy.

Students climb high to find a cure for AIDS

Annex member team of Princeton University students will climb Mt. McKinley in June to raise a minimum of $250,000 for AIDS research and education and to call attention to the alarming statistics that AIDS has increased by 62% in two years among 13-24 year olds.

The students, headed by Climb For The Cure Founder and Director Alexander S. Friedman, will begin their historic climb in mid-June. The climb is expected to last approximately 30 days.

"Mt. McKinley is the tallest peak in North America, and climbing it symbolizes the challenge of conquering AIDS," explained Friedman.

"We are making this climb not only to raise funds for AIDS research and education, but also to let people our age know that AIDS is a serious problem. We want our peers to realize that there are many creative ways to help combat the problem. Climbing Mt. McKinley is just one of those ways."

Climb For The Cure has already raised more than $150,000.

Two major contributors are Time Warner, Inc. and The Equitable Foundation, who donated $25,000 each.

Dr. Mahabir K. Anand, Chairman of the Board, said, "The team will be guided by their climb by expert mountaineers and the universal and eternal spirit of youth. Their compassion and leadership are admirable."

Climb For The Cure was conceived and organized by Alexander Friedman. Its Board of Advisors includes Senator Bill Bradley, Princeton President Harold Shapiro, author John McPhee, country and western superstar Bonnie Raitt, and Stacy Alliston, the first American woman to climb Mt. Everest.

AnFAR is the American Foundation for AIDS research (both basic and clinical research) and is the national center for AIDS prevention and control.

Since 1983, AnFAR has provided over $50 million to more than 930 research teams.

AnFAR mobilizes the goodwill, energy and generosity of caring individuals to end the AIDS epidemic.

In addition to Time Warner, Inc. and The Equitable Foundation, other corporate sponsors for Climb For The Cure have been extensive, including major grants from Merrill Lynch, the New York City Law Firm of Debevoise and Plimpton, the firm of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette, Inc. and Amgen on Passage.

A national ad campaign has been created on a pro bono project by J. Walter Thompson, USA, and equipment sponsorship has been provided by The North Face. The team will be guided by their climb by expert mountaineers and the universal and eternal spirit of youth. Their compassion and leadership are

The Art Institute moves to the suburbs

The Museum Shop of The Art Institute of Chicago will open its third satellite shop at Woodfield Shopping Center in suburban Schaumburg on April 2, 1993. Foremost will be a wide range of education-related items from the main Museum Shop's extensive variety of quality merchandise.

The Art Institute is opening a third permanent satellite shop, the cost of which was financed through revenues from other retail operations, in response to the enthusiastic public reaction to the shops that have been in operation since August 1991 at the 900 N. Michigan ave. building, fifth floor, and at Oakbrook Center, new wing at Woodfield Shopping Center—the largest mall in the Chicago area and the fifth largest in the nation—the Art Institute will have the opportunity to introduce merchandise to a wider suburban audience. In addition, all satellite shops serve as educational centers, providing information concerning Art Institute educational programs and exhibitions, plus offering memberships.

The Woodfield Shop will offer items that are both unique and affordable, many adapted from actual works of art in the museum's permanent collection. These include Art Institute books, calendars, and novelties, as well as the Art Institute line of signature merchandise, jewelry, and T-shirts. Also available will be unusual decorative items for the home, exclusive scarves, a wide variety of jewelry, and toys for children, items for sale in The Museum Shop are carefully chosen for their educational or historical value and to set quality items in keeping with the collection of The Art Institute of Chicago.

Revenues made from the Institute's retail merchandising activities underwrite exhibitions and programs of the museum.

'Jack the Bear' is emotional outpour

Twentieth Century Fox Presents
"Jack the Bear," a Marshall Herskovitz Film starring Danny DeVito

There is an inheritance, a rough-and-tumble spirit to the Leary household which John Leary cultivates with undying enthusiasm. Since moving with twelve-year-old Jack and three-year-old Dylan from New York to Northern California, John has tried to make sure that laughter is never far away when the harshness of real life begins to pull at his two boys.

John Leary (Danny DeVito) might not fit anyone's description of the perfect single father; sometimes his son Jack (Robert J. Donnell) is a questioner who the father in the family is. But, when you come down to it, maybe you can't ask more of an dad than to love you and help you hold back the dark.

It is this fragile balance of humor and sadness which brought Dan McCall's movie to acclaim when it was published in 1974, to be subsequently reprinted in various languages.

To portray the many shades of John Leary, an actor of considerable range was essential. The role was pursued by some of the industry's most acclaimed actors, but Bruce Gilbert says that in Danny DeVito the filmmakers found both the light and dark required to make John whole.

"When you look at Danny's film, which ranges from things like 'The Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest' and 'Terms of Endearment' to 'Patriot' and 'Romancing the Stone,' you see that he's had a career that is extremely rich and varied. But until now he hadn't had a single role which combined all of the elements to which he has proven himself capable. I think 'Jack the Bear' is going to be a real break-through picture for him."

Cast in two young actors to play John's sons provide him with a real acting challenge. The role of Jack was key, as it is through his eyes that we view the story. Casting director Mary Goldberg embarked on talent search which ended up encompassing six months and the entire country before discovering thirteen-year-old Robert J. Donnell, Jr. The Chicago native had just made his film debut in the family comedy "Beverly Hills Cop."

And Bruce Gilbert agreed with Goldberg that Donnell—as he is known by his friends—captured just the right quality of innocence and solemnity which made Jack so rich.

Keep an eye out for this one. It proves to be strong enough to touch the toughest of hearts.

Filming in Africa, evening on Safari

Join the Brookfield Zoo for an exciting opportunity to "go on location" with Bill Kurtis in Africa. See footage of cheetahs, rhinos, and other fascinating African animals as Kurtis takes you on safari with his nationally televised program, The New Explorers.

Bill Kurtis is a television journalist who has worked for CBS News for over 20 years. He is currently anchor for Channel 2 News as well as host and creator of The New Explorers, a weekly PBS educational series which began its third season this March. The New Explorers, which won the Washington Science Award in its first season, highlights the efforts of scientists pursuing discovery around the world. The series is the core of a unique educational program for students across the United States.

While shooting footage for an upcoming episode, Kurtis and his New Explorers crew revealed to several African countries, including Zimbabwe, South Africa, and Namibia. One segment of the episode features cheetah researchers Laurie and Daniel Kraus, who spoke at Brookfield Zoo in December. Seating is limited and reservations are necessary. Members $6, Nonmembers $10. Decides $5. A reception follows the lecture. To order tickets or more information, please call 485-0283, ext. 355.

Spring fever running high for Harper athletes

Softball

Pushing, defense and hitting. These will be the struggles of the Harper softball team in 1993. These Hawks never look good on paper.

First-year Coach Jennifer Jensen inherits a softball team that should win some games. Jensen can claim three all-area high school pitchers.

Freshman, Karan White, made a name for herself as the ace of Elk Grove's staff. "She has speed and very good form," Jensen said. "Also, very good change up. It just drops all of a sudden."

Another freshman, Michelle Bart, Burlington, "Form wise, she's your best pitcher," Jensen said.

The Hawks still have another pitcher of note. Sophomore, Michelle Cohen, is Harper's No. 1 pitcher last year.

"Her speed is still there," Jensen observed.

White, Bart and Cohen are also expected to help on the field. White and Bart can catch. Cohen can play third, short and the outfield. Bart is a fast shortstop and possesses a strong bat.

"Bart should be one of our top hitters," Jensen said. "I know that when she went out and brought her own bat. She didn't take any of ours."

Starting, Duane Lumbardo, returns with her powerful throwing arm. The photo-capturing Lumbardo's throws are often to Sorfante's William (Buffalo Grove).

"She's been able to handle Duane's throws," Jensen said. "She's also a very good hitter."

Sophomore, Lauren Krutzing, should start the season at second base. "She was a second baseman in high school," Jensen said. "She's getting used to it all over again. She makes good contact at the plate."

Karen Oliver was Harper's MVP of the women's basketball team. She will run center field this spring. Chuchow, Maurs Arden, Edson Edson and Heather Anderson will battle for the other out field spots.

Men's Tennis Preview

Harper's tennis program has been on an upswing the last two seasons. The 1991 team was its best yet in months, but they should improve as the season progresses.

Coach Roger King has three choices to make regarding his No. 1 player Justin Eggstall as King's lone returning player from a year ago. Eggstall played No. 1 singles and earned a conference championship at that position in addition, Eggstall was one half of a doubles team that pulled an upset in the regionals.

Eggstall will get competition for the No. 1 spot from Eric Ford, who played at Buffalo Grove, and Dave Mouty, a former Prospect player. King is usually optimistic about his team's chances. "We probably won't be as with the elite," King said. "But I think we'll improve more than a lot of teams. By no means, will we win a conference championship, but we'll survive."

Ruby Burschbach, a sophomore who may take the fourth spot. Carl Mikhelen and Doug Wamsund should help.

Track

It's numbers game this year. There will be more than enough men to make a run at a region title this year. The women's track team is another story. Coach Rene Zellmer was content in almost no participation on the Hawks men's track team.

"We are so strong in so many areas," Zellmer said. "I think we will have some strong showings at the four year meets. If we click well together, we will win a region championship."

Harper minus school holder Chip Holman. This sophomore expects in the prelin. Bruce Marc Rider is a sophomore who will give Holman a challenge on his specialty.

The team has talent in hurdles

Philip Lewis, Ryan Tiffany and Brian Seminski. Names to watch in the middle distance are follow Alvarado, Ed Calverton, Steve Davis, "Fast" Freddie Little, Ralph Gardner and Mike Madara.

Brian Sweeney and Matt Walz, both from Hoffman Estates, lead the long distance runners. Scott McDonald and Mike McWhelan will also be long distance threats.

Real Whelan, Paul Melito, Elroy Hill, Mike Bonito and Sal Saccomano will work in the closer and then pass. Cory Daddio and Gary Zaccarillo are toward the team's sprinters. Cory Nagel and Dave Peterson are trying to be decathletes.

"We'd like to get our two mile relay to nationals," Zellmer said. "Maybe one of two hurdles."

With limited numbers, the women's team will concentrate on individual accomplishments. Sherry Holmes will try the heptathlon. Amy Morgan is a distance runner. Laurie Kishin is a quarter miler and Kim Stedman will begin as a thrower.

A step ahead by Jim Walaitis

At long last, the Spring sports season is finally underway at Harper. The basketball team began their season in mid-March, but don't have a game in the area until they play College of DuPage on April 5 in Glen Ellyn. The team doesn't have a home game until April 6 against Weber State at 2pm.

Harper's softball team began the season at home April 5 against Triton at 7pm. The next day they travel to College of DuPage for a 2pm start. Their next games are at home April 9pm vs. Weber State. They will also play Joliet the next day in a pair of home contests beginning at noon.

Tennis is also in full swing playing in Springfield April 2 and 3, then at College of DuPage April 5 and 6pm.

The track team waits the Harper/Whitman Hammer Throw April 3 beginning at 9am, with the rest of the Whitman Open continuing at noon in Whitman. April 8 10 the team travels to Naperville for the Chicago Metro meet.

The intramural basketball play-offs began Thursday, April 8 at 7pm. The first game was the '90 West Hawks (ranked #1) against The Big Dawgs (#8). At 8pm, an IM Team (#1) plays the Hawks (#6). The 9pm game finds The Bears (#2) against Court Justice (#7). In the final game of the evening, the Hawks (#8) meet the Lions (#10) at 9:30pm.

Winners of these games will play in the finals April 6.

Mixed Doubles 8 Ball Tournament

Ladies are encouraged to find a male friend so they may participate in a least of three game 8 ball tournaments on April 20. The tournament will start at 12:15pm on the basketball room on the second floor of Building 'A'. The game will be played with alternating shots between partners. Sign up will be on the spot and no teams will be entered after the tournament begins.

Outdoor Intramural Soccer

The IM Program is planning a co-ed soccer league for April and May. Tentatively the league is scheduled to play on the weekends with games played on Saturday and Sunday mornings starting at 10am. Full side or seven-sided teams are wanted for play. Anyone putting together a team should contact Kim Ryan, Coordinator of Intramurals at Ext. 2063.

Teams should be composed of equal numbers of men and women on the field at all times.

Record numbers attend NWTf convention and sports show

The call of the wild turkey attracted a record 18,000 outdoors enthusiasts to the 17th annual convention of the National Wild Turkey Federation, held February 18-21 in Louisville, Kentucky.

"They came to talk wild turkey hunting and to meet the top caliber in the country, and they weren't disappointed," said Bob Keck, executive vice president of the 72,000 member group, which is celebrating its 20th year as a conservation organization.

Repeat winner Dick Kirby of Orchard Park, New York, won the 1991 Grand National Wild Turkey Calling Championship, sponsored by Wild Turkey Bourbon. He also won in 1984.

The competition was witnessed by an audience of 2,000, and was covered by major television networks and national press, including The Wall Street Journal.

First runner-up Walter Parnot of Dow, Minn., won in a 3-year former champion. He won in 1987, 1989 and last year, in Indianapolis, Indiana. Second runner-up was Andrew Panik of Ludlow, Massachusetts.

The Junior Grand National Wild Turkey Calling Champion was Chris Watkins, 17, of Cranston, Arizona. He was first runner-up in 1992. The runner-up this year was Jason Corvill, 17, of Union, Missouri, and Ryan Griggs, 14, of St. Genevieve, Missouri.

Tucker Crisp of Natchez, Mississippi, calling with his natural voice, took first in both the one-hour and one-day events.

In the Grand National Wild Turkey Carving Sculpting competition,

Don Paacy of Norman, Indiana, took top honors. He won the "Judge's Choice" award, first in the "longhorn" category, and both first place and first runner-up in "longhorn waterfowl."

Taxidermist Jack Patton of New Knoxville, Ohio, won the "People's Choice" award, and Sam Lansing of Webster, New York, took first place in the "Dying" category for the second year.

Your source for the NCAA picks

Ian Frazier
Harbinger Sports Columnist

Editor's note: Due to some slight miscommunication, Ian's column was written before spring break, and may sound slightly outdated. Here's fun finding out just how wrong, we misperceive his predictions were... Hello girls and boys! Welcome to the second week of the NCAA basketball tournament. The first week was full of surprises, especially for you guys. I won't tell you games in the first round, I could have done a little bit better (I had a pick for emotional favorites. In the East, I picked thoroughbred Holy Cross to upset Arkansas, but only because I was home about ten minutes from their campus. Needless to say that wasn't a good choice to bet on).

In the Southeast I picked Memphis State, a tough bet, to knock off number 7, Western Kentucky. If you want my team with a player named Andrew Hartschewitz was good for a week or two.

I didn't do too bad in the Midwest, but the West killed me. With sports by George Washington, Southern University, and Santa Clara I lost the majority of games on the left coast. Arizona's loss to the fifteenth seed Santa Clara was only second time a number two seed has lost in the first round.

After a six-to-second round, I'm left with 10 teams in the Sweet Sixteen. I have two teams left in the East, North Carolina and Cincinnati. I'll pick them both to win their regional games and NC to advance to the Final Four.

In the Southeast, I have Kentucky, Wake Forest and Florida State University. Western Kentucky is the fourth team, making in with a win over South Hall. Take the Wildcats (Kentucky) and Seminoles (FSU) to win their games and claim for the Big Dance. Kentucky should prove too strong for FSU's Ward and Sims to beat. Rick Prime should make his reservations now.

I had picked Duke to advance from the Midwest, but they'll be watching the game from the corner bar. Look for Indiana to pummel Louisville and Kansas toouthend California. This will create the best match up of the season so far. Indiana should edge the Jayhawks for the third ticket to New Orleans.

Finally we reach the dreaded West. The only teams I have left here are Michigan and Vanderbilt. These two teams will meet in the regional, but it won't be close. I'm gonna guess it will be a blowout and say the Wolverines will eat the Commodores alive. Michigan by 15.

That leaves Kentucky facing Michigan and North Carolina meeting Indiana. These games are a little closer for me as well. But I'll try my way. Michigan should take a win over Kentucky, probably on a last second shot by Howe or Webster. The Hoosiers, I mean Hoosiers, will win the game in double overtime over the Tarheels. I've never liked the team from North Carolina, even when Micant Jordan played there. The Hoosiers will win the Championship, but only because the Wolverines don't have enough game experience. The only good thing about making these predictions now is that I won't have to shut about being wrong until after Spring Break!

You probably won't be reading this until after the break, so you'll have to wait when they dual inside these predictions. March 22 and not after the games were over. If none of my predictions come true, my secretary will disavow any knowledge of my activities.

5th Ward Hawks end intramural regular season as champions

As the regular season ends, the intramural basketball teams are getting in gear for the upcoming playoffs.

The 5th Ward Hawks made it through the season without tasting defeat and drew the number one seed for the league ending single elimination tournament. The first round of the tournament will be played April 15 and the final round April 15.

Here's what the intramural basketball league final standings are:

Skiteknets 67
Hit Squad 36

A first up Skiteknets team had it all their way against our game Hit Squad 67-36.

It was one of those nights when all players of the game come together that leads the opponents to wonder why they showed up for the month.

Scott Wray brought the total package to the dance, with 20 points from the floor and got some offensive help from his shooting David Haskins, Kenny Carrell, and Wayne Fawcett. The Hit Squad led the Hit Squad with 8 points each for the evening.

5th Ward Hawks 78 IM Team 56

The IM Team looked forward all week to their showdown with the Hawks but it turned out their worst nightmare.

Mustering only 17 points in the first half, the IM Team tried to get on much back too soon, with the alone point play and found themselves trailing the fast breaking Hawks all night. Larry Dennis, Dennis Harris and Dennis Harris all contributed a great deal to the Hawks totals throughout the game. Chris Moore scored 20 points for IM.

Untouchaballs 89 Prime time 49

In a game that left no doubt about the outcome from the start of the game the Untouchaballs scored a big 89-49 win over Prime time.

The Untouchaballs got double figures from everyone with Greg Kelley and Steve Scapiano leading the way on the offense.

INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL LEAGUE FINAL STANDINGS
Team name	WON	LOST
5th Ward Hawks	8-0
Bears	6-2
IM Team	5-3
Skiteknets	5-3
Untouchaballs	5-3
Hit Squad	3-5
Court Justice	2-6
Big Diggers	1-7
Prime Time	0-8

one end of the floor.

Court Justice 54 Big Diggers 50

Court Justice overcame a 27-23 lead by the Big Diggers and posted their second win of the season. The game was never out of either team's reach until the final minute of the game, but it was Chris Scapiano's foul shooting down the stretch that turned the tide in favor of the CJs. Key to the game for the winners was holding Larry Practewicz to only three second half points.

Here are the scores from the last night of action for the regular season: March 18

5th Ward Hawks 71 Bears 62

In a game loaded with talent and emotion the two teams battled to a slight 28-27 half time lead for the Hawks.

Playing for the first time without leading scorer Larry Dennis, Derrick Harris stepped up the pace causing a season high 25 points and got a big game from James Dunn in the second half with some timely 3 point shots. Chris Schuler again paced the Bears with 28 points scoring from all parts of the floor. Although the Bears lost for the second time of the year they earned the number two spot in the tournament.

Hit Squad 60 Court Justice 50

The Hit Squad got a league high 39 points from Dennis Bagpole, who nailed down the scoring title with 176 over the regular season play, to keep the pesky Prime Time at bay. Kevin Young unloading a great 26 point performance on their last game of the year.

Prime Time was only one down in the half and gave the floor a finishing IM Team all they're united into the last three minutes of the contest.

Skiteknets Untouchaballs 53

It was only fitting that the best game of the season was saved to the very last.

It was the only overtime game of the year that was tied at half time 21-21. The foul switched back and forth all night long. There were just too many horses to single out any one player on either team in this battle. Jeff Anderson picked off the Skiteknets with 22 points and Eric Scott hit three big buckets down the stretch. Greg Kelley matched 21 points for the U-balls. Both teams will meet in the first round of the tournament next week with promise of the game being every bit as good as this one.

Well, here we go again.

Yes, we were able to find something to disagree about this week, and our Harbinger did not quit. Our over-riding Managing Editor has fallen victim to the cold season.

So while the rest of us have this Tuesday morning, I sit at my terms and preparing to put a hell out of the Chicago White Sox and their fans. You see, our "One On One" columnist has been so successful in his argument of which team's fans (Cubs or Sox) are better, but as long as I'm only one article this week I should give you my side.

Quite simply, trying to decide which team plays better baseball would be a useless point. It would be like trying to decide which cancer victim is in more pain or which will last the longest. They will last the end, so what difference does it really make?

Anyway, the question of the week is this: Which Chicago Major League Baseball team has better fans? Read on and find out.

What makes a good sports fan? It could be the dedication to one's team.

Maybe it's the amount of time the fan has been following the club. Some even argue the percent age of games attended has something to do with the equation.

So, fans seem to think it's got something to do with the amount of money spent on gang colored clothing.

Some there have been lots of fans' showing up to watch Sox games the last couple of seasons. I figure it's because of the new stadium named "Comiskey Park" by the overly creative Sox executives (yes, where have I heard that name before?) My best guess would be that the fan had been too afraid before to travel to the deep, dark south side just to watch a team they knew wouldn't be playing past mid October any way. I can't really say I blame them.

Recently, of course, it's a different story. The Sox are playing some when new and fans are coming out in droves. I just don't have the heart to tell the Sox fans I know that the team

One On One

None Of These

Jim Williams
Sports Editor

will play in the same run-down, dirty, dangerous and deadly neighborhood just across the street. Then again, when it comes to White Sox fans, maybe it's time to turn the hard way.

Cub fans are just the opposite.

No matter how the team is doing, no matter how low in the standings their team's Cub fans attend the games.

That's why it's ALWAYS been and always will be. Being a self-proclaimed bleacher boy myself, I've got to say it's not whether you were here, it's how drunk you are at the end of the seventh inning stretch.

Sure, my last comment may not be any awards for creativity itself, but it's a simple Cub fan attend games because the team is fun to watch and Wrigley Field is a great place to spend an evening.

Enter any one of the other 27 Major League ballparks this season. If the teams are playing in an 8-20 slump, most fans are going to boo even the greatest slugger out of the ballpark. At Wrigley Field, the greatest convention made by the fans would be the round of applause the players get after breaking the slump. Over on the south side of town, the feeling in the air is just a little different. Sox fans have been discouraged by their team's inability to make the playoffs last five years when the fact of the matter is they've really been overachieving. Fans actually attending games and buying large amounts of merchandise (in gang colors) on the south side of Chicago, what a surprise! Has anyone else seen the conference to go to where it's really should be.

What must someone tell the fans where the stadium is and just what the team's true potential is, and attendance will probably go back down to the numbers the team has with games at the old Comiskey Park.

Cub fans attend games because we know the players on the field just their best foot forward. We go to games to enjoy ourselves, to let loose. You can enter Wrigley Field knowing that any worries you had, any problems that held you down, just go away. The great convention when you left the house means nothing, for a few hours at least.

Unofficial results indicate new look to senate

Early indications bring fresh faces and new enthusiasm to next year's student government

KENNETH DILLARD
Editor-in-Chief

Student elections were held April 6 and 7 with early results indicating Bonnie Jones, Cheryl Brandt, Kim Hanson and Gerrick Yorgil winning positions on next year's senate.

All four candidates ran unopposed for their respective positions.

Jones steps into the president's position. Brandt into the vice president's position. Hanson and Yorgil will become senators from the Student Development and Liberal Arts divisions respectively.

Voting was not as clear cut on the student trustee side as no clear cut winner has emerged from early results. Art Weisen, Chris Lopez, Mary Ann Crouby Anderson and Alfred Norwa are all vying for the position.

Other open senate positions have yet to be determined, but will be decided once the new senate is implemented.

Turnout has already surpassed last fall's election totals. Votes have yet to be completely counted, but early indications show a total vote count of 68 in the 'P' building ballot box, only 16 fewer than the complete total from the last election.

Official results will be available

April 10

The nominees are meant to put the results of the previous senate behind them.

"I want to promote a positive image to the student body to increase their awareness of us," Yorgil said.

"We would like to really push student involvement as much as possible," Hanson said. "It was practically non-existent last year."

Positive thinking carried over into the administration.

Jeanne Parkston, student activities director, said "These new senators seem really hard-working and competent."

"I am really excited about the upcoming year."

The previous senate completed a year filled with controversy and strife. Constant bickering and reversals of decisions left most students unconcerned and non-caring about the issues that were brought before the senate.

Campaign presented the biggest hurdle for candidates.

Many, among them Jones, Weisen and Anderson, all had repeat incidents of campaign literature being torn down in all areas of the school.

Nominees for senate positions had to declare their candidacy in writing to the student activities department. Student trustee candidates had to follow a standard procedure outlined by the Election Committee before they were allowed to run. Certain procedures included getting a petition with, according to the rules, "50 Harper students' signatures with social security numbers" in addition to declaring their candidacy.

Trustee candidates also had to meet a qualifications criteria that included enrollment of a minimum of nine credit hours during both semesters of their term in the senate, residence within District 512 and could not have previously served as Student Trustee.

Vote tabulation is being overseen by the Election Committee.

Jones, Brandt and Weisen were unavailable for comment.

Journalism students earn honors for essay

Wade wins first in local competition

Janet Wade, Buffalo Grove, a student in the journalism program won first prize in the local judging of the annual Illinois Community College Teachers Association Essay contest.

Essay contestants must attend a community college and describe in 500 words or less "How My Community College is Changing (or Has Changed) My Life."

Wade will receive a $100 gift certificate from the Harper College Book store.

She describes herself as a "middle-aged mother of three, who has discovered her creative side."

In answer to the essay question, Wade replies, "Community college has taught me that love of learning can and should go on."

Second prize in the essay contest, a $50 Harper Bookstore gift certificate, was awarded to Sharon Skane, Des Plaines, who titled her essay, "Pilgrimage."

She wrote that the challenge and encouragement of Harper's down-to-earth teachers helped to instill knowledge in her and she now finds learning "thrilling."

The Harper essay winners will receive their gift certificates at a special luncheon for all participants hosted by President Paul Thompson.

Janet Wade's essay has been submitted to the ICCA Public Relations Committee, who will choose the winning essay on the basis of writing style, grammar and punctuation, clarity of expression and relevancy to the topic.

The winner of the state competition will receive a $500 cash reward for educational expenses.

Journalism students Nancy Barry, Palatine, and Joanne Curran, of Port Orange, Florida, were accepted as contributors to the 93-94 Harper Anthology, a collection of student writings to celebrate the academic writing of Harper students.

Barry, a student in Rita Dawson's Fundamentals of Journalism class, submitted a news article "Downstream in Redevelopment in Palatine" and Curran, a member of Dawson's Feature Writing class, submitted "Profile of Hunter, the Top Police Dog in Florida."

Curran's article was recently sold to Police Journal Magazine.

Harper Engineering scholarship Opportunities for 1993 High School graduates

Most high school graduates planning to enter college have two short-term goals—selecting the right college and putting together the money to meet tuition costs. While Northwest suburban students find that some financial aid programs are decreasing, they are also being offered new opportunities to obtain substantial scholarships.

The Northern Corporation Defense Systems Division continues to offer a 2+1 Engineering Scholarship to provide financial assistance to a student for the first three years of engineering study. The scholarship carries a $1,000 per year stipend at Harper College for two years of engineering preparation and $6,000 for junior year expenses at the University of Illinois College of Engineering.

To be eligible for the Northern Corporation 2+1 Engineering Scholarship, applicants must be 1993 graduates of a high school in the Harper district; must be in the upper 25 percent of their graduating class with at least a "B" average in pre-engineering course of study; demonstrate interest and achievement in some area of humanities and willingness to participate in business and technical internships; must plan to enter Harper College as a full-time student in the engineering transfer program, and have plans to complete study at the University of Illinois to earn a bachelor's degree in engineering. Financial need is not a criterion for the award.

The Square D Foundation will offer several awards that year in an attempt to reach more students, each in the amount of $500 or $1,000 applicable to the first year at Harper. A renewal is not automatic for the second year but a good student will reapply and will most likely receive the award again.

To be eligible for the Square D Foundation Engineering Scholarships, applicants must be 1993 graduates of high school in the Harper district; a current Harper student with plans to enter Harper College as a full-time student in the engineering transfer program; and must be in the upper 25 percent of their graduating class with at least a "B" average; a Harper applicant must have completed 12 hours of engineering curriculum and MTH 200 with at least a "B" average. Harper engineering students with outstanding records may receive a stipend applicable for one semester as a transfer student. A demonstrated interest and achievement in engineering, writing or other extracurricular activity is considered favorably.

Inventive high school seniors can get applications and further information from their high school counseling offices. April 19, 1993 is the deadline for submitting applications, a one-page statement describing their career and educational goals, and a copy of their high school transcript.

Harper students applying for the Square D scholarship can get applications and further information from the Office of Financial Aid.

April 19 is also the deadline to return the application and a two-page personal statement describing their career and educational goals.

Edgar announces corporate-government internship Program

Gov. Jim Edgar today announced that applications are available for a corporate-government internship program in state government to be completed by June 1.

Edgar said this is the third year that IBM Corp. and Illinois Bell will sponsor the privately funded internship. Graduating seniors will be selected for the positions and will begin their one-year internships July 1.

"We are pleased to continue our partnership with business leaders at IBM and Illinois Bell in this innovative program to attract capable people to government," Edgar said.

"Government has much to offer young professionals who want to make a difference. State government needs to be looking for ways to attract a strong workforce that can be prepared to serve the state into the 21st century."

Edgar praised the foresight of the corporate officials from IBM and Illinois Bell in providing the support for the governmental internships. The two corporations will bear the full costs of salary and benefits for the interns. Recruitment materials for the internship program have been distributed to Illinois colleges and universities. The deadline for applications is April 16.

Two persons will be selected, one for the IBM Information Technology Internship and the second for the Illinois Bell Communications Technology Internship. The positions pay $1,750 per month.

The internships are designed to draw talented young people into state service, introduce outstanding college graduates to the workings of state government and raise the overall quality of the public work force.

Applicants should be graduating seniors or persons who already have their bachelor's degree.

For additional information, contact Cheryl Maszka, Department of Central Management Services, 120 West Jefferson, Springfield, IL 62702-5013; phone (217) 785-6804.

Reminder

The withdrawal deadline for 16-week spring credit classes is April 17 by 12 p.m. Drop forms are available in the Registrar's Office, A213.

Student Activities Budget Committee

Students who are interested in being considered for the Student Activities Budget Committee should notify Jeanne Pankanian, Director of Student Activities, in writing immediately. This committee will work on the 1993-94 budget. The work will be interesting, and it may be helpful on students' resumes. This budget work will be done over the course of several meetings, most of which will be held in April.

Republicans delay plan

It's time, once again, to turn our attention to the government and the big game it has started to play with the public.

Currently in the Senate, President Clinton's 16.3 billion proposal to stimulate the economy awaits to be voted on. It waits and waits and waits.

The plan waits thanks to a nice idea called filibustering. Filibustering allows members of Congress to make "prolonged speech for the purpose of delaying legislative action." In most cases, it is used for good causes.

But the minority Republican party in the Senate has decided to turn filibustering into a tool that further angers the electorate.

They (Republicans) state that they are concerned that the plan will further escalate the national debt, and they are correct.

Clinton's plan does raise the deficit, but only in the short term. At the same time though, it holds the possibility of creating approximately 200,000 new jobs. Is the price too much to ask for the privilege? No.

In Japan, where the unemployment rate is 2%, they recently spent upwards of $90 billion to "jump-start" their economy. They are going to continue by proposing approximately $100 billion this year.

But the Republican minority, knowing that the unemployment rate is still over 7%, wants to delay action on the bill, claiming that they want more tax cuts.

This is the most pitiful excuse for filibustering the Senate has ever devised. Minority Leader Robert Dole, in his efforts to compromise, has proposed to extend unemployment rates by close to $4 billion.

What a warped sense of logic. We can't afford $16 billion to put people to work, but we can afford $4 billion to keep them reliant on the government.

It seems like some sort of Republican conspiracy. They keep those that need a job dependant on the government, raise the deficit even further with no plan for reduction, and blame it on the "tax-and-spend" Democrats. Now who is more typical?

President Clinton has blasted the Republicans for holding up the bill. He has referred to it as "pure politics." He couldn't be more right. It's typical greed and power trying to undermine a good and simple plan.

Some proposals for Clinton

Paul Gaudin
Harbinger Columnist

With Bill Clinton as President, many people are hopeful of positive changes in our government's stand on environmental issues.

This optimism received a kick in the teeth recently when Clinton announced that he was dropping any reform proposals concerning the mining, livestock, and timber industries from his budget. U.S. taxpayers (you and me) pay for these industries to exploit our public lands. There is still a law on the books from 1872 that allows mining companies to take claim to public land if they find anything they want in it.

The most ridiculous part is that they get to pay 1872 prices for the land they destroy!

All these industries are strongly supported in Washington D.C. while our natural resource agencies lose money by the millions!

The time has come to demand President Clinton and our public servants take the urgent need for environmental reforms in public policy! Greenpeace, the international environmental activist organization, has laid out it's agenda for this year of important political change.

They cover several different areas, all of which are vital to the future of our home (earth) and ourselves.

PEACE: Abolish nuclear, chemical and biological weapons, control proliferation of weapons of mass destruction; end trade and use of plutonium; end our dependence on the use of military force for conflict resolution; and ensure the safe containment of radioactive waste.

BIO-DIVERSITY: The National Forest Management Act and the Endangered Species Act (ESA) should be strengthened to consider ecosystems as well as species. Increased funding for the ESA to at least $100 million by 1996 is needed to ensure timely review of all candidate species and promote protection for those listed. The Global Convention of Biological Diversity (CBD) must be ratified.

FORESTS: Protect all remaining primary forests from logging; support only sustainable forestry projects at home and abroad; and redress Federal Forest Service timber and road construction subsidies to forest restoration and to social needs of timber communities.

OZONE: Immediately ban production of ozone-depleting chemicals (ODCs) and use of environmentally sound alternatives for vital refrigeration, cooling and fumigation needs. Ban incineration as a method of ODC disposal, and enforce stronger regulations to ensure ODCs are recycled, not vented.

PAPER: Chlorine use in the pulp and paper industry should be phased out within five years. Recycled fiber content of paper should be maximized, and toxic acids should be phased out in the printing industry.

WASTE: Ban all incineration of waste; phase out the use of the worst toxic chemicals; and ban the export of toxic waste.

PESTICIDES: End the double standard that permits U.S. companies to export pesticides banned in the U.S.

Exporting banned pesticides, known as the "Toxic Tail Pipe," exposes workers and the public both here and abroad to dangerous pesticides during production, use, and consumption of residues on treated foods. Velocet Chemical Corporation, based in Tennessee, is the world's sole producer of the banned and highly toxic neurotoxic chlordane and heptachlor epoxide that are made almost exclusively for export.

CLIMATE: Commit to a 50% reduction in greenhouse gas emissions by the year 2000.

ENERGY: All federal support for the fossil fuel and nuclear power industries should be withdrawn and reallocated to help ease our economy onto a clean, energy-efficient future. Clinton should effect the fastest possible phase-out of the 119 existing U.S. nuclear power plants to avoid further financial handouts, the creation of more radioactive waste and to prevent any Chernobyl in this country.

OCEANS: Promote and implement ecologically based fisheries management in support of healthy oceans, endorse the Antarctic Whale Sanctuary and the moratorium on commercial whaling within the International Whaling Commission, and seek to impose strict controls on international fisheries to ensure that their operations will not adversely impact ocean ecosystems.

So, while this information is still fresh in your head, drop a note to President Clinton and your legislators, asking them to support these steps to a better environment, a better economy, a better society and a better world!

The long-awaited return of Spinal Tap...on video

(Chicago, IL) MPI Home Video and Tall Pony Productions proudly present the release of the long anticipated sequel The Return of Spinal Tap. An outrageous mix of music and hilarity, this feature-length rock documentary combines detailed profiles of the band with live footage from Spinal Tap's recent concert at London's Royal Albert Hall.

Original band members David St. Hubbins (lead vocals), Nigel Tufnel (lead guitar), and Derek Smalls (bass) fill you in on what they've been up to since the 1966 cult film This is Spinal Tap and reflect on their humble origins on locations in England.

The past ten years of isolation have allowed the band to explore their personal interests. Nigel organized a non-profit charity TPA Travel for Animals, to help animals obtain passports for exotic vacations.

David St. Hubbins, on the other hand, has been hiding out in Pomona, CA, teaching soccer to youths and managing some local bands. Back in England, Derek Smalls helped his father service his expanding phone sanitizing business and went on tour with a Christian rock band called "Lamb's Blood."

Live musical performances at London's Royal Albert Hall include new and old favorites like Majesty of Rock, Big Bottom, Hill Ride and Sex Farm. Spinal Tap is also joined on stage and behind the scenes with a host of celebrity fans, musical artists and longtime Tap buddies, including Mar tin Short, Kenny Rogers, Mel Tormé, Jeff Beck, Mari Delberg, and Arnie Fulkin.

"To celebrate the year before our 20th anniversary, we wanted to give our fans a gift," said David St. Hubbins, "it's a gift they have to pay for, but we wanted to give it to them anyway."

This film was produced by Anthony Elton and co-produced by Lauren Harris. Martin Sternberg is the Executive Producer. The Return of Spinal Tap was written by and features Christopher Guest, Michael McKean and Harry Shearer. This program has not been rated by the MPAA and has a running time of approximately 110 minutes.

Dolls help artist to realize full potential

Aria Chelms
Harpur Staff Writer

Josephine, Katrina, Kats, Thorne Laines, Desire and Margarette. Their names are known to collectors and artists in the doll world as the 1993 collection of elegant ladies from acclaimed doll artist Monica Meckling, known professionally as Monika.

Meckling spoke about her hobbies and other doll industry during Women's History Week last month.

She was not an avid doll collector. "I really wasn't into dolls anyone that what other kids were at my age," Meckling said. "I had a few favorite dolls. My only doll-related activity was I used to knit. I took patterns and adjusted them to what I wanted. I added little aprons collars or things like that to my sisters' dolls when I was in grade school."

After high school, Meckling enrolled in classes in oil painting, water colors and figure drawing at Harper College.

She met her husband, Bob, a graphic artist, in one of her drawing classes.

She derived pleasure from figure drawing but felt limited by the medium.

"I was very frustrated by my art and my desire to do art," Meckling said. "At the time she was, 'All my talents lay in here, the half I've already discovered and the half I can't find.' Today she adds, 'What I didn't realize was I was looking at the wrong direction. I should have been going three dimensions instead of two-dimensional. All of my classes were two-dimensional — working flat on the canvas — dolls and sculpting are three-dimensional. Initially, Meckling didn't intend to be a doll artist.

"I made a doll for my daughter Sarah when she was about a year old," Meckling said. "I didn't like it. I made a second one. A friend saw it, wanted to buy it and asked if I could make seven more for Christmas. My parents loved the money so I said 'Fine.'"

Meckling started selling dolls in craft shows. Her first dolls were rustic and lace rag dolls with pretty cheeks. Over the years the dolls evolved into 20-inch elaborate ladies with hand-painted faces, elaborate costumes, wigs and shoes.

Nine years later, after winning a national competition in the rag doll category, Meckling decided she needed a change.

"I was very depressed coming home," Meckling said. "I told Bob I can't go on doing what I'm doing. I'm not fulfilling. Whatever it is in my mind that needs to come out just isn't happening anymore. This was becoming more work and I wanted to create."

For ten days, Meckling spent day and night painting and sculpting to Phantoms of the Opera while she tried to see if she could sculpt with clay.

"I never read clay before because I thought it was too messy," Meckling said. "Now I realized it was in my hands and by shaping the clay I could get the position, movements and dancing feelings out of me." This way was able to make my dolls dance more

"She has black hair, round cheeks, big eyes and looks almost oriental. When I finished the original sculpture I must have returned it all because Bob said, 'Oh my god that looks like your sister Roberta.'"

Meckling loves creating dolls from different periods. The Regency period is one of her favorites.

"The Regency period is in the early 1800s," Meckling said. "It's very minimal in terms of ornamentation. They're very vertical costumes with empire waists, low necklines and sheer fabrics. Laides were light pink, cream, for modesty."

Meckling said the gowns were so sheer it was a very simple but elegant period.

Desire, Napoleon's confidante, is from this period. "The fabric is what inspired me to do the doll," Meckling said. "It's an incredible fabric, hand loomed in India."

"My costumes are more or less historically based. I do take artistic license if I feel it benefits the doll and to subtract something that will detract from the doll."

Each doll is unique, Meckling said. "Each lady has within her a story. You become the storyteller as you view her."

She said she does not create dolls for subscribers because like Adams, Drake, Lennon Chou or Franklin Mint because "when a person invests in a doll like that $15,000 to $16,000 they don't want to see a doll like that for $29 in a magazine."

The doll industry is changing. "It's becoming a respected art market," Meckling said. "Ten years ago, dolls were still pretty much considered play things. Cute little girls and baby dolls were the main types being produced."

Her dolls' femininity, style, class and elegance earned her the Dolls Award of Excellence (Dolls Magazine) for January 1992 and the International Doll Exposition Award for Josephine, Desire and Josephine are nominated for this year's Dolls Award of Excellence.

Meckling is the featured doll artist in the June issue of Contemporary Dolls Magazine. Katrina, a prima ballerina from the Ballet Russe, will be on the cover.

After Meckling's son Jesse graduated from high school, he asked how she was doing. She said, "I have reached for a new for a lot of years and I've finally grabbed hold of it. Now it's pretty easy to think how long I'm going to hold on. If I'm going so full, how will I fall and how will I land when I do. It's all the things you think about when success comes to you."

Food Matters

After the arrival of spring with a weekend family dinner! Asparagus, rhubarb and spring lamb is a seasonal feast. The arrival of this welcomed season. Grapes ripen late in September between March and October and in under six months old. It is lighter in color with a more tender texture. Lamb older than one year is mutton.

Butterflied Leg of Lamb is one of the most scrumptious ways to prepare this meat. When cooked with the crusty topping it becomes succulent and the flavor is mouth watering. White beans and steamed asparagus offer nice accompaniments to the lamb. Try a Rhubarb-Apple Crisp to complete this meal.

Butterflied Leg of Lamb

- 1 whole, boneless, butterflied leg of lamb, well trimmed, about 6 pounds
- 2 tsp. olive oil
- 4 large garlic cloves, minced
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- fresh pepper to taste
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1 tsp. oregano
- 4 tsp. fresh lemon juice

- Topping:
  - 1 tsp. margarine
  - 1 tsp. olive oil
  - 1 large onion, minced
  - 3-4 cups fresh bread crumbs
  - 1/2 cup minced parsley
  - 1/2 cup ground Parmesan cheese
  - 1/4 cup rock, any kind
  - 1 egg

Preheat oven to 450 F. Place lamb on shallow roasting pan (spray open like a thick steak). Sprinkle both sides with olive oil. In a small bowl, combine the garlic, salt, pepper, oregano, and lemon juice. Rub this mixture over both sides of the meat. Place in oven for 20 minutes. Reduce heat to 325 degrees, and continue roasting for 30 minutes. Prepare the topping while the lamb roasts. Heat margarine and oil in a large skillet. Add the onion and sauté until softened. Remove to a large bowl. Add the bread crumbs, parsley and Parmesan. Mix well. Stir in the egg and sack. Remove the lamb from the oven and spread topping over the surface of the meat. Return to the oven and continue roasting for about 15 minutes until topping is lightly browned but still soft. Serves 6-8.

Rhubarb-Apple Crisp

Cherry crisp, firm, slender stalks of rhubarb no more than one inch thick. Before cooking clean and cut off the leaves and about one inch of the base.

- Filling:
  - 2 cups sliced cored and peeled apples
  - 1 cup sugar
  - 3 tbsp. flour
  - 1/2 tsp. cinnamon

- Topping:
  - 1-1/2 cups quick cooking oatmeal
  - 1/4 cup chopped walnuts
  - 1 cup finely packed light brown sugar
  - 1 cup flour
  - 1 stick margarine (1/2 cup cut into 1 inch pieces)

Preheat oven to 375 F. Create a 10 inch square baking dish. Combine filling ingredients in a large bowl and mix well. Spoon evenly into the dish. Combined topping ingredients in another bowl. Mix until crumbly. Sprinkle mixture over the rhubarb mixture. Bake until top is slightly browned, about 40 minutes. Serves 6.

Trackers begin season strong at Wheaton invitational

Steve Doran

Joe Williams
Sports Editor

In very frigid temperatures on April 5, the Harper track team finished well for themselves at the Wheaton Invitational, the second overall and first team competition of the season.

The men, strong on depth, were able to capture sixth place from a 20 team field while the women finished seventh of 19.

The men finished with 51.5 points behind only four year schools Marquette (190), North Central (92), Lewis (76), Carroll (53), and Loyola (49).

The one first place finish for the men from Harper came from Chip Holdman in the javelin with a 170'11" throw.

Third place honors went to Phillip Lewis at the 110 high hurdles (15.7, personal record) and Holdman again in the discus (118'). The 1600 relay team of Edwin Alvarez, Carry Levy, Steve Dancu, and Ralph Gaudier (3:29.1, PR) took fourth place. Brian Sweeney was a fifth place finisher in the 10K race (37:00, PR) while Elroy Hill on foot put (40:27) and Corey Nagel (1:57.8) in pole vault also finished fifth.

Many of the men also came home with new personal records in the meet, including Dave Murphy (19'17), Ryan Tiffany (19'8"), and Phil Lewis (20'4") in long jump, Alvarez (23'4") in the 200 meter, Dan Garcia (53.1) and Dave Peterson (56.7) in the 400, Nagel (4:45) in the 1500, Mike Madson (19:10) in the 5000, Mike Madson (38:50) in the 10K, and Scott MacDonell (10:47) and Matt Walt (12:06) in the 5K.

Laura Kuhn

coach.

The women's team, consisting of only four members, made sixth place in the 19 team field.

Amy Morgan finished third in the 10000 meter (44:01) for a new school record, while Sherry Holmes finished third in the javelin (104'8") and fourth in discus (114'9").

According to head coach Rene Zellmer, the fact that only four women can finish sixth in a 19 team invitational "proves we're on our way."

Summertime sports camps offered to kids

The Harper College 1993 Summer Sports Camps offer area boys and girls, grades 4-9 an opportunity to learn and practice several popular team games.

Boys' baseball, girls' volleyball, boys' and girls' basketball, boys' soccer and soccer camps will run in two week sessions June 21-August 13, at a cost of $40.

Most of the camps are offered in a 3 hour morning session, 9 a.m. to noon and an afternoon session, 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Tennis will be offered June 21-July 22, in 1/2 hour sessions for $30.

There are also camps offered for one week. Girl's soccer camp, grades 6-10, runs July 19-22, and costs $35. Football is a full week, 40-day program, July 26-30, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., at a cost of $125.

Two basketball specialty camps are new this year. "Big Man Camp," July 5-15, is designed to improve the camper's speed and perimeter skills. Individual attention will be given to ball handling, rebounding, and shooting. Offensive and defensive drills will help a camper develop skills. "Oval's Camp," July 19-29, is designed to improve the camper's shooting skills. Form, technique, drill work and the mental approach will be emphasized.

Several of the sessions will be held in area schools. For additional information about the camps, call Jim Bluskey, ext. 2466, or a camper.

Hawks look strong but lose in return to area after weather shortened Spring tour

A lack of hitting has the Hawk baseball team happy to be back in familiar territory. The team finally made their way back to the northern portion of Illinois April 6 and lost a hard-fought doubleheader at College of DuPage 3-1, 1-0 in Glen Ellyn.

After opening the season on their "Spring Break '93" tour, the Hawks (2-5-13) just couldn't get the bats moving quick enough to overpower DuPage (6-6) in either game. Head Coach Norm Garrett said afterwards, the team wasn't aggressive enough at the plate, creating the only problem. "We just couldn't score."

A very lackluster first game saw the Hawks cling on early, trailing 1-0 after five innings, but losing 3-1 in the end. The second game was the true heartbreaker of the two, being decided by chance. The scoring came in the second inning when after a walk, two bloop singles for COD chased in the winning and only run.

Dave Hawkins, left-handed pitcher for the Hawks said the team has "great defense and great hitting," but a lack of hitting has slowed the team down considerably. The team had not scored in 25 innings as of the end of the doubleheader.

Hawkins said that even with hitting problems the team is experimenting, this year's club early outings last year's.

"We didn't take it seriously" the sophomore said. The Hawks of the past had played through the venerable games and focused on the impossible, like beating schools ranked trip in the country according to Harbinger.

He's seen this year's team as being "on the right track," stressing that the team needs to utilize speed, their number one quality.

Garrett stressed the team was going against one of the best teams in the country, and playing the way they did was something to be proud of. "We're a good team that could be a great team."

Outfielder Jim Schaefer (top) takes time to "smile pretty" for the Harbinger camera while the bullpen crew (below) enjoys the game.

Mark Ferre warms up before the game.

It sure feels great to be back on "One on One," but this time I have it all to myself. I made an editorial decision and decided to give Jim a break. After his column last week he sure does need one. Believe me mentally he needs the time out to regroup his thoughts. Especially about the current controversy here in the Harbinger Sports room.

The one thing that I seem to have trouble recalling is the topic that we chose for last week. I seem to have a different opinion than he did. (But we always have different opinions.) I guess that's what happens when the Managing Editor becomes ill; things are changed on you. Actually things like that happen even when you are here.

The following are our individual interpretations of last week's topic:

Jim's interpretation: Which Chicago Major League Baseball team has better fans?

My interpretation: Which Chicago Major League Baseball team will go further this season? I only have one thing to maybe two to say about last week's column. Jim did you ever think that there are now more fans of the White Sox than there were before only because they are a better team now than before? Huh? As a Sox grows and improves the fan number grows. As so proven by them.

Going on. How can the Cubs be considered as putting their best foot forward when they can't play under pressure?

Let's take a look at the Cubs vs. White Sox game in Las Vegas. Being ahead like they were (six points) made it look like the Cubs were going to win. Yeah they could have won but they didn't. No, they lost by only one point by the end of the game.

The Cubs put the pressure on, then the Sox returned it by coming up from being very far behind. The Cubs did not react to the pressure at all. When you're ahead take it and not don't just sit back and relax. If you do the game will pass you by and you won't even know what happened. Which obviously happened this game.

Whether it was an exhibition game or not, lately the Sox have had a better win-loss record against their

One On None

HEATHER CARROLL
Managing Editor

Chicago counterpart. The so-called Chicago Cubs. So against each other there is no comparison in my eyes. I guess we will just have to wait and see how the true White Sox vs. Cubs game goes. It's coming around the corner faster than you think and we know it's the Sox who will win it again.

Word just came in that the Sox have done it again. They defeated the Minnesota Twins 10-5. Oh yeah! Just one last thing is regarding to last week's "One on One." What's with Sox apparel and gangs?

It's not just the team logo that they buy. Yeah, sure, I know it's a main part of the reason for the gang relation, but if you look around they are mostly wearing black and white anyway. Sometimes a full red will be thrown in (or a sample of the Bulls). It just so happens that the colors fall into the wardrobe of gangs. And by the way, Jim, look around. Open their eyes. You don't just find White Sox apparel worn in Chicago, particularly South Chicago, just go anywhere and you'll find people wearing Sox apparel. Whether of gang relation or not. At least Sox apparel is worn.

When a gang would walk around in those bright and overbearing red, blue and white colors/Cub colors! Pull out the sunglasses! For one they would stand out. Just what they want to do. Second they'd probably get shot. For what reason? That's for you to decide.

Enough about the Sox vs. Cubs controversy, how 'bout those Nike or Reebok 'Varsity Vamps' just kiddin'. Personally car racing is a boring subject so I'll skip over to the next one.

The one thing that I would really like to know is who here at Harbinger truly believes that Mr. Walsh isn't really "Jimmy the Greek"? I sure don't. Both columns were written the same and at the old saying goes "If the shoe fits, wear it." But seriously speaking, who really believes him? I'd like to know.

Something caught me off guard today, but made Jim and I realize that we are read and liked. I went to the Harper vs. College of DuPage Baseball game today and was asked by a player about the "One on One" column. When we continued the conversation he mentioned that he enjoyed reading it and wanted to read the next one. Sorry that to Jim's credit I didn't state this week we had been "One on None." We will return about next week with a new topic to go on.

Student wins first place in ICCT's essay contest

How Community College has changed my life

Joan Watt

Allow me to introduce myself. You may not recognize me as a "word" at first glance. I am a middle-aged mother of three who did not have the opportunity to attend college when I graduated from high school 20 something years ago. I have been attending Harper College on a part-time basis for five years now and am pursuing a Liberal Arts degree with a major in English. My community college changed by life? Indeed! As a high school student, I received mostly B's and C's. All right, more C's than B's. As a college student, however, I maintain a 4.0 average and am a member of Phi Theta Kappa, the Honor Society for 2-year colleges as well as Harper's own Honor Society. With my self-esteem thus bolstered, I now have a goal of graduating Harper with a 4.0 average, and with hard work, and a little luck, I am confident that I will do it. This level of confidence is something that could not have been acquired through the many praise pieces alone. I give ample credit to my community college experience.

I have developed a true affection for the works of William Shakespeare, and consequently was delighted to brush with some professors of English prior to accompanying them to a production of Othello. I have profited from my creative side in a creative writing course and a "Women and Creativity" class taken here at Harper. I even realized I could wear the hat of a poet, a fiction writer, a playwright and a professional writer and love it! We must published poets, were wonderful theater productions at risk for American and British history that I would never have known existed within me, without the community college influence. I've listened to some wonderful guest lectures, engaged in some lively debates, and seen fascinating videos and documentaries while a student here at Harper College.

The knowledge I gained from an environmental science class is being put to practical use. I now recycle with a vengeance, and I will be helping to plan the "Earth Week 1993" activities at my children's school.

I look forward to completing my education here at Harper College, which will bring me even closer to earning my Bachelor of Arts degree. Community college has taught, and continues to teach, me many things, the most important of which is not any particular subject or theme, but that the love of learning can and should go on.

Harper president to head presidents' council

President Paul Thompson is the new president of the Illinois Community College Presidents' Council. Thompson, who has served as secretary, treasurer and president of the Council, replaces Black Hawk Community College President Herb Lynn. Current secretary treasurer Chuck Novak, president of Richland Community College, will assume the role of president elect and his current position will be filled at the Council's June meeting. The ICCPC includes all public community college presidents in Illinois. The group members 48 and is organized to enhance the community college system's efforts to promote teaching and learning. The presidents work closely with the Illinois Community College Board and the Illinois Community College Trustees Association by developing, recommending, evaluating and advocating policy. An important role of the presidents, and one that Harper College President Paul Thompson will focus on during his term, is to increase the Council's participation in the legislative process for the purpose of promoting legislation supporting the state's community college system. "Advocacy programs are extremely important and beneficial for individual colleges and for the community college system," comments Thompson, whose advocacy program recently was awarded the first Award of Excellence for Community College Advocacy by the Illinois Community College Board. Another important goal of the council is to promote unity and cooperation among the state's community colleges and their presidents and to provide members with personal and professional growth opportunities. Many community colleges in Illinois are like Harper College, celebrating 25 years of service. The knowledge gained over the years by community college presidents is valuable and the ICCPC, which meets about 10 times a year, provides a forum for sharing this wealth of knowledge and experience. The presidents would all agree that the Council reflects the philosophy of all community colleges: both are places where learning never ends.

Kevin O'Connor will speak at Harper community Day

"Men All You Did Like You Best: Dealing With Difference in Your Children" is the topic of professional E. O'Connor at the Harper College Community Day on Sunday, April 25, 1993.

O'Connor, a favorite speaker at a variety of Harper College functions, will focus on the self-interest of children during his presentation at 1 p.m. in Building A, Room 238. O'Connor holds a Master's Degree in Education and Counseling Psychology, and believes that children can find a place in our families and in our classrooms, and these "places" are all different. Wise and skilled parents can accommodate these differences while at the same time instilling a family that cooperates. Please join other parents and teachers at this informative and fun session devoted to keeping your sanity with your children.

Kevin O'Connor is the keynote speaker for Wellness Week at Harper, April 19-April 22. O'Connor's controversial but fast-paced seminar will be on Tuesday, April 20, from 7:30-9:30 a.m. in the Building A, Room 238. His topic is the film, "101 Dalmatians," will run continuously from 12 noon to 6 p.m. Open for use are the pool tables and game room. Wellness Week favors will be given. Kevin O'Connor, president "Men All ways Did Like You Best: Dealing With Difference In Your Children" at 3 p.m. in A-238. Over 30 exhibits by Clubs and Organizations will be on display, and the popular Start-Up, owned and operated by the Planetary Studies Foundation will run shows every 15 minutes from 11 a.m.-4 p.m. The folks from Imagination will bring face painting, a laser light show and laser maze. There will be a stargazer at 10 p.m. and Jesus the Clown will perform through out the afternoon. Classic Cars will be on display outside between Buildings F and I and raffle winners for two roundtrip tickets to London on American Airlines will be chosen at 4 p.m.

Many Polish-Americans is in charge of the wellness benefit drawing and is also secretary to the committee.

"This is a primary fund-raiser that will go on for all the programs," she said.

As secretary, Polinski believes in the wellness program thoroughly. "I think we offer fantastic seminars and programs to the public," she said.

"This is a terrific opportunity for people to learn information easily, and live a better life," she added.

Workshops will be held Monday (see Thursday) On Monday there will be a special presentation featuring Bonnie Zaunke in a workshop called "Single But Not Alone" from 7:00 to 8:30 p.m.

Custodian restores the meaning of goodness

I would not read it in a box, not under water, not with a box. I will not read it. Ken I am

It was late at night that March 26 and most people were already in bed sound asleep when Carlos Meza, Harper custodian, started his rounds in Building J. For all he knew it would be just another night. Pick up some crumpled papers, scrape gum off the desks and perform all the other custodial deeds. That was his way with it, until he entered room 152.

Upon entering the room, Carlos was right to "No work, never thinking twice that there might be something special about it. Yet there was.

A magnet, an aura if you will, was concentrated in and around the room, drawing Carlos, unknowingly, closer... closer.

What was it? The moment ticked on. What could it be? Second by second. Nearest he came. Minutes by minutes. He could touch it if only he knew it was there. And then it happened. It came without warning, without the slightest indication. In fact, it happened so fast, it was over in a flash.

There it was, just lying there, as it had been since its owner first placed it there, untouched until now.

Harper Happenings

Summer proves enriching for kids

Summer enrichment classes for students can be fun as well as informative. Through PEAK, Programs for Enrichment and Academic Knowledge, Harper College will offer 42 courses during July and August in drama, dance, computers, aerobics, astronomy, chess, fashion, art, design and many other fields as well. PEAK classes will meet for four weeks, July 5, 12, 19, and 26. PEAK Camps will meet for one week August 2-5.

The PEAK program is open to any students, 11 to 14 years old, from public or parochial schools. All courses will be at Harper's main campus, so students can have the experience of an actual college campus as they move between classes.

Harper utilizes the wealth and diversity of its facilities and instructors to enhance the program. According to Jim Fiske, coordinator of PEAK programs, "Our programs offer an exciting opportunity for students to explore areas of interest that may have some relevance to their future career choices."

Registration will continue through June 24, 1993. If you would like a copy of the Harper Summer Schedule which contains a full page of details or a copy of these have sent to you, please call Ext. 2901 or 2363. Tuition for each course is $33.50 plus a $14.50 fee. It is necessary for parents to provide transportation for students.

The bad boy of juggling: you were warned about him

Mark Nieve, the juggler your mother warned you about, will be appearing at Harper College in a special performance for the Silver Anniversary Community Day on Sunday, April 25 at 2 p.m. in Building J163.

Mark has opened for George Brown and Bob Hope and has appeared on Arsenio Hall and MTV. His combination of original satire, wit and comedy was his first place in the 1991 International Juggling Championships. He juggles a bowling ball, a lit propane tank and a running cordless electric carving knife.

In addition to the Mark Nieve appearance, there will be a number of other family events offered on community day. In Building A, The Planetary Studies Foundation's StarLab will be opened from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. - Peeks from Imaginarium will be doing face painting, putting on a laser light show and providing help of other activities.

Jana the Clown, will turn balloons into animals and there will be a Storyteller from 12:30-1:30. The PreSchool will be selling educational books and games from the Child Garden of Rocks and there will be more than thirty clubs and organizations providing information.

Tickets for the Mark Nieve performance are $2 for children under 12, $3 for Harper students, staff, faculty and senior citizens and $4 for the general public. Tickets are available at the Harper Box Office in Building J163, Palatine campus. The Box Office phone number is Ext. 2947.

Student rocks the vote in Northwest suburbs

Last November, millions of young Americans called for a change. So, they turned out in record numbers to make that change. In doing so, they elected President Bill Clinton.

The attitude for change may have been the most prominent in November, but for S. Frank Gargiulo, 21, Arlington Heights, it is a daily way of life. Gargiulo is the Social Ethics Commissioner for Arlington Heights' Mayor Caudillo Michael Schneider's campaign team.

Gargiulo, a Harper College student, has plans to pursue a law degree at DePaul University in the fall. He has dreams of being a U.S. Senator, but for now he is more concerned with getting the youth of the Northwest Suburbs involved in their community. "Youth is the backbone of tomorrow," said Gargiulo.

"People have a bias that they're helping and we're not, so they put gangs. Gangs with negative values. My goal is to get the high schools involved to form gangs with positive values."

Gargiulo has plans to construct a Youth Democratic Organization for two years. First, to get the youth involved in a positive activity and second, to create the negative stereotype that most politicians carry.

"They (youth) have a stereotype of politicians as the bad guys. I would like to exchange that perception." Adolescents need to get involved in politics at the urban level. Then their children will follow and get involved. Urban elections affect the Northwest Suburbs more than the presidential election.

"I want to make politics at the urban level fun again and hopefully I can make a difference."

Gargiulo is a firm believer in a philosophy of former President Woodrow Wilson: "Life does not consist in thinking, it consists in acting." So, stop thinking and start acting, says Gargiulo, and make your local municipal center to find out how you can get involved and don't forget to vote in your local elections on Tuesday, April 20.

Weston for student trustee

A tie in the senate trustee elections has produced a run-off between Art Weston and Alfred Norris.

Both candidates received 94 votes in the previous election. Both campaigned hard to convince students to vote for them. And both have had previous senate experience.

But one man has proven himself a qualified applicant for the position. Art Weston pulled himself above all of the campaign mess to run a dignified and organized campaign.

He, along with Bonnie Jones and Cheryl Brandt, got flyers printed listing his qualifications, and reasons to vote for him.

Weston's previous experience in the senate involves his year-long tenure as senate vice-president, as opposed to Norris, who was a senator.

What it really boils down to is who seems more likely to work for the student body to try and get things accomplished.

Weston has passed this test with ease. He has clearly stated, over and over, what he would like to attempt to do if he is elected. His main goal is to allow a conference before all board meetings to permit students to voice their opinions on legitimate concerns.

Norris has yet to make a statement on his positions, if he has any.

Weston has run his own campaign, not relying on outside help to get out the word. Norris did no such campaigning, instead relying on others to hand out flyers that also listed invalid candidates and empty promises.

For these reasons, The Harbinger fiercely endorses Art Weston for the position of student senate trustee. We feel that he is the best qualified and most capable candidate to help student interests in the upcoming year.

Pro-choice means just that

Condoning an option doesn't mean condoning abortion

ANNE KOWALSKI
A-6 11/20/93

Pro-choice means choice, not abortion.

Way back in November of 1989, I went to Washington, DC, to attend a pro-choice rally, which was a celebration of people who stood around and said "Yeah, this is cool!" I believe that! Earlier, in April of the same year, a lot of the same people demonstrated at the capital steps.

In the summer of 1991, Wichita, Kansas, a huge pro-life demonstration was held, in which women on their way to clinics were approached by people demanding their not so $120 bills back.

In the same year, during a protest, a pro-life activist kicked a pregnant abortion clinic staffer in the stomach, and a few days later she miscarried.

What is wrong with this picture?

I have given into several heated arguments with people who believe that abortion is wrong, and that the potential children have the right to life, the universe and everything.

At this point in time, it is the potential parent's decision whether or not they would be able to give that child a good life full of love. And what if that parent cannot make that promise? What if that parent cannot afford to raise the child as a good environment with food every day and a roof over their head? What if the parent cannot commit to nine months of their life to caring for a child who will have a life full of hate when they take their first few breaths of life?

What if that parent would abuse her body to harm the child who reminds her of the pain of the rape, the time of misbehavior in her life?

You, there is abortion. But, hey! wait a minute! Isn't that a CHOICE that the parent makes? Isn't that another option that the parent can decide for the good of her well being or a perspective parent who cannot have children?

Pro-choice does not mean pro-abortion. An abortion is a terrible experience for any woman who has gone over to prison and come of what she is able to face.

Unfortunately, many see abortion as birth control. That is just plain ignorant. These used contraceptive and probably some sort of venereal disease, but because they do not understand the importance of (safe) birth control. If that person cannot stick out three dollars for a package of condoms or ten to twenty dollars for birth control, how in the world can they afford $250 for an abortion?

Since 1977, 93 clinics have been the target of arson and bombing, 254 have received bomb threats, 276 have been vandalized, and 279 vandalized. And who's being violent? The ones who want to stop "murder."

Now, pro-life are carrying guns and are not afraid to use them. Take the doctor that was recently shot when he was walking to his car. Where's the logic?

I have talked to some people who have loving families of 14 and loving families of two. Both of these decided not to choose abortion when faced with the problem of a new being introduced into their lives.

I think most of our parents had to make that same decision when all of us were suddenly discovered on that "Oh day of our mother's joy." My belief is that what is supposed to happen will and no one has any control over it. There are all those who are destined to be great and those who will wake up late and miss their bus.

Why is it that everyone needs to get their hand in everyone else's business? Screaming "clint is going way too far!" Don't push YOUR beliefs on my life if you don't understand the situation. IF YOU DON'T WANT AN ABORTION, DON'T GET ONE.

It is a personal decision. If people want to walk around with signs in front of the local hospital, go for it. DO NOT approach me when I am living my life the way I feel it should be lived.

Please, remember, because I am pro-choice does not mean I am pro-abortion or "pro-murder" as some would say. I am making decisions to fit my needs. My decisions will not affect your life. The only time you should say anything is when a decision I make affects you.

Pro-choice means weighing the reasons, not being ignorant to all options.

New vice-president supports Weston in run-off election

To the Editor

The run-off election for student trustees, because of the tie, will be held on Wednesday, April 21, 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. in buildings A and J. Everyone should know that Art Weston would make the very best student trustee. He's very involved in school activities and Art always has time for any student interested in talking. He's a great organizer and has accomplished a lot this year, especially as vice-president of the Honors Society and vice-president of Student Senate.

Former student trustee candidates Mary Ann Crosby Anderson and Christopher are endorsing Art, along with the Honors Society.

Weston is destined for great things!

Technology harms planet

Book warns of environmental danger from progress

PAUL GUNDERSEN
Hortland, Co. Down

SCREEP SCREEP SCREEP SCREEP Your screeching alarm clock alarms you and nearly causes you to jump out of bed-your heart is racing, your palms are sweating and you have a ten pound weight in your stomach from being awakened so abruptly. Never mind that stress though-it's time to get ready for work-a full day of assembling gadgets at the Acme Gadget Factory-how exciting?!

You try to avoid thinking about the factory for a moment-back to a time when you were in high school-no worries, just school and good times with friends, then you graduated, and you and your friends decided whether to go to work or college. You decided to go to college. The gadget factory that you attended like a blowoff job, like so many of your classes in high school. You were hired for $5.50/hour with benefits consisting of a thirty minute lunch break. You decided to buy a car because it wasn't "cool" to take public transportation, then you decided to get married. You had a car, a home, and a girlfriend. You had health insurance, and you moved into your own apartment, which you stocked full of expensive furniture and your entertainment center (you dropped everything...etc.), which put you deep into debt. You were friendly, creative, and fun, and your friends and family and company managers who offered you no annual fee for this first year!

Now you're working overtime at your stimulating job while taking a class or two to improve your "industrial skills" at Acme.

You stop for a second to think "How did I get on this insane treadmill? Why am I always in a hurry? My life is so full of stuff, so why do I feel so empty?"

Well, these are questions that many people in our society are asking today. They are wondering why we are constantly trying to grow and move faster.

Why don't we slow down and enjoy life? These people are challenging the very belief systems that this country was founded on—Manifest Destiny—the idea that this continent and eventually the world, even the universe was meant to be explored, conquered and exploited solely for human consumption. Some people believe that there is something very wrong with this human race with growth and technology.

One of the persons questioning these attitudes is a man named Jerry Mander. He is former president of an advertising firm who got tired of peddling "consumables" and started his own public interest advertising firm working for causes he believed in. He also writes books, one of which is In the Absence of the Sacred: The Failure of Technology & the Survival of the Indian Nations.

This book contains two main sections. The first talks about the pervasiveness of technology in our lives. Technology has been forced on us without the important questions like "Will this technology be ultimately helpful or harmful to society?" being asked. The second speaks about how native people are affected by our technology and how they may hold some of the answers to societal problems in "developed" countries today.

"Techniques," our immersion in a way of life emphasizing technology over ship, economic expansion, and commodity accumulation has brought social disorder and global environmental devastation. The irony, Vander says, is that the primary human victims have been the native peoples of the planet. These are the very people who have always warned that our philosophy of life was doomed to failure; as it leaves out an understanding and respect for the sacredness of nature and the fit to human endeavor. Even today, in the rain forests of the world, on the mountains of the north, and in the American deserts, the Indians are still resisting the juggernaut, both physically and philosophically."

We are seeing the explosive growth of artificial environments like mega shopping malls and amusement parks. These places are attempting to replace nature but are only cheesy facades for consumerism in it's most seductive case.

The future technology part of Mander's book is the most incredible to conceive. He writes about biotechnology, genetic engineering, nanotechnology, and the postbiological age. Maybe some of these technologies will be helpful to humans, but they'll have to be pretty tricky to afford it! You can become perfect if you win the lottery! Is perfection what life is really about? Or is learning from your mistakes and coping with the diversity of others more meaningful?

With most of these new developments, Mander tends to explore the worst case scenario. This is because the purveyors of technology only show the best side of their wares. Scientists in the biotechnology field are developing "invincible" germs and other organisms. What happens if one of these deadly beings gets loose? How many human casualties will have to die?

The most frightening trends are moving toward total disconnection with the physical body. Some people want to replace their faulty "hardware" with robotic hardware by having their brainwaves programmed into the brain of a robot! This may sound fascinating but what are the moral ramifications of scientific misadventure?

Mander shows that most technology is developed for military purposes first and if it can be applied, consumers will find it in the market place somewhere down the line. This applies to the nuclear reaction. First it was used for war and then five "peaceful" means. Mander does not advocate returning the dark ages, but advises a logical, analytical assessment of new technologies. There are technologies that he improves the quality of life by giving more leisure time while also sustaining life on Earth. We must use more wisdom in implementing technology.

Trapped on Gilligan's Island...

Glenn Stream
San Mateo

This Month's Question: If You Were Trapped on Gilligan's Island, How Would You Escape?

David H. Habel, 1981 Nobel Prize in Medicine "You could send up smoke signals, or if you had any electronic equipment, you could try to assemble something that would transmit. I suppose [you could] try to get off on some sort of raft."

It would depend on how far the land is. Also, you in the middle of the ocean with hundreds of miles between you and any shore? I'd certainly think it over before I started swimming.

Val Fleck, 1988 Nobel Prize in Physics "I'm unclear [depends on the circumstances on which I was trapped]. You mean, just stranded on an island somewhere... so the options are to build a boat and to go where you want to go? Of course, one can always use the stars to navigate, so that's not a problem... [Building a boat] depends on the materials available. What are you giving me?"

If you're giving me just sand, then there's a problem, because I wouldn't have anything concrete to make a concrete canoe. If you have trees, then you make dugout canoes, just like the Polynesian [Ra] now you have to make a fire.

One might be able to start a fire, and then you can burn out a log. One time in my life I started a fire by treading some twigs. I'm a survival type."

Donald J. Cram, 1987 Nobel Prize in Chemistry "I'd look around to see what materials would be available to start from. One would be with flint, if you had anything that would generate a spark, and the other is simply to use friction, as you do by taking a piece of wood and hollowing it out and then taking another piece of wood that is slender... and cooling it around some string and then pulling on it and rotating one with the other. This is the way I did it when I was a Boy Scout. That was part of a merit badge I got."

I'm 72, and I'm a surfboard. By virtue of surfing, I've been around the ocean a lot. I feel comfortable with the interface between land and ocean. I have some feeling for currents. You can find a little bit, now and then, about how distant a landmass is from backwash waves. Some of the means people that navigated were able to use that sometimes in navigation.

The Day Room opens downtown

Beginning April 23, Remains Theatre presents The Day Room, by award-winning novelist Don DeLillo. This hysterical play follows a group of odd characters as they lives overlap in the local hospital and nearby motel of a mysterious town.

It all starts when a shy, middle-aged man checks in to the hospital for "some routine tests." As the play unfolds, however, a becomes clear that is nothing at all "routine" about this hospital. You are not sure who is sane and who is insane.

Again and again, people from the psychiatric ward come over and see doctors, nurses and other patients. The second act opens up a hotel room with the same actors as different characters acting in strange ways. Makes you think, or does it? Are we?

Remains Theatre is located within the 1800 N. Citybeem Mall in the Lincoln Park area. There are mobility disabilities and, best of all, parking is FREE!

We also offer a 1,100 square foot lobby and full service bar. Feel free to call us with any questions.

Remains Theatre, now in its 14th year of adventures, highly regarded productions, is one of the most unique, comfortable, and affordable theatres in the city.

Indecent Proposal presents decent portrait of women

Asia Cusumano
San Mateo

Women represent visions of sensuality, sexuality and substance. Yet films like "Penny Wisdom" and "How Eyespeak in Vegas" exploit them as objects of obsession, play things, power slaves, exotic property or prostitutes.

Three films claim every woman has a secret. "Indecent Proposal," new film by director Adrian Lyne asks, "What is the price for love?"

Diana and David Murphy (Demi Moore and Woody Harmon) are a happily married couple. They've been in love since high school and believe their love is unbreakable. Enter the romance. Putting the loss of their dream house, David and Diana seek to Vegas hoping to convert their last $1,000,000 inheritance into cash. They lose everything.

Memorized by Diana's beautiful, handsome billionaire John Gage (Robert Redford) offers a million dollars for one night with her.

The couple eventually decides their love can withstand the test.

John seduces Diana with his charm, intelligence and sensuality. The seduction is treated to a night of romance, music and stargazing. The actual encounter is wisely left to our imagination.

Once the deal is done, Diana and David realize the price was too high. Misunderstanding and adultery erupt their once perfect love.

The film prompts viewers to explore the ethics or right of Diana's prostitution for love and David's acceptance of the terms. But it's also about sexual fantasies, glamorous infatuation and greed.

"Indecent Proposal" presents Diana with an unusual request and unexpected consequences.

Would you compromise yourself in the name of love? A lot of people are probably disgusted by the notion of seduction but some may be intrigued by the choice.

Harmon and Moore deliver believable and warm performances as a couple whose love is challenged. However, Redford makes the scene as a sensual, aging billionaire whose life is changed by a chance encounter with an enchanting married woman.

"Indecent Proposal" is definitely worth the price of full admission.

Coffee, anyone?

Journal Gabele
Harbinger Gabele White

Looking for a new and unusual place to study? Or, better yet, are you looking for a new place to go to escape the assignments piled up on your desk? Then, Yvonne's Espresso bar, located in downtown Harrison, just might interest you.

Yvonne's is not your general coffee joint. Yvonne Bianco, the owner, wanted to create a "sit down, relax and converse type of place." If sitting and relaxing is your cup of tea, or should I say coffee, you can go to Yvonne's and do just that.

At the same time you can hear poetry readings or attend a foreign language class. View local art exhibits while you sip a cappuccino. Yvonne even plans to offer foreign films in the near future.

Speaking of coffee, Yvonne's offers a variety of espresso based drinks. Espresso is a strong European coffee that can be mixed with many ingredients like steamed milk or even raspberry flavored syrup. The drinks range from $1.25 to $2.25. All of these can be served decaffeinated or decaf. Juices and teas are available too. Yvonne's also serves croissants, biscuits, scones and several other pastries and desserts. There are daily special snacks as well.

Next time you feel like studying, relaxing, or hearing some poetry visit Yvonne's. The cafe is located at 225 S. Cook St. The hours are Mon to Sat 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., Sun 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. (708) 304-8345.

Dance Company to perform

Carline Jett
Features Editor

Five, six, seven, eight, DANCE!! After more than four months of preparation, the Harper College Dance Company will present its annual Spring Dance Show, called "The Dance," on Friday, April 23 and Saturday, April 24 at 7:30 p.m. in J143.

"We have put many, many hours into this production. Everyone has really worked hard, we are proud of everyone's dedication to this show," said Vice President Donna Gabel. "It was so difficult to coordinate everyone's schedules, but somehow we managed to complete everything."

Dances will include music from Billie Joe Davis, Whitney Houston, Prince, Sting, Warren Zevon, and more.

"Within the dance company, we have different teams in music and that comes out when choreographers select their pieces," said Gabel. "Also, we try to keep a very diverse audience in mind when we select the dances that will be performed."

Law Anne Rasi, a hearing impaired student, will be signing and interpreting, "So Blessed," by Mariah Carey. "We are happy to have Lee Anne with us, she is an asset to the Company," said Gabel.

Other members of the Dance Company include Artistic Director, Vicki Stammen, Assistant Artistic Director, Terrell Davis, President, Gina Gorman, Vice President, Donna Gabel, Secretary, Jennifer Landgraf, Treasurer, Sherry Blum, Student Coordinator, Candy Jett, Michelle Archer, Lori Arquilla, Carla Cavallier, Jean Knabberg, Laura Landgraf, Julie Morrison, Kim Moss, Vicki Nienkowsky, Debra Ray, Lori Anne Rasi, Donna Schwenberger, Kym Stadel and Laurie Wright.

Gabel is an excited about the dancing dance. "We are working on our last dance, called Decades of Dance."

"We use one song from each decade that really makes a statement about that time period." Starting with the 1980's, and ending in the 1990's, the Company covers 50 years of music and dance history. "We tried very hard to capture the flavor of each era through music and dance," concluded Gabel.

Several guest performers will also be involved with this production. Those scheduled to appear are: Beaulieu Academy of Dance, Dancing Feet Dance Studio, Kenzie DeCamp and the Kula Dance Company (KDC), Green Castle Dance Project, Northwest Ballet Academy and VHS Visual University.

Ticket prices are $5 for general admission, with a two-dollar discount for Harper Students. Tickets for the show may be purchased for the Box Office.

Carlin immediately picked up the wonder. "There was no doubt about it. The object to which Carlin Meza supported in his hands was a black purse. The only question remaining now was what to do with it."

Carlin could have kept it; it could have been his. But he was the treasurer and he had to be fair. He had to be fair to all. He had to be fair to the one who might be his. There was always the possibility of just throwing it away. But that wouldn't have done anyone any good.

It was every day that finds some thing like this.

"I've found car keys before, and I would give them to Public Safety," said Carlin. "I even once found a camera."

"So he did what any better citizen would do, call Public Safety."

"I called public safety and said there to come and pick it up," said Meza. "I never opened the purse myself to see what it was. That was for Public Safety to do, not me."

After phoning Public Safety, he went back to work and said, not much to do. He was not much to do.

"I didn't know me to know what might be inside the purse," said Meza.

"It was really none of my business anyway."

Public safety arrived and took it out of his hands.

Inspecting the purse and they found several credit cards and $2.34 in cash. But more importantly, the owner of the purse was identified and contacted.

And what of Carlin Meza? Carlin went on with work as though nothing happened, but was relieved to find out that the owner's purse was returned.

He received no reward, he didn't want any. His reward was the purse was returned, and that was good enough for him.

Dream, dream, dream

The International Dream Hotline will begin April 23 at 6 p.m. and continue through midnight April 25. Faculty and students will be on hand to interpret your dreams for 56 hours.

Perhaps you've had nightmares or a dream that came true. Maybe you have had dreams of flying through the air. All dreams are significant because they are about you, the dreamer. For example, a car represents the physical body. A house represents your mind, animals represent natural instincts or emotions. By becoming aware of the symbolic meaning of your dreams you will gain insight and awareness into your own identity and be able to change unproductive parts of yourself.

Dreams offer the key to living a more fulfilling and meaningful life. So find out what the hidden message in your nighttime experiences is telling you.

The hotline is sponsored by the School of Metaphysics with fifteen centers throughout the United States and a college in Waukegan, Missouri. The host is hotline number for the Public Center at 991-0140. There is no charge for this educational service.

Events occurring throughout the weekend include an open house April 24th from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. and a dream lecture April 25th at 7 p.m. Everyone is invited to attend.

For more information about the School of Metaphysics or the International Dream Hotline call Tom Sardo, hotline coordinator, 991-0140.

Rape

Another said the panel's recently released report cited an "urgent need for formal, written policies. The panel made 47 recommendations, and said that USC could lead the nation in developing programs that deal with sexual assault."

Among its many suggestions, the panel recommended that the university immediately inform everyone on campus when a sexual assault occurs, that it furnish mandatory education on sexual assault and prevention to all new students, and that it better coordinate with local law enforcement agencies to avoid investigative delays.

While many universities are being forced to answer the call for tighter campus security and better rape prevention programs, Goodwin of the Student Press Law Center said some universities have made strides by providing their campus newspapers with crime statistics that enable students to protect themselves and by providing comprehensive programs.

The University of Florida's Sexual Assault Recovery Program is one example. When a rape occurred on a dorm room on the Gainesville campus a few months ago, "the all-male room was immediately supportive," said Mary Kuch Rasi, the program director.

The next night one woman and attempted to rape her roommate. Both women were immediately referred to the center where counselors worked with them, contacting local authorities and explaining options. Rasi said counselors were also sent to the students' residence hall to assist other students. He also said that along with victim intervention, the program's counselors provide sexual assault peer education programs that help students understand their fears and how to cope with a sense of loss of control.

The university is also developing a model program targeting male students, who, studies have shown, are responsible for most of the sexual assaults and rapes on campus. Rasi said that many men are reluctant to participate in rape awareness programs, but outreach is beginning to work. "We're getting more calls from fraternities now," Rasi said.

Joseph Weinberg, a rape prevention educator with a special focus on men, said he is not surprised by male students' resistance. He also mentioned resistance from fraternity members and advisors when he conducts rape awareness seminars on campus nationwide.

"It's challenging deeply held notions of what it means to be a man in our society," Weinberg said. "When you go into a group and say, 'Hello, we are reporting you. Now, what are we going to do about it?' it doesn't elicit a happy response. But all the defenses, all the scoffing and other male stuff we get is crucial to the process."

"I tell men, 'If you continue to buy into the model of traditional masculinity, it reflects rape, and relations between men and women."

Women have felt violated and powerless because date rape has been treated and is being treated as a crime. They are now taking a stronger role in changing the way cases are handled. "Women are strong to us. The old way doesn't work for us," Meade said.

Bears crowned intramural basketball champions after intense final game

JIM WALSH
Sports Editor

The final may have been 48-43, but the championship game of the intramural basketball season was much closer than any scoreboard will ever tell you.

The Bears finished the night of April 13 as intramural basketball league champions, but only after two very tough battles.

In the second game of the semifinals, the Bears took on the IM Team, a team filled with unhappy Hawk basketball players just arriving after a double header loss earlier in the day.

After the foul filled first half, the Bears led by what seemed a comfortable 21-15 lead. The lead didn't stay safe, however. With 4:30 left in the game, Chris Moore hit a dome pointer to bring the game within seven at 47-40.

The wear and tear of the day finally caught up with the IM Team, and by the end the Bears led 61-48 and went on to the finals.

In the earlier semi final game, The 5th Ward Hawks walked over the Skitnags 70-51. How the Skits actually stayed close in the game is strange, because for most of the first half they only had three men on the court. Jeff Anderson entered the game with 7:20 left in the first half and a 29-18 Hawk lead, making the game not quite so uninteresting as it was.

Early in the second half Dave Haskins, fresh from pushing the second game of the basketball doubleheader, joined the Skits in game and with a severe cold.

While the odds were stacked against them, the Skits were able to end the game with a respectable 70-55 loss, considering their situation. When asked why he played after the game Haskins said, "I thought I had a chance, 'most definitely'."

When asked to explain why the Skits actually were able to stick so close to the Hawks, Lewan Young who will play offensive tackle for University of Iowa next year said, "We were tired. They had three Michael Jordan's."

In the low scoring, high tension Championship game the Bears ended up with the championship over the Hawks, 48-43. Derrick Harris' 21 points weren't enough to edge the psyched Bears, fresh off a semi final win, and led by Jeff Schuler's 15 and Tim Canley's 12 points.

The low point of the game was when a shooting man began and Michael Paul had to be run out from the game. The game was not over by any means until the final buzzer sounded. With less than 30 seconds remaining, the score was still 44-43. Bears.

Tim Longmire, four points in the contest, said afterwards, "I wish we could have played without anyone's."

Baseball team having early season troubles

JIM WALSH
Sports Editor

Harper's baseball team played against South Suburban College in South Holland April 13, and as many times before, came up on the short end.

Jason Peter pitched and was the loser in the first game 9-0, and Dave Haskins lost in the second game 5-0. While the losses hurt (and the Hawks' 27-11 record) have been expected to do much better against South Suburban (28-6), missed in the top twenty junior college teams in the country. The team also had a full early season schedule, while most of Harper's early season games were cancelled. According to head coach Norm Garrett, the team still needs to get some fundamentals down, and "gets keep swinging the bats."

Garrett continued to say that because of the shortened spring trip, the team still feels like their playing in the pre-season practices.

How Did they get to the semi-finals?

Playoff basketball has pushed the intramural Basketball Tournament to a higher level. All first round games were pushed to the last few minutes before the winner was determined. Although all the top seeded teams escaped to the semi-finals, the underdogs proved their best play for the end of their season.

5th Ward Hawks 48, Skitnags 58

The fifth place Big Dawg led the 5th Ward at half time 21-19 dominating big their defensive trends and playing a tight zone to keep the Hawks outside. However, the Hawks got their running game going in the second half and moved in front. Larry Dennis was held to two points in the first half, but got untracked for 12 points in the second frame. Leroy Prater was held all scorers with 17 points and kept the Big Dawg close all night with his strong offensive based work. The Hawks now face Skitnags in the semifinals.

IM Team 52, Hiti Squad 47

Chris Moore fired up 21 first half points and the top seed Bears to their limit. Trailing 31-28 at half time, the Bears erupted up their defensive pressure and got Tim Schuler untracked for 14 points and hit some clutch free throws by Tim Longmire to pull out the win. Ron Ostermeier passed 13 for C.J.

of strong play by Kenny Carroll and Ron Brown, pulled the Hit Squad within two points under two minutes to play. Dennis Baggett cannot find straight foul shots under pressure to pull out the win.

Bear 49, Court Justice 42

Court Justice played their best game of the year and pushed the top seed Bears to their limit. Trailing 31-28 at half time, the Bears erupted up their defensive pressure and got Tim Schuler untracked for 14 points and hit some clutch free throws by Tim Longmire to pull out the win. Ron Ostermeier passed 13 for C.J.

Skitnags 58, Untouchables 47

In the most highly anticipated game of the night, Skitnags fought back from a 30-26 deficit to determine the determined Untouchables. Scott Wenzel passed 21 for Skitnags but it was David Haskins stepping up at crunch time to his clutch three pointer from the corner and post two free throws under pressure to pull out the win. Jay Emery and Greg Kelley again passed the U-Bulls.

Eye on the Hawks

All-right folks, I'm back to defend myself. You may have some cheer by our pictures the week that our topic involves age. Yes, this week the question is that: "Just when should athletes be allowed to perform at a professional level?"

Heather is under the impression athletes should have no choice but to endure some college experience before joining the pros. I intend to differ. Take Fernando Valenzuela, for example.

The man started his climb up the major league ladder at age 16, and won both the National League Cy Young award and Rookie of the year in 1981. Here we are, 12 years afterwards, and the man is still in the game, a multi-millionaire.

Don't get me wrong. I don't believe that every athlete should skip out on school. On the same note, however, I believe that if a player is good enough to play his or her sport professionally at a ripe young age, the more power to them.

If (and that's a big if) an athlete is good enough to be recruited at an young age, I see no reason why they shouldn't be recruited by the big boys. In this day and age where the almighty dollar is God, we as people must fend for ourselves financially. If an athlete has the opportunity to accelerate their lives and jump into the money filled world of athletics after high school (and has the athletes, I who we are to miss them?)

Should we shut the door to early drafting even for those that truly possess the skills (can you say Shaquille O'Neal)? I don't think so.

We are all individuals, as athletes and as people. To set the standard for EVERYBODY under one question would be unfair to those that are the exceptions.

Some people can make the jump. Some can't. My personal choice if given one, would be to stick with school. Granted, I've never had millions of dollars come knocking on my face, so what do I know?

One On One

When should athletes enter pro sports?

I really don't have much to say about the topic that Jim and I have chosen since it's another late night. But as usual I'd give you with him and will see him get the last word. He does not deserve it.

Basically I do not feel that athletes should not be recruited professionally before attending college. Let them get further teaming. More practice. Most athletes speak at the age of ten, but their true qualities do not rate until the college level arrives. But when I talk to a young player and look Monica Seles. Most tennis players start professionally at the age of 14. Yeah, so. That's not what I'm trying to go across anyway. Even in tennis, players should

At a glance

Athletes should go to college even if they are currently pros. But the hang up on that is only this one single fact. Once an athlete goes professional they are no longer to play at either high school or college levels. So what fun would college or high school be if you could not play on a team.

You know I could go into the baseball aspect of the topic. Not after last week. I have two thoughts to correct.

Number One: The implication that I did know this. My only excuse is that it was late and I was looking forward to getting home. I spent, not runs. Or is it the other way around? I honestly know around here anymore. No, seriously. It's true. Oops on my part.

Number Two: I need to recognize a baseball player. The reason I didn't was the fact that he never told me what his name was. And of course I did not ask. The player that talked with me last week about the "One On One" column was Tony Glavin. Sorry Tony. My fault. Actually it was Jim's but I'm not one to tell. Oops again. I just did. Oh well.

Next week though I would like to take the time to express my feelings of sexual harassment in the athletic field. I may also wander off into other areas but that will be my topic. For those of you who read my first article in November you will already know where I stand on this issue. Yes Jim, it does happen.

'No sympathy for followers'—Student

78 percent of students agree with federal actions against Branch Davidians

KENNETH DILLARD
Editor-in-Chief

Federal agents acted responsibly Monday when they used tear gas in an attempt to drive the Branch Davidians from their Waco, Texas compound. That's the opinion of Harper students in a recent survey.

Seventy-eight percent of those polled agreed with the federal government's actions.

"I'm glad they (the FBI) did something," said Drew Smith, a general studies major. "I have no sympathy for his followers."

Most respondents also expressed mixed feelings about the situation. Many were also positive in their remarks, saying that "no matter what was done, he was destined for a suicide mission." "He was determined to be a martyr."

Not all respondents felt the same way. The general consensus among those against the action was that the government should have responded sooner.

"If they were going to do it at all, they should have done it the first week," said Patti Kaline, a psychology major. "Instead, they wasted taxpayers' money."

A man suicide by fire took the lives of 60 people, Korean among them, ending a 51-day standoff with the FBI.

"I felt they gave Koresh ample opportunity to play out his options."

Waco: The aftermath

● 86 people are believed to have perished, David Koresh among them

● The standoff lasted a total of 51 days

● Only 9 people are known to have survived the fire

During that time, agents tried tactics from negotiations to broad-casting dental drilling sounds, all in an effort to avoid a violent confrontation.

Fifty students responded to the poll, taken late Tuesday afternoon.

Blood drive needs donors

Giving blood not such a painful process for volunteers

TON FOLLE
News Editor

Are you ready? Are you willing? Are you able? Because it's time once again to give blood, if you're not a chucker.

The blood drive, which is sponsored by health services and student ambassadors, will be held on April 28 from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Building A242.

For eligibility, you must be at least 17, weigh 110 pounds, have not donated for at least eight weeks and be in good health.

Approximately 1 pint of blood is drawn and it takes about ten minutes to donate.

To donate, a pre-physical is required by law and a personal background check is made. There are four steps to the entire process.

Step One: Registration. Complete the blood donation record by answering a series of questions regarding your health history and lifestyle.

Step Two: Mini-physical. A qualified technician confidentially reviews your answers. Your temperature, pulse, blood pressure and hemoglobin (iron) are then checked.

Step Three: The blood donation. After you are reclining comfortably, the phlebotomist will gently cleanse your arm before inserting a sterile needle.

You'll feel a slight, momentary pinch. Five to seven minutes later, your donation is complete.

Step Four: Refreshments. Relax and enjoy juice and snacks for ten minutes.

Rebecca Samuels, coordinator of the blood drive, says that the pre-physical is to make sure that you are a healthy donor.

"We need to make sure that any student who wants to give their blood is in good health and doesn't have any diseases like AIDS," Samuels said.

This is the last blood drive for the school year. The next one will be held in July.

"Our goal is to get as many people to sign up to donate blood as possible," said Samuels.

But we usually receive between 60 and 100 units (species per blood drive), she added.

Amy Hausman, CNA Advisor to the student ambassadors, said that the student ambassadors are here to help make the blood donors less intimidated.

"Students are less intimidated when they are around other students or people of their age," Hausman said.

"It's more comfortable for them."

Hausman is proud to be helping in the blood drive, which she said has become a tradition over the years.

For sexually harassed silence not golden

Fewer victims reporting incidents that occur on college campuses

Fear, Intimidation, Vulnerability
Under helplessness. For women who experience sexual harassment, these are the most common reasons that they report it.

Thirty percent of undergraduate women are sexually harassed by at least one of their professors in their first years at college, according to a 1994 survey conducted by J.W. Ditzch and L. Wessner and quoted in "Tory Power: Sexual Harassment on Campus." The book, a collection of essays about sexual harassment, also noted that another study found that only 5 percent of victims report the harassment to a grievance.

Why?
"Female victims of sexual harassment by male college professors are almost always intimidated by social pressure and power differentials."

"One often blames themselves, intimidated by a professor's authority and prestige."

"Others fear the venomous scrutiny of the professor and even worry they decide to come forward with their stories."

There are some of the reasons cited in "Tory Power: Sexual Harassment on Campus," a collection of essays edited by Michele Paludi, president of Michele Paludi & Associates Consulting in Sexual Harassment in Albany, N.Y.

"The invasion is that their victimhood isn't known, they're being sexually harassed," Paludi said in an interview. "Another is that they fear retaliation on the part of the professor and the college."

Sexual harassment often needs to be blatant for students to recognize, according to Pat Webster, executive director of Illini Rape Crisis, Inc.

"It either has to be very egregious, or somebody has to let the student know how serious this is," Webster said. In her essay "Coping with Sexual Harassment," Viki Rabinowitz writes, "Students do not in fact feel free to refuse unwanted advances. There is evidence to suggest that fear of retaliation by the sexual professor is the paramount reason that students attempt to cope with harassment by indirect means."

Traditional gender views are one main reason women don't come forward with their experiences, Rabinowitz wrote. "In a society where women are held and held themselves responsible for arousing men's sexual interest, it is easy to understand how male students can become conflicted about their own motives and behaviors."

Many people were hurt and let to misbehavior, Webster said. "We're taught from a very, very early age that men's, jokes, inappropriate behavior and language are things that we can expect to have happen."

Rabinowitz wrote that women can interpret sexual advances as flattery. "It can be an embarrassing experience for a young woman to be the object of attention from someone who holds the prestigious position of professor, someone who might choose any one of a hundred students to advise, to have a teacher," Rabinowitz wrote. "It is easy for her to fall into the trap of blaming herself for her normal desire to be noticed and appreciated."

Paludi added that male professors often do not see their actions as inappropriate, but believe they are flattering the women.

In most cases, the reluctance to report incidents of sexual harassment is attributed by the power imbalance between professor and student, Rabinowitz wrote. Victims are intimidated by the professor's superior status and power. They are confused because they once looked to their professor as a role model.

This power imbalance between professor and student is also the reason some male professors feel justified in making sexual advances, Rabinowitz wrote.

"Students are completely vulnerable to the professor's power to determine academic and even graduate status."

Professors wield a great deal of power over students who depend on them for grades, letters of recommendation, academic and career counseling, and other opportunities, Rabinowitz wrote.

Like a variety of rape, victims of sexual harassment face negative consequences in both the short and long term.

to psychological, according to "Challenged Lives," an essay by University of Arizona professor Mary P. Koss. Between 21 and 82 percent of women report that their emotional or physical conditions became worse after being harassed. Koss wrote. Victims described certain emotional reactions such as anger, fear, depression, anxiety, feelings of humiliation and shame, and instability in a variety of Koss included her essay. In addition, there can be numerous physical symptoms, such as teeth grinding, anxiety attacks, binge eating, headaches, inability to sleep, loss of appetite and weight loss.

In general, victims of sexual harassment experienced declines in commitment, motivation, work performance, attendance and overall self-esteem, the survey said.

After each incident, the victim believed that the harassment was going to level off or eventually stop, Koss wrote.

"When the harasser's behavior escalated, which it did in virtually all the cases studied, the victim felt lost of control and helpless."

When victims come forward with allegations of sexual harassment, they risk further psychological damage as well as retaliation, Paludi said.

Takes 10 years, the appropriate way is through the media," Paludi said. While the topic needs to be more prominent, people need to be more considered. The likelihood that the victim who comes forward could be retaliated against is very great. Paludi said students must rely on the college to have a clear policy statement on sexual harassment to the alleged perpetrator's outcome is determined by deep process.

Only in the past two decades has sexual harassment come to be recognized as a violation of civil rights. Before that, perpetrators were treated with the "boys will be boys" attitude, according to Pat Webster, executive director of Illini Rape Crisis, Inc. "It's a very recent change in thinking that this type of behavior is not be condoned," Webster said.

Sexual harassment is currently considered sex discrimination under Title IX of the 1972 Education Amendments and Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX states.

Sexual harassment consists of verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature, imposed on the basis of sex, by an employee or agent of a recipient of federal funds that denies limits, provides different or conditions on the provision of aid, benefits, services, or treatment provided under Title IX.

The National Advisory Council on Women's Educational Programs has developed its own definition of sexual harassment in educational situations.

"Academic sexual harassment is the use of authority to emphasize the sexuality or sexual identity of the student in a manner which prevents or impedes that student's full enjoyment of educational benefits, climate, or opportunity."

Interviewing skills and styles seminar offered at the northeast center

Harper College Career Transition Center is offering Interviewing Skills and Styles, on April 22, 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. in the Northeast Center, 375 S. Wolf Road, Prospect Heights, Ill. Participants will learn about the different types of interviews, how to prepare themselves, how to ask and answer questions and how to follow up after the interview. Effective communication skills will be emphasized. The workshop includes mock interviews, communication skills, interviewing styles and optimal interviewing techniques. Participants will also receive a resume. "With the competitive job market, the skills learned in these workshops give the participant an edge in the job search process," Registration fee for the workshop is $40. Call the Career Transition Center, 708-944-4444, to learn more about these workshops or to register.

PEAK programs offered for 11-14 year olds during summer sessions

Summer sessions are offered in the PEAK program for 11-14 year olds. Through PEAK, Harper College will offer 42 courses during July and August. These courses include computer, art, science, mathematics, sports, music, and more. PEAK will meet for two weeks, July 5-12 and PEAK Camp will meet for two weeks, August 2-9. The PEAK program opens to any student 11-14 years old. No application or previous records. All students will be at Harper's main campus. As students can have the experience of an actual college campus as they move between classes

Harper offers the wealth and diversity of its facilities and resources to enhance the program. According to Tom Fink, coordinator of PEAK programs, "Our programs offer an exciting opportunity for students to explore areas of interest that may have been relevant to their future career choices." The program will continue through June 24, 1993. If you would like a copy of the Harper Summer Schedule which contains a full page of details, or a special low fare seat to a game, please call (708) 291-0240. Tuition for each course is $33.50 plus a $14.00 fee is necessary for parents to provide transportation for students.

Engineering Scholarships here

Most high school graduates planning to enter college have no short-term goals: selecting the right college and putting together the money to meet tuition costs. Harper College offers engineering students substantial scholarship opportunities.

The Northrop Corporation Defense Systems Division continues to offer a 2+1 Engineering Scholarship to provide financial assistance to a student for the first three years of engineering study. The scholarship carries a $1,000 per year stipend for two years of engineering preparation and $6,000 for junior year expenses at the University of Illinois College of Engineering. Applicants must be 1993 high school graduates from the Harper District, must be in the upper 25 percent of their graduating classes with a 'B' average in a pre-engineering course of study, demonstrate academic achievement in some area of humanities and willingness to participate in humanities and willingness to participate in humanities and technical materials, plan to enter Harper College as full-time students in the engineering transfer program, and have plans to complete study at the University of Illinois towards a bachelor's degree in engineering. Financial need is not a criterion for the award.

The Square D Foundation will offer several awards this year each in the amount of $500 or $1,000 applicable to the first year at Harper. A renewal is not automatic for the second year, but a successful student may reapply. Applicants must be 1993 high school graduates from the Harper District or current Harper students with plans to complete bachelor's degree study in engineering, and must be in the upper 25 percent of their graduating classes with at least a 'B' average. Harper applicants must have completed 12 hours of engineering curriculum and MTH with at least a 'B' average. Harper engineering students with outstanding records may receive a stipend applicable to one semester at transfer institutions. A demonstrated interest and achievement in speaking, writing or other communications activity is considered favorably.

Applications and information may be secured from high school counseling centers for the Northrop or Square D scholarships. The application deadline for these scholarships is April 15, 1993. The Financial Aid Office, 397 3000, Ext. 2248, has applications and information for the Northrop Engineering Scholarship as well as information regarding other scholarship opportunities.

Free session on CTC: NW Center

A free information session detailing the outplacement and career transition services available through the Harper College Career Transition Center, will be held on Wednesday, April 28, 6-7 p.m. at the Northeast Center located at 1375 S. Wolf Road, Prospect Heights.

The Career Transition Center is a partnership between Harper College and the Private Industry Council of Northern Cook County.

The programs are available to individuals or to companies that wish to provide these services to their employees.

According to Mary Ann Irwin, coordinator, the Center provides programs and services that will help participants focus on their strengths, skills and abilities through an assessment process, take a look at career options and brush up on job search skills such as resume preparation, interviewing, networking and marketing techniques.

Resume banks, directories, periodicals, newspapers, computer software programs, a resume service, job placement opportunities and career counseling is available.

There is no charge to individuals who use the Center's facilities. To learn more about these services or to register for the information session, call the Career Transition Center, 704/459-6235.

There will be food, family events, sports, classic cars, music and much, much more. Bring your family and spend the afternoon at Harper. Watch for more information in the Daily Herald.

Sign Language program sponsored; was a big hit

The William Ransay Harper College, Department of Sign Language Student Sign Language Interpreting Program sponsored the 4th annual "Sign A Story" on Saturday, April 17, at 1:00 p.m.

Four years ago, Bob Paul, an instructor at Harper, decided to set up "Sign A Story" in order that deaf and hearing persons might share stories of comedy, horror, grade, or traditional stories passed from generation to generation.

Interested persons, as well as students and teachers, travel from surrounding communities to enter the competition, or to just sit back and enjoy the event. Admission fee for all was $2.00. First, second, and third place prizes were to be awarded.

A crowd of about 60 people enjoyed the offerings of the nine contestants. The contestants, whose stories were to be no more than ten minutes long, were judged on creativity, facial expression, and body movement.

While the votes of the judges were being tallied, the audience members shared their own unique stories, just for fun, not in competition.

The top five contestants were then asked to repeat their stories, but this time, the audience was able to choose their favorites. The final votes were counted and the winners were: first place, Tiffany Hagedorn, second place, Vicki Granger and third place, Tom Adams Sign Language.

Burning down the house

The standoff is over. Tuesday afternoon, David Koresh and his followers committed mass suicide, burning down the complex in which they were holed up. This in response to federal agents bombarding the building with tear gas and putting holes in the walls to drive the cult out.

The incident has already brought up controversy over whether the government has any right to interfere in religious activities. Without any question, the answer is yes, when a religion poses a threat to society in general.

The first amendment, which has been rehearsed over and over, does establish a separation of church and state. But the founding fathers did not intend for religion to become a harmful side effect to the general public.

Instead, they wanted to distinguish a line of division that disallowed the government establishing one particular religion. And while they accomplished that, they failed to set exact boundaries for how far a religion could carry activities.

And these days, every religious leader and his sidekick seem to take things to extremes, all in the name of God (Jim Jones, Jim Baker, Jimmy Swaggart (why are all preachers named Jim?) and Charles Manson, have all established a "religion" supposedly because God told them too. And, of course, God told them to have sex with hookers, steal money from innocent believers and commit murders or mass suicides.

It's no wonder many people have a negative image of religion.

They see our religious leaders combatting evil in public, while condoning it in private. What hypocrisy! It's time for the true religious leaders of the world to make a stance if they want to have any influence in our constantly-changing world.

Or they can continue to watch and allow outside sources to influence the world.

Maybe one day, we can wake up to hear about a prominent preacher doing some good for a community. Not the everyday caring men of God who already do such work, but the men who are on television, or who lead a congregation of thousands. Then we could restore a little bit of hope back into religion. And we wouldn't have to debate over the separation of church and state

And as for Koresh, a few words in epitaph from the Bible

"And the Lord said, let there be light."

Everywhere you look, TV

PAUL FLOREN

(Editor's note: Paul Floden has been ill recently, so we are reprinting his most popular column.)

For about seven months last year I didn't watch any TV at all. Not for a minute. I didn't have one (couldn't afford one, didn't need one, and didn't want one). In that order.

It was the best adversity I've ever been through (along with dieting for lack of grocery funds, but that's another column). I was finally getting out and living a life rather than living out a dream of one through characters in a visual pukebox. Freed from the bonds of the black box, I began doing something new: living. I now see how sad it was to be owned, mind and soul, by such a ruthless media box.

Everyone will at sometime know someone who would rather sit home alone and watch the cast of 90210 go out for pizza than to go out with real live friends for real pizza (even when those friends are buying?)

It's already at the point where it's socially acceptable to be that way. The hook-tube has an extremely strong pull on secrets and culture. Which is funny, since it was one of the least mandated for a culture: function well and thrive. But we've been punting more weight on the first that stands on the TV and it would be disastrous if it was pulled out from under. Euphemistically and literally the entire United States would collapse.

I realize that many things I should've learned through life experience I acquired as a dedicated Child Of The Tube. Everything from learning the alphabet to philosophy. Staring for hours on end into the well-lit, commercial ridden, box of good times has stemmed from a normal habit into Paranoia. I've seen it. I've had it. I've conquered it. The world inside the box would have you believe that head shaved people are probably Nazi's, that D&D players confuse reality with fantasy, and long haired males are on drugs. That if you wear an oversized basketball team jacket, your a yuppie. Unless you're black, then you're probably a gangbanger.

These are fantasies for anyone who is close to the issue, but somewhere someone is deciding these stereotypes and feeding them to impressionable children and hermit-like old folks. And paranoid teenagers.

Would you watch a half hour of only commercials? You do if the pre-fifty-seven channels and the only requisite is a two-hour TV special. Fifty-seven channels and the only things on are Gunner Pyle reruns and worn-out cartoons. But hey, you're 18 grown up now. You'd rather be enlightened by bloody assaults, rapes, wars, plane crashes and other assorted ads for evil on America's favorite game-show, The Evening News.

Why continue to have your intelligence insulted by marketing companies and scriptwriters who, by all slant definition, suck? Why be mesmerized by mindless programming? Perhaps there's some truth to the Humaniati. You certainly become less productive when you catatonia.

And because I'm paranoid, I can ramble on about the television's eminent global domination. Soon they'll be everywhere: banks, billboards, stop lights, train stations, restaurant booths, classrooms, public washrooms, concerts, and other places so that you will no longer need to think for yourself. The Boxes will tell you exactly what you think, and when you're not thinking.

It's comforting to know that, some time in the future, I simply won't need a mind of my own.

But until then, I'll have to make the best of living with my own foolish decisions based on life experience. Only from now on, that experience won't include the influence of TV. Anyone for pizza?

BUILDING I will be home of the new Block box

VIEW FROM Building C looking upon the construction

Looking out of the windows in Building C, P and F, you can take a look at the new building in progress. The new Liberal Arts Building will undergo construction and plans that it is ongoing have been made. The new building will serve many purposes on campus, is helping along with the educational process.

"We have long needed the classroom space here at Harper," Harley Chapman, Dean of Liberal Arts, said. Space is one of the reasons for the birth of Building I.

The building will also serve as a permanent home for the three-dimensional art located in various areas of campus. All of the areas have been temporary locations for the art.

The drama classes have found a home too. There will be art room, a black box theater. The black box will have a cat walk, and serve the drama students better. There will be a lot of construction done to Building F when the new building is completed. The first and third floors will undergo the most of these changes.

"The whole building will be changed," Chapman said. Plans have been made for the new set up for the LIBC. Building F was originally intended for the LIBC and research here on the campus.

The book store will also find its new home located in Building I, when it is completed.

Estimated date for completion of Building I, was by Spring 1994. However, Chapman said that we can hope for this but he was not at all sure if it will meet the scheduled date.

French film series

Press Release

Two remnant films by popular French author and director Marcel Pagnol, "My Father's Glory," and "My Mother's Castle," will be shown at Harper College, Building J Theater.

Pagnol, The French Mark Twain, explores his idyllic childhood in turn-of-the-century Provence in "My Father's Glory," being shown Thursday, April 29, at 7:30pm. It is the story of the same young Pagnol spent with his family in the rugged French countryside when he experienced a turning point in his life and cemented the relationship with his father. The film, which runs 98 minutes, stars Philippe Caubère, Nathalie Rousseil, Thérèse Lortard and Didier Pain.

Pagnol continues his story about his life in "My Mother's Castle," which will be shown Thursday, May 6, at 7:30 pm. This film, which is also set in the isolated countryside of southern France, focuses on Pagnol as teenager and his relationship with his mother, Augustine. The plot involves trespassing across private property illegally using an official key that could jeopardize the civil service career of Pagnol's father. This film runs 110 minutes.

Tickets for both French films, which are directed by Yves Robert and subtitled in English, are $5, with discounts for students and senior citizens. Call Harper Box Office at 965-6110 or ext. 2547 on campus.

Harper College Dance Company featuring Lee Anne Bea, a hearing-impaired student, on Friday and Saturday, April 23 & 24, 7:30pm, Building J Theater. Tickets are $2. Harp. Students and $5 for general admission. Tickets can be purchased at the Box Office.

RELATIVE OBSCURITY

Press Release
SARASOTA, CA

What began as a typographical error, has become an e-mail message to denote "aid with an cynical smile," that turned into a simple and often humorous dialect that is spoken throughout the computer underground. These electronic Smileys (or "emoticons") as they are sometimes referred to by people with an sense of humor are today's expressions of basic emotions that color and clarify electronic mail.

Six hundred and fifty of these unique electronic icons have been complied in a new book from O'Reilly & Associates, SMILEYS, by David Soudien.

Smileys let the computer user smile on a screen, of course, but the can also (1) laugh out loud, (2) wink, (3) yell, (4) down, and even (5) drink. Smiley can also include rule ways of reference to politics (7) Ronald Reagan, entertainment (8) Charlie Chaplin, history (9) George Washington, myth (10) cyclops.

Investigation of the publication of SMILEYS, O'Reilly & Associates announces "The Best New Smiley Contest." The person submitting the best smiley not already found in SMILEYS by October 1, 1993 will win $500. New Smiley should be submitted electronically to smiley@ora.com, or via surface mail to "Smiley Contest," O'Reilly & Associates, Inc., 1030 Market St., Sebastopol, CA 95472.

Poetry Slam comes to the suburbs

Press Release

Poetry aficionados will have their chance to hear poetry read as they've never heard it before when Harper College hosts a suburban poetry slam, April 30, 7:30 p.m. in the Building J Theater.

Appearing will be Marc Smith from the Uptown Poetry Slam at Chicago's Green Mill Tavern, along with National Poetry slam champion Lisa Baccant, a doctoral journal editor by day, and Relative Obscurity acoustic quartet that has been described as Minnesota Transfer meets the Marx Brothers.

Poetry slams do not involve fets or bloodshed, but add entertainment, competition and razzmatazz to original poetry reading, according to Marc Smith, a former construction worker, who is the creator of the Uptown Poetry Slam. "We put the pizzas, the heartbeats, back into poetry. We set it on fire, and now we're turning up the heat." Performances can range from carefully rehearsed to totally wild.

Tickets for the show are $5, with discounts for students and senior citizens, and may be purchased through the Box Office at 907-3000, Ext 2547 or 925-6100.

Sunshine? What sunshine?

Joe Walame
Sports Editor

By winning their remaining games, the Bulls record could be 22-9. It can be because Charlotte is borderline. The Knicks would be left out in the cold with a 20-9 record, even if they win all their games. The Bulls are masters of their own destiny, but they haven't played masterfully this season. Sure, they have a great record, but how many times have they had to come from behind to win? They've been down in some past teams and, even though they won, they should have won those games from the get go.

The rest of the teams in the East are just cannon fodder. The Bulls and Knicks will battle for the conference title with the team that has home-court advantage (I think the Knicks will have it) winning the series in seven.

The Western conference is a little more set, with most teams separated by 2 games or more. Phoenix, with a well-rested Barkley, should win it all (their conference) handily. Seattle might be a little tough, but the All-NBA starting five of the Suns will triumph.

Hey coach, what's new?

The baseball, softball and tennis teams have at least a good portion of their seasons to make their mark. The only team unaffected on the schedule, at least, is the track team, or as Head Coach Renee Zeilner calls them, the "summer team."

The softball team has been hit hardest by the weather. Only one day's games have been played on schedule this season. Poor weather is weather.

kept the team from practicing outside and continued cold, wet conditions caused the rescheduling of half the early season games. Now the day when the weather conditions are good will see a couple of bad days' storms, have some drying time and just as the time comes where field conditions are playable, more heavy rain arrives.

Head Men's Tennis Coach Roger King finds his team in a situation much comparable to the softball players. Five of nine tennis meets have been cancelled, and the team was very rusty in the contests they've played.

As he tries to coach an inexperienced team, a lack of outdoor playing time hurts the individual athletes' chances of getting used to Harper's courts. He adds: "Any time you have an inexperienced team, you need the re-

Hopefully, the teams will soon be seeing an improvement in our weather. Realistically, however, we do live in Chicago.

Men's track team stuns four year schools at invite

Joe Williams
Sports Editor

It's beginning to look like the Harper men's track team is beginning to make even when the winning team left off. The Hawks had two meets cancelled for April 17 before they were finally able to enter the Carthage invitation in Kenosha, Wisconsin and walk away with top honors over six four year schools.

Harper led the field with 129 points to second place University of Wisconsin Parkside 496. Glen-Harshorn and Chicago State tied for third place. Belmont in fifth, home team Carthage in sixth and Illinois Benedictine finished seventh.

The Hawks competing without top runner Greg Holman (out for personal reasons) were continually asked if they were a four year or at least Division I school, but the team members just had to grin and admit they were "just from Harper."

The Hawks only suffered one first place win by Elroy Hill in the 400m (1:32.11). Personal Records:

The big points were racked up by the second place runners, starting with Phil Lewis in the 100m hurdles. Dan Garcia in the 440 intermediate hurdles (1:53.3). PR: Dave Peterson for javelin (181.4 1/2). PR: Ryan Tiffany in long jump (19'7"). Dave Murphy for triple jump (18' PR) and Corey Sager in pole vault (11'6").

Third place honors went to Steve Datta in the 500m (4:12.7). Brian Somers in the 110 high hurdles (16.6). Elroy Hill in shot put (40'2"). Phil Lewis in long jump (19'6"). Ryan Gardner in high jump (6'2"). Sam Saccomanno in hammer (96'). Scott McDonald in 800m hurdles (1:41) and the 4x100m team of Dabblers (1:01) were Levy, Garcia, and Gardner (44.91).

Finishing fourth were Dattam in the 800 meter (1:57.9). Brian Somers in the 100k (35.35). PR: Ryan Tiffany in high jump (6'7"). Mike Bonas in hammer (84'). Fifth place Hawk finishers were Mike Morfin in the 100k (37.32). PR: and Murphy in long jump (18'6"). Rounding out the Harper point winners in sixth place were Gardner in the 100 meter (1:1.76) and the 400 intermediate hurdles (1:40.1). PR: McDonald in the 500m (4:16.17). PR.

Personal best were also provided by Levy in the 800 (2:07). Matt Wade in the 800 meters (2:20). Bonas in shot put (38' and Gardner (177') while Paul Melis also earned a personal best in the javelin (118').

The team originally planned a trip to Whitewater, Wisconsin for a meet but after the school was flooded, the meet was cancelled. The Hawks participated in a competition at Illinois Wesleyan University in Bloomington, Illinois, but were locked out of the meet for being a four year school, according to Zeller.

Eye on the Hawks

One On One Sexual harassment in sports

At a glance

Sexual Harassment

Nix a pretty thought, I know. I can't deny that it happens, and God knows it happens, though? Heather says that sexual harassment rampant in the sports journalism world. My question is: Is it sexual harassment, or just ignorance from years of uneven sexual ratios in journalism?

One day last November, a woman came into my office. She wanted to work on the Horbinger, preferably as a sports journalist. I utterly honestly sat across from her and told her the truth. I told her that not many women write sports.

Was being an eye on the Hawks, pig? I don't think so. I obviously had nothing against her working in the sports page, for she was becoming my co-sports editor, and moved up to managing editor of the Horbinger.

I never doubted the fact that Heather or any other women for that matter could do the job. The fact is, however, that not many women write sports.

In the April 20 Daily Herald, 16 of 16 sports stories with bylines were written by men. In the same day's Sun Times, 20 sports stories of 20 were credited to men. Knowing that fact, and really to blame for being caught off guard by Heather's proposal?

I can't deny the fact that there is sexual harassment in the work place. It's not right. But in journalism, my belief is that women are relatively new to the profession, and that's why there aren't many female journalists.

As far as sports journalism is concerned, I have another reason why most of the population is male. In junior high, both boy's and girl's teams have roughly the same number of participants. In high school, the numbers tilt slightly toward the boy's side.

In college, the men's teams have more members while the women's teams have to scrape together some of their team members. In even competition.

I have older female athletes getting the smaller number of participants. Not knowing that fact, and really to blame for being caught off guard by Heather's proposal?

I would be this is because of lack of interest. If they're not interested in performing, they probably wouldn't end up writing either.

Thinking the way I do. I ask you again: Am I a chauvinistic pig, or just a victim of past society's prejudice? Let me know.

Does it or does it not happen in our world? Many would say that sexual harassment is common in the workplace, but I feel that I need to get one thing straight before continuing on.

Even though the topic of sexual harassment in the sports reporting field is not given the credit that they deserve.

There are only a small select amount of sports which we can play professionally and even at that we are not recognized.

Another thing is that our equipment is not the same as a man's. For example, look at the shoes in basketball and tennis. There are more male players than there are female players. In tennis, there are many of us who thought men's shoes because the feet better on the courts than women's.

Why? Because they are male better. Anyways, getting on to the main topic.

The one reason that women do not get into the sports reporting field is because of the way the field has been built. They think that they know more about the field than a woman.

That's not all true. When in one job I had another reporter (male) ask me something about a football game that every man should have known. I know I'm being discriminating myself, but what comes around goes around. When the men stop I'll stop.

In a nutshell, women are discriminated against when it comes to the sporting field.

Standing on the sidelines in our skirts, live cut ups, jumping up and down giving you men support. We are the hard core fans of men's athletes. Now that's where we are! So there!

There are men cheerleaders. But look at what they wear. Full skirts and full skirts. Sometimes you'll run across them in skirts. But they're not as short as our skirts. Now, is that discrimination or what?

The female athletes are not given the credit that they deserve. There are only a small select amount of sports which we can play professionally and even at that we are not recognized.

Another thing is that our equipment is not the same as a man's. For example, look at the shoes in basketball and tennis. There are more male players than there are female players. In tennis, there are many of us who thought men's shoes because the feet better on the courts than women's.

Computer shutdown affects class registration

Gregory Slocum
Staff Writer

Murphy's law was in full force for Monday evening's appointment registration. If anything can go wrong, it will and it did when the registration computer system found itself in the "Hewlett-Packard of Data entry."

Students arriving for evening appointment registration on April 26th were met with bad news. The "computer was down."

The scheduled start time came and went and students waiting to register continued to filter into the cafeteria. At about 6:20 the Registrar, Steve Calin, entered the "arena" and proceeded to relate the situation to the anxious students. A murmur of disappointment could be heard rumbling through the crowd of about 150 students as he informed them that "The system is down and we cannot say how soon it will be up again."

Despite his meager explanation, the students quickly resigned themselves to the situation and were quickly and efficiently processed by clerks of the registration office. Most students appeared to be satisfied with the remedies Calin offered.

In one case where enrollment in a class was imperative for a student, Calin offered his personal guarantee that the student would have a seat in the class.

Overall Calin and his clerks handled a potentially difficult situation with courtesy, efficiency, and empathy. In an interview Calin stated that the problem was "impossible to solve at this point" and that "Every attempt has been made to bring the system up for registration." He stated that while it was not a pleasant task to be the bearer of bad tidings, a decision was necessary to avoid angering people. "His decision was, in his words, to 'Treat people like adults and give them options.'"

Asked how many students were affected Calin replied, "Overall about 285."

He estimated the number of students waiting to register when he made his announcement at "About 150." Also interviewed was Elaine Parker, Director of Administrative Systems. Asked what the problem was and what was being done about it she responded that "It's a system problem... a number of factors are involved." She stated that "The problem was not due to simple human error" and that "There was no way to know this was going to occur."

When asked when the problem first occurred and what was being done Parker replied, "The system went down at about 2:45pm and has stayed down." Initially, in-house attempts were made at resolving the problem and included contacting Robert Brown, the System Programmer, who was at home on vacation.

Unable to resolve the problem over the phone, additional work was made Parker stated. "Due to the pressing nature of the situation we asked Bob [Brown] to come in."

An attempt was made to interview Brown, however due to the urgency of the situation he was unable to speak.

By 8:30pm reinforcements were called in the form of IBM engineers.

At this point we will do what ever necessary Parker stated. "Most people have been here for 12 hours and we plan to work through the night until the problem is resolved."

Asked about the likelihood of such a problem occurring again in the near future Parker replied, "A problem of this magnitude has not happened for at least two years. I don't see it happening again so as not such things are improbable to predict." She went on to emphasize that "A new system will be coming online in the near future (about 2 years) and with that system problems like this are far less likely to occur."

Parker acknowledged the inconvenience the problem caused and stated, "If [the problem] is not being taken lightly and we [Harcourt Systems] apologize."

The following morning, calls to Information Systems and to Calin were busy by tired, relieved voices. The people in Information Systems had worked through the night and the system was up and running again by 8:00am Tuesday morning.

Elections over, ethics debate rages

Norris wins as committee states feelings over morals

Emmett Dillard
Columnist/Editor

All Norris has been elected student trustee for the next school year. "I was shocked all the people who voted for me," Norris said. "I am grateful for your support and pledge to listen to any of your comments or suggestions."

Norris won with 170 votes to 119 for his opponent, Art Weston. "I would like to pass on thanks to all students who voted for me as the run-off election," Weston said. "I appreciate your support."

The run-off resulted from a tie that ing the first campaign in early April. Votes were tied then at 94 for each candidate. Norris has said that among his goals is to have "an outside neutral party running all future elections."

Each candidate should have a fair and equal chance at running."

During his campaign, Norris also stated that he wanted to attempt to lower book prices, get a better price back on used textbooks and lower prices in the cafeteria, among others.

Vote results were not official until Sunday afternoon when the Election Committee released their statement confirming the results.

In the same letter, they chastised Norris' campaign stating that it was extremely disingenuous to the unethical behavior committed by supporters of Art Norris.

Weston and Norris campaigned extensively the week before the run-off. Both candidates handed out flyers, discussing their qualifications.

Norris' campaign staffers raised the question of ethics with supposed facts about Weston that were not true. Tarnett reached a year long high with 280 votes cast, exceeding the approximately 275 cast three weeks ago.

The student trustee attends all Board of Trustees meetings, and has voting privileges the same as a member of the board. Election committee members could not be reached for comment.

Mike Madara, official torch runner for the Greater Woodfield Convention and Visitor's Bureau first-ever Hospitality Procession

Track star to carry torch

Track and cross country athlete Mike Madara, Wheeling will be the official Torch Runner for the Greater Woodfield Convention and Visitor's Bureau first-ever Hospitality Procession.

Madara, a second year student at Harper, runs the 5,000, 10,000 and 20,000 mile races for the Harper College track and cross country teams.

Coach Renee Zellars recommended Madara for the event on Tuesday, May 4. He will proceed down Woodfield Road to Martingale and then south on Martingale to the Schaumburg Marriott Hotel.

The Harper student will carry the torch for a mile to kick off the procession beginning at 11 a.m. Following the runner will be floats, bands and musical vehicles promoting activities and things to do in the Greater Woodfield area.

Madara's torch-carrying run is expected to generate interest for the first annual Greater Woodfield Hospitality Olympics under the "big top" of the Marvyn Schaubert tent on Thursday, May 6.

Madara will transfer in the fall to Southern Illinois University where he will study education and criminal justice and hopes to continue his running.

For information about the event, contact Amy Egolf at 605-1010.

Discussion will focus on rape trauma syndrome, the dynamics of sexual assault and ways in which persons can empathetically respond after the victim discloses the assault.

Information on working with special populations will also be presented. The $35 cost of the workshop includes lunch.

To register, call 3377 and specify the correct workshop number.

Reminder: Math Anxiety Support Group will meet in Building F312 at 12 noon on 5/3/93

Free immunization for children at Oremus Community Center

On the fourth Thursday of any given month, you can wander to the Oremus Community Center in Bridgeview and find parents waiting anxiously with their curious, somewhat apprehensive children for immunizations. You will also discover nurses, a doctor, and some very dedicated, compassionate volunteers. As part of the Cook County Department of Public Health's Immunization Program, the fourth Thursday is known well by all who work or visit the center as the "day the cries are heard around town."

Parents travel from all over the southwest suburbs for free immunizations, immunizations that are required for children to attend school and that many need to protect their children from diseases that can be crippling or fatal such as measles, polio, and whooping cough.

As children walk slowly behind their parents through various lanes, it appears as if they are being led by the hand from the "white coats."

As parents make their way through these stations, they are keeping track of one, two and maybe three immunization months, many forms, and, if necessary, their children's volunteers, who quietly explain to them what is next. Their children are calm, obedient little Harper College students.

As children approach a "white coat" they are usually greeted with a smile (behind which they are sure there is a monster lurking). Parents may be instructed to hold their child or restrain them in some way, so that the doctor or nurse can give the immunizations. Amazingly enough the children live through the experience, not without tears at times, but they live. From an observer's point of view, these children do not appreciate the value of the phrase "You'll live." They only believe their parents and the "white coats" are trying to hurt them, when at a later point everyone is strong for infants are a little different.

As mothers, and more recently many fathers, approach the "coats" with their child embraced in their arms, they have a proud "new parent" look on their faces. The WHAM, it's all over. The baby who once looked months pregnant eyes and smiled broadly has turned red. "After all, the six month old's head."

Parents of toddlers take a different approach to the clinic, than parents of infants. Toddlers' parents will often hold their children in their arms, while infants' parents cry on behalf of the baby.

Terrible men and women who volunteer their time to assist health department staff and parents in immunizing children exist throughout suburban Cook County, who do they spend one evening a month listening to children cry?

"It's a very interesting and educational opportunity for me. I get to see children and their parents, observe the different cultures and nationalities and the different ways that parents deal with their offspring," said O'Donnell, a retired nurse who has been volunteering for two years.

"It makes me feel good just to know we are helping with the prevention of many children's diseases."

"I see children with polio thirty years ago. We can protect children now," added Mary Joette Doherty, a retired staff member of the Chicago Board of Education's Department of Special Education. "Besides, the babies and kids are fun to be with and a short exchange with the parent makes the evening a rather pleasant experience."

Just Moore can see several individuals affected by the polio, measles and mumps epidemics. As a retired nurse, volunteering gives her a chance to stay involved in the nursing profession. "I watched my sister suffer through infantile polio at age five. She's 74 now and doing well, there were no permanent effects. However, while I was in Nursing school in the late '60s, I cared for a polio patient who eventually died. That did have a permanent effect on his family and on my life," recalls Moore.

When asked how important volunteers are to the success of a clinic, health department nurses praised the efforts of these women.

"Our job of providing prevention services brings us here monthly and because they want to help us in our fight to prevent childhood diseases," said Carol Oxford, charge nurse for the Bridgeview clinic. "The many selfless hours these volunteers give are vital to the clinic."

"Things that may seem small, but are very important are the smiles and friendliness the volunteers lend to the parents. They are indeed good family advocates and foster positive health attitudes in the community," said Rose Prichard, CDDPH nurse and the recipient of these three "angels."

A few years ago, we were talking, they expressed an interest in helping out, so I asked them to join us on the fourth Thursday and guess what, they the cries are heard around town and they've been around ever since."

Student dies; tree planted in memory

Harper's central suite student James E. Hines, 21, died on Friday, March 26, of leukemia, a terminal disease which claimed his life.

The Memorial Tree fund has been established at the request of Bruce McDonnell, Harper public safety officer, with the Harper Educational Foundation. "No donations are too small," said Officer McDonnell.

Anyone wishing to make a contribution can send a check to the Foundation in Building A, room A125.

Tax deductible checks should be made payable to the Harper College Educational Foundation.

Contributions over the cost of the tree ($250) will be placed into the Central Junior Scholarship Fund to benefit other students in James' name.

For further information contact the Foundation Office, 925-6466.

MSU holds minorities conference; October

Michigan State University will hold its ANNUAL MINORITIES IN COMMUNICATION ARTS AND SCIENCES MIDWEST CONFERENCE on October 21, 1993 at its main campus in East Lansing.

The conference is an excellent combination of a fair, series of workshops, and career development activities.

It brings together researchers in the field of communication to students, professionals and academics.

The conference provides an outstanding opportunity for students and others to polish career building skills and compete for jobs and internships. Registration fees will know cost. Interviews are one-on-one and private.

Pre-registration is $10.00. A check or money order to Michigan State University payable, can be sent to Dr. Lawrence E. Reid, 200 Communication Arts Building, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan. For additional information, please call 517-355-5410 or fax 517-355-1244.

The conference is sponsored by the College of Communication Arts and Sciences.

EDITORIAL

The existing communication gap

Tradition.
Definition: n. 1. Transmittal of element of a culture from one generation to another, especially by oral communication. 2. A set of customs and usages transmitted from one generation to another and viewed as a coherent body of precedent influencing the present; heritage. 3. A time-honored practice or set of such practices.

Challenging tradition can seriously threaten who we are as a community and as individuals. Resisting, or diversity, is contrary to who we are and what the world defines us as being.

Diversity.
Definition: n. 1. Differences. 2. Variety.
Diversity seminars, because of the changing world around us, are in place to help us be more sensitive to the differences and variety of people that surround us. So what's the problem? Why isn't this working? Why don't we understand or embrace diversity?

For many years we have been inundated with the tolerance theory.
Tolerance.
Definition: 1. to allow. 2. to recognize and respect (the rights, opinions, or practices of others). 3. To put up with.

We have embraced tolerance. Why?
It's much easier to embrace tolerance. It allows us to ignore people (different backgrounds and experiences) around us without compromising ourselves (tradition). Therefore, it is easier to exclude professionals (peers) from having opportunities.

For instance, buzz words or statements we hear concerning "qualifications." "We don't want to lower our standards" (tradition). "We can't find the best qualified minority faculty" (in the pool of people who actually report their status), (cop-out). "The minorities who are qualified are already teaching at prominent institutions" (excuses).

Because we have missed the mark it's time to start talking again. People must be allowed to come together in a safe forum where and talk even if it's not politically correct or there's peer pressure. Whether talking through some of the prejudices without fear is the only way. Having the courage to attend a safe forum to talk is a virtue not a liability.

It's very important that Harper's faculty and administrators begin to change with the world a round them.

If looks could kill, I'd o.d.

Paul Fickler
Harbinger Columnist

I never let my Bell jeans back in high school.

Well, no. I graduated in '86. Some labeled me as a nerd, the whole by the way I dressed because it was out of style.

Brooks, Rubber, a shirt and Tye Dye. Then that I made myself formed a picture in every one's mind of what I was all about, and for some reason, that picture included a big hairy joint hanging out of my mouth.

My own parents even doubt me when I say I never touched drugs, and my "drugs" friends admit me to it. I've heard what the effects of every thing from acid to THC are from people who've done them, and I guess you could say I'm a pretty well-informed myself without the use of drugs for mind expansion.

I've got a lot of vivid memories, and some sharp memories in a book can be seen through its writing, not only absorbed to the Harbinger, and I don't believe I need drugs to help me get any sicker.

But still, when I tell people I never did drugs, almost always the first response is not "good for you," it's "it must not even a little weed."

"Once."

None. I just used to smoke like I had. And it wasn't because I was rebelling something I'm known for, or I was trying to make people think I was in drugs. I learned that way because I thought it looked cool, and those bells were more comfortable than any cigarettes I'd ever smoked.

But it isn't over. For some reason everybody still thinks I'm on drugs.

Well, no. I'm on drugs, then I really don't care. I've got better things to do than worry about social acceptance of my name. As long as my immense phobia isn't exposed (which could be physically uncomfortable), I'm not concerned.

I guess now was right when she said people accept you for who you are inside, only I wish the way I look wouldn't send children into hysterics, fits of terror, and get cops busy for a hour.

I haven't gotten used to the constant public assumption that I'm on drugs because of my clothes.

Lawns, drugs, and they certainly don't know like the television stereo type because if they did, they'd get bored.

I've had my car searched and been A-1 suited, but every time they do, those poor, deprived of that after-making, drug-bought cops come empty handed. And if they wanted to catch the real dealers, they'd be pulling over the middle-aged man in the Lincoln Town Car because not only is he more likely to have more drugs than a 22-year-old in a heater, but he knows there's a risk chance that they'll suspect him because he looks like an upstanding citizen.

Hell, if I was dealing drugs, I certainly wouldn't be doing my best with the stereotypes, which was, probably started by dealers anyway—to get the heat off their backs.

But the sun still shines and hermit sense of utopia is to believe everything the Tube tells them will keep those video cameras rolling, filming every suspicious moment as I replace my spark plugs in a way that looks "sugary." (It's making up words, don't you? Oh, of course not! Then you'd be on drugs.)

And God knows the hazards of replacing your own spark plugs, which, by the way, is breaking a local ordinance if you live in Schaumburg.

Remember that only emergency repairs can be performed in your own driveway in Schaumburg. You know, Schaumburg, that advanced technological mecca of higher incomes and lower IQ's.

You can replace the one spark plug that doesn't work, but if you replace the other three out of common sense, you are in violation of Schaumburg Zoning Ordinance 4.7.7.42.

P.S. Don't ask.

Letters To The Editor

A pro-life advocate tells his side of the story

After reading Anne Kowalski's "Pro-choice means just that," editorial in the April 15 edition of the Harbinger, I feel motivated to respond with a few thoughts representing the so-called "pro-life" side of the abortion argument.

Before I am dominated by many reading this in an ignorant, uneducated state made because of my opposition to the "pro-choice" position. Let me state that I am well aware of the pressures facing a woman (or girl) with an unplanned or "unwanted" pregnancy.

You see, my younger sister, who happens to be one of my best friends, became pregnant when she was just sixteen. The guy, as does frequently happen, dropped out of sight, leaving my sister to deal with the situation herself. While my sister carried the baby to term, and released Jacob for adoption, I certainly learned that about what it is like for a woman to have an inconvenient pregnancy in today's society.

So I do not speak out of ignorance. Rather, I speak out of concern for deficiencies I see in the "pro-choice" argument.

I should start by saying that Kowalski is correct to point out the double standards which some "pro-life" demonstrators are currently embracing. No there is nothing whatsoever to "pro-life" people killing abortion doctors, or kicking women in the stomach. However, the baby should not be thrown out with the bathwater, so to speak.

Kowalski employed the term "potential children" in her argument. Yet that term has been proven false. Much medical data now exists to prove that a fetus is "alive" from very, very early in the pregnancy. Indeed, no more doctor in America would deny that.

The debate in America has shifted from whether the fetus is a child, to whether that child has the basic human rights of "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." Why is the pregnant woman called a "Mother" when discussing pregnancies which threaten her health, if she is not carrying a child?

Further, Kowalski wrote that "pro-choice does not mean pro-abortion," and that I should not interfere with their decisions and actions unless they will affect me. However, a gaping hole is left in this type of logic.

For instance, suppose it is 1942, and World War II is in progress. Should those people living in Nazi Germany have simply stayed by and allowed Hitler to exterminate millions of Jews, and not even raised a protest, simply because they were not Jewish, and the action did not personally affect them? Kowalski argues that people such as Anne Frank, Corrie Ten Boom, and Dietrich Bonhoeffer are regarded as heroes for their efforts to save the Holocaust.

Taking this logic further, let us suppose that I am a white man in Louisiana in 1955. All around me, black people are being enslaved and cruelly tortured by white plantation owners. Is it not my right and responsibility to speak out on behalf of those brothers and sisters, and indeed perhaps even try to help some of them escape their bondage? Simply because I am white and not personally affected by slavery, does that mean I should keep quiet and let the slave owners do whatever they will, since it is THEIR life, and they have the RIGHT to do what they want?

I believe any rationally thinking person will agree that when a human life is being endangered, we have the right to interfere the oppressor's "rights," and stand up and voice opposition. And that, I feel, certainly applies to the same-day abortion dilemma as well.

A lesson from Native Americans

Paul Gaudin
Harbinger Columnist

This week's column is a continuation of last week's discussion of technology from the idea of author Jerry Mander expressed in his book, The Unsettling of the American Mind: The Failure of Technology & the Survival of the Individual.

What do Indian people have to do with technology you ask? Well, for one thing, they have been the only resistance to the runaway train of the industrial age.

Why should we care about Indians? Aren't they all gone now? No, they must certainly are not gone and they are still being oppressed by the dominant national culture. Why don't Americans know much about Native Americans?

Because we don't teach about them in school and they have been stereotyped by Hollywood, until recently as savages, who are less than human.

We learn in our school systems about Columbus "saving the canals" in 1492. Mander spoke to his sons' high school history class and emphasized five main points about native people: 1) there were millions of Indians living in North America before whites arrived; 2) they were not animals, but lived in highly structured societies that lasted thousands of years; 3) the white visitors started a genocide no matter to wipe out the Indians and steal their land; 4) there are still millions of Native Americans living here and suffering the same types of problems that their ancestors went through and 5) there are millions of native people around the world in danger of losing their cultures and unique knowledge gained from thousands of years of learning.

The U.S. government has shown how much it's bent on worth through the breaking of many treaties.

The government has forced laws that require Indian land to be split up and given to individual families to break up the practice of community land.

This was done to make it easier for the government to buy land from the Indians when just killing them off was no longer politically acceptable.

Benny and Joon; there is someone for everyone

Benny and Joon portrays the mentally ill in a fair way

A film connecting the eccentric

AUSA
Editor
Stacy Winer

Society is full of people with eccentricities. Mild quirks are sometimes viewed as whimsical whereas severe behavioral abnormalities are deemed as signs of mental illness.

The heroes of "Benny & Joon" is a schizophrenia. Yet the script is very in tune about the nature of the illness. In fact, the terms schizophrenia is never mentioned.

Perhaps it coincides with the way society likes to treat mental illness. Outbursts are brushed off as side effects of stress, stress, work or personal problems, also, doubling abuse or character flaws.

Vicinity of mental illness are not always accepted. It's easier to ignore the illness and mock the behaviors. "Benny & Joon" is no different.

Joon (Mary Stuart Masterson) is an intelligent, articulate, artistic, schizophrenic subject to tantrums at the slightest disturbance. Her long suffering brother spends all his waking moments caring for his sister. After all, Joon does need to be monitored. She's filled with all the usual utters and periodically sets loose. In a momentary, this compacts Benny's social life.

One evening, Joon sits in on a game with Benny's friends. The stakes include tickets to a baseball game, a sweater, casual cabbies and a quarter. Joon's hand and inherits Sam (Johnny Depp) as a house guest. (Who says men can't be thought of as Sam in a sense of like an intimate object, a piece of property, lost or won by chance.)

Sam is an odd, sensitive buffoon who wears a porkpie hat, sits on trees and masterfully mimics the prefalls and escapades of his little sister.

Kramer and Charlie Chaplin. He captures Joon's heart. They're two peas in a pod, strayed from the same mold for each other. He makes dinner to his date and wears an iron to prepare a full dinner sandwich when she doesn't mind, sometimes, and down a work of music. It doesn't matter, with a pig pong paddle.

In this film, the people with all moves or eccentricities are perceived as cute or endearing. They are more in touch with reality than we would see most people like Benny, whose life is played by problems.

"Benny & Joon" is a handsomely crafted tale that works. Masterson, Depp and Quinn deliver convincing performances as the insecure emotional couple in love and Joon's overprotective brother. Enjoy the vision of a love and see this gem to the cinema.

AMC
Editor
Al Eder

Mary criticizes her show director. In "Benny and Joon," a love story between two left-of-center individuals, Joon (Mary Stuart Masterson) is a young woman who suffers from a mental disorder which is never quite defined. We can only assume that she has schizophrenia, since she's really in the house that she and her brother (Johnny Depp) share. They allude her pyromania, schizophrenia, and, depending on a flashback to their parents on a terrible car accident. Is that when her fantasy began? We'll never know.

Through a bit of a power game, Benny and Joon are "given" one of Benny's friend's cousins, who he has been asked to take care of. Johnny Depp plays Sam, the eccentric young cousin who's interests consist of old Charlie Chaplin films and making out. We're not too sure of where he comes from but we know that he hasn't had a lot of schooling since he can't write.

There is an instant attraction between Sam and Joon, which Benny can't accept. For the last few years, many years after his blood-sweat and tears have been in Joon, he has been down in a corner asking how not to other interests, he may have had in relationships because he knew he had to take care of Joon. She would call him at work, he's an auto mechanic, every day and ask if he could get some tips on a personal matter. Joon's life is a mess.

Enter Sam. Suddenly Joon's sisters out of control and Benny has time for himself. He has a chance to bring the mysterious, off the wall character who has just entered the scene.

I myself did not have a problem with the fact that the specific mental disorder that Joon suffered from was never mentioned. I enjoyed the portrayal of the relationships between Benny, Joon, Joon & Sam, and Benny & Sam. The film is advertised as a first date movie, well, I see it more as the girls' night out of a flick. I recommend a Friday night ticket.

Harper Chorus presents spring concert

Harper Press Bulletin

For its Spring concert, the Harper Festival Chorus, a northwest suburban community organization of over 120 voices, will present R. Vaughan Williams' Dona Nobis Pacem, and Servietus from Ridgers & Hammerstein.

The Harper College Festival Chorus is not, as its name might suggest, strictly a collegiate music organization, but rather, a fine example of successful town-gown collaboration. As a non-profit community group, it draws its 130 members from the greater northwest suburban area, from Chicago on the east to the Fox River on the west. An affiliation with Harper College allows the chorus to use its facilities and to earn college credit for participation with the group.

The chorus gives two concerts annually, in December and in May, but also has significant bookings for the season music, larger with higher selections for the spring semester. A professional symphony orchestra and its guests to loans from the Chicago area augment the chorus for these performances, where attendance has exceeded 1,000 people. Selections presented in recent years include: Mendelssohn's Elia, Verdi's Requiem, Handel's Giulio Cesare, Schubert's Handel's

Messiah, Gershwin's Porgy and Bess, and A Night of Grand Opera.

The Festival Chorus has toured Europe several times, performing in major cities on the Continent and in Great Britain. Especially noteworthy were trips during the summer of 1986, when the group sang at St. Peter's Basilica in the Vatican, and in 1992, when the chorus participated in the Annual International Church Music Festival in Coventry, England.

The director of the Festival Chorus is Anthony V. Montano, who founded the group in 1983. Born in Rome, Mr. Montano received a bachelor's music training from Giovanni Battista. He has studied at the American Conservatory and has received degrees from Northern Illinois and DePaul Universities. Recently retired from his post as principal of the Clearmont School in Elk Grove Village and music coordinator of school districts '90, he is currently teaching piano, as well as continuing to serve as director of the chorus.

The single performance, to take place on Sunday, May 2, 1993, at 8 p.m. in Building M will feature professional soloists as well as professional orchestra directed by Anthony Montano.

Ticket prices for adults are $10 (if purchased in advance), and $12 at the door. Senior citizens, Harper students, and K-12 will be charged $8.

For further information, call Est. 2547.

Norville singer/songwriter Teresa headlines a free rooftop concert Wednesday, May 4, at Harper College Student Center, Building A. Teresa sings and plays her guitar regularly nationwide for college audiences. Ice cream sundae one a bargain at $6. The Teresa concert, which begins at 12:15pm, is free and open to the public. For more information, call the Student Activities Office at extension 2242.

Harper's Affirmative Action Committee developed the school's affirmative action program two years ago. But what is the outlook for minorities to join the faculty?

Sergeant Barelli, student development counselor, said, "I know there's quality minority people out there. I wish that other areas could find creative ways to get those minority members through to the college."

Barelli was one of the first full-time African-American minorities Harper has employed in a faculty position.

Student Development's hiring of four minority faculty in the past two years is a success story in the college's Preferred Future goal to achieve affirmative action on campus.

"The student development faculty has worked very hard to insure there are minorities in faculty," said Bonnie Henry, Vice President of Student Affairs.

The results speak for themselves. In the past two years, Student Development, which consists of 18 faculty members, has hired four minorities: three African-Americans and one Hispanic.

Henry believes these statistics are a result of "the commitment to the concept that hiring minorities is a good thing." She also said there may be more minority applicants available who have credentials in student development.

Minority hiring could encounter some future setbacks, because of budget restraints.

"Our budget isn't as approved, and until we get into the job market, we are in a disadvantage," said Edmund Dolan, vice president of academic affairs. Dolan recommends Harper look at non-traditional ways of finding new employees—to look at minority publicans, consulting firms that specialize in identifying minorities and networking.

Overall, minorities must be made to feel at home. "Harper is a very nice place. When I came, I was concerned by what other people perceived I was. I don't think there would be any qualifications. But overall I feel comfortable," Barelli said.

Minorities face fewer opportunities

It's not clear what position in Harper's Affirmative Action Committee, vice president of administrative services, takes on affirmative action policies because of the lack of personal knowledge he seems to have about diversity in his department.

"I have never taken the time to do a head count. I would have to get that information from personnel," Mark said.

Mark oversees Public Safety, Operations and Maintenance (janitorial services), Business Services and Finance, Personnel, Physical Plant, Publications and Communications Services, Accounting and Food Services.

College statistics show that most of those areas, Food Services and Janitorial Services, are well represented by minorities.

"I think it's the best participation on campus, in fact, I think it's probably better if as good as you might find anywhere," Mark said.

According to the Equal Employment Opportunity statistical information supplied by Harper's Personnel Department, there were more minority applicants who applied for custodial and food service positions than there were for any other department.

Diversity means that minorities are more qualified for custodial and food service positions, or are openings for clerical, technical, skilled crafts and public safety positions, all with low minority representation on campus, being advertised in different media than the custodial and food service positions.

Advertisements for janitorial positions are generally printed in the Daily Herald, The Chicago Tribune and in some of the minority organizations that have inquired them," Mark said.

However, job searches can be centered among other sources.

For example, minority organizations carry jobs not only for custodial or janitorial help, but for people who have specialized training in all areas.

"Depending upon what kind of position is open, sometimes where you advertise," Mark said. "We also advertise internally so that our people can apply and move up, if the job represents an opportunity for advancement."

However, the strategy for posting jobs internally better be the general public to see them can exclude instead of include, minority participation for skilled jobs.

The latest face of the custodial and food service areas is the Public Safety department which has not one minority representative.

When asked about any future plans for Public Safety to reflect the diversity of the population on campus, King said, "I don't have direct control over the applications we receive."

We advertise in the Daily Herald and I don't know what other advertisements they use.

Public safety, full-time officers must have the equivalent of a high school diploma.

Within six months after being hired, officers are sent to a state police academy for 10 weeks (ten weeks) of training, King said. "Any additional education such as a college education is a bonus."

"When you sit down and interview people, you get a gut feeling whether the person will fit in with your operation," King said.

"From my perspective, it has nothing to do with race or age."

King said there are minority applicants, however the question of race is not on the application.

"If I were to tell looking at an application whether you're dealing with a minority candidate or a non-minority candidate, quite frankly, I don't care," King said.

"I think the best possible candidate for the position is the person who is not to know. Basically, when I am interviewing someone, I really don't try to think about it."

"They are sitting in front of you and usually you can tell if they're Black, Hispanic, or Asian, so I try to eliminate that from my mind."

King said he likes to sit down

Panel focuses on racial differences

Scott Youss
Journalism Student

About 75 people attended a what turned out to be a lively panel discussion on issues affecting minority students on campus. The April 19 service population is differently reflects the faculty.

Her concerns appear valid. The administration staff doesn't have any minorities in full-time positions. Similarly, only three minorities are represented during the session. The minority representation is expressed through diversity in participation and interaction with teachers and other students.

Racial barriers, fear and stereotypes prevent feelings of acceptance, said minority members. Most of the panel, both students and teachers, agreed the burden should be placed on the teacher to lessen any fears felt by any student.

"It bothers me...when the student population so differently reflects the faculty."

Jennifer Thomson
Panel Member

The panel featured seven faculty members and seven minority students. Of the many concerns brought out by the student panel members, one dealt with the way faculty looks, or the appearance of diversity within the teaching and administrative staff. Panel Member Jennifer Thomson, a sophomore journalism student, said, "It bothers me...when the student population so differently reflects the faculty."

ing system "still does not meet the needs of the minority students as well as it should."

However, Lisa Brady, Student Development coordinator and member of the faculty panel said, "Attempts have been made as to how to address that issue," in response to the question of employment practices. An Equal Employment Opportunity Statistics Report backed up Brady's statement. Its figures showed increases in diversity within the Harper workforce throughout the past several years.

Continuation between teachers and students is an another concern discussed during the session. The minority representation expressed their disinterest in participation and interaction with teachers and other students.

Racial barriers, fear and stereotypes prevent feelings of acceptance, said minority members. Most of the panel, both students and teachers, agreed the burden should be placed on the teacher to lessen any fears felt by any student.

Suggestions on how to achieve the goal were given by both sides of the panel. A few offered several suggestions. One was to make the classroom atmosphere friendlier through informality, by keeping interactions to a first-name basis. Another is to bring new students to experience a better relationship with them.

Observers in the audience offered suggestions as well. For example, the importance of displaying racial or cultural personalities from classroom discussions was mentioned.

All in all, it was an evening to consider able problems to a minority, one observer said.

Especially generalizations such as wishing everyone a "Merry Christmas" or assuming that everyone is heterosexual.

Although any biases are "probably done out of ignorance, not intentionally," said Dean of Life Science and Student Services Pat Boucker, they can still be offensive.

The session then said panel member Debra Gudimich, chemistry instructor, is willing "how come you're not understood."

In times when it seems that a war is a fate line between prejudices and generations it is important to remember others, observers said.

Panel member Rex Buwell, assistant professor of English, said "Cultural traits should be given to those who demonstrate what is offensive as they are the ones being offended."

Harris said the first "Dialogue in Diversity" was a success and hopes for future developments in the program.

For now, the panel showed the need for awareness, sensitivity and respect for the concerns of the minorities.

In the future, sponsors of the group hope to see many more efforts to promote the value of cultural diversity within the college.

Gay, Lesbians called unrecognized minority

Ryan Cross

The Harper Gay, Lesbian, and Bisexual Club has climbed its share of walls to achieve equality.

Mike Dolan, the club's president and founder, organized the group last year. Dolan's group met all criteria necessary and applied for status as a formal club on campus. "Their petition was the first ever to be turned down in Harper's 125 years."

In addition to the homophobia on campus, there are certain homophobia on the Student Senate," said Dolan.

After being turned down by the senate the Gay, Lesbian, and Bisexual Club turned to House Henry, Vice President of Student Affairs. Henry used her power to veto the senate's decision.

The club, which has 25 members with an even ratio of men to women, began as a support group. However as the membership has grown, the club has broadened its focus to encompass promoting awareness and campus education concerning homosexuality.

"After all colleges is a place for free exchange of ideas," said Frank Oliver, one of the club's advisors.

Even after all this success the club will still have a long way to go. Even now that the club is official they still keep their meetings secret for fear of intolerance by anti-gay students. This policy stems from the concern that people might congregate outside the meetings and harass the club's members.

Next year, however, the club plans to make its meetings public.

"It's unfortunate when we're the voice is brought up first and ignorance lead in an awful lot of resistance," said co-adviser Rod Brown.

King said the cultural makeup of the campus has changed in the past 15

"We have to change with it," he said.

"I send my officers, and I've also attended cultural diversity training. We will continue this procedure."

We have to change with the community, so basically we treat people the same."

Roommate horror stories...

Course Press Service

Meet the Roommate from Hell. She lives way out where nature then slips it carefully back in your closet with a new tea set. Her vision is drunk, she flirts in the overhead light as you're drifting off to sleep. Her plays music, of questionable taste at to be told. She smokes, you don't. You lunch money vanishes.

There is no more bitter ray of passage than sharing space with a disruptive roommate. Many college students have never bunked with a roommate, but much less experienced being lapped with a stranger who does things they don't understand.

Some first year students are so distraught over a Roommate from Hell that they pack their bags and call it quits. "One prime," they tell their ill-dreaded parents.

Everyone has a horror story. Lesanne Gill, a reporter for the Western Star, the newspaper for Western Oregon State College in McMinnville, interviewed dozens of students about their experiences for a recent story about living situations that are less than perfect.

The student said he found a roommate returning through his drawers. "I'm just looking for drugs," she answered. Another student came home to find his roommate having sex with someone on the bed, no less.

The unfortunate student reported that his roommate had gallantly offered to enter the bathroom and an ever-growing mountain of dirty clothes, then decided to take over the small room.

Another student said a former roommate bought a four-day pass in the middle of finals, made drunken phone calls to 911 and sent a vodka bottle full of dimes in the mail to her own.

One former college student recalled an unexpected for two weeks, her roommate's boyfriend camped out on the floor. There was the Irish Setter and his owner, clearly blind.

from the resident advisors, who took up residence in the suite next door. Still another nightmare involved a prankster for making harassing calls to the girlfriend of a policeman for whom she had developed a "Fatal Attraction" obsession.

What is a student to do? "Learning to live with roommates to share, in part, of the college experience," said Andrew Schein, director of freshmen programs at Xavier University in Cincinnati.

Until the 1970s, say officials, the housing staff would throw students together randomly, even alphabetically, as dorm rooms.

The point was, however, has been a shift to a consumer consciousness aimed at keeping students satisfied.

"We know that how happy and satisfied a student is with his room and roommate experience are so important that colleges now offer conflict resolution procedures and special training for resident assistants to help bring peace to the dorms of the 1990s."

When I was in school in the 1950s, we thought of it as an intellectual bazaar, a place where you had a div and three squares a day. If you were from the South, you'd be thrown in with someone from Brooklyn. It was thought that you would learn from someone from Brooklyn," said Max Johnson, vice president for student affairs at Western College in Salem, Va.

In the 1990s, however, there are with all challenges in camps with will bring stress by an incompatible roommate. Johnson's staff has offered the Myers Briggs personality test to incoming students for six years, dividing the class into general types and making up roommates accordingly. "In the past five years, since giving the Myers Briggs, the number of roommate change requests have dropped. Most people are satisfied with our choices," Johnson said.

The roommate problem scales to university all over. C. J. Siegel at Frederick Md., that Barbara Ingram, director of counseling, wrote the "Roommate Negotiation Workbook."

"It is only necessary (the roommate) to understand that I don't mind respect each other's rights. It is not necessary that we have the same feelings, preferences and opinions," the book says.

Head College offers these procedures for roommates to work out problems. Negotiation is used when issues are not of major importance and when the students are not particularly emotionally upset.

Mediation involves an outside and is used when negotiation fails and issues have reached crisis proportions. Arbitration, the last step available for Hovd students, is when a mediator meets with each roommate individually and hears rules that govern the act of conflict.

Even when roommates have already decided they will not live together in the future, the process can be a valuable learning experience and enables people to terminate a roommate relationship with dignity and respect," according to the workbook.

At Warburg College, Armstrong said, "negotiation is not" given throughout to new roommates. They continue until they find a solution to all the common problems that can occur in a residence hall room.

Students are told to fill out an identification, measure about themselves, read them to their roommates, and discuss any differences.

"We even teach students to articulate themselves in the language of watching their words, when to keep the room neat in a more casual way," Armstrong said.

Roommate contracts help remove the problems, at W. Lee College in Chambersburg, Pa. where the living staff is taught to assist in helping roommates.

At Susquehanna University in Selingsport, Pa. housing officials try to ensure the best possible match but roommates get together by having them answer extensive questions about personal habits.

The resident assistants have the roommate draw up contracts if there are roommate disputes.

College campuses become more aware of harassment

There's been a shift on U.S. college campuses since the Anita Hill Clarence Thomas hearings, galvanized the nation on October 1991. At Louisiana State University, attorney Robert Ruggie, lawyer's special committee about sexual harassment, what it is, what it isn't, play in packed houses.

"We are taking the subject very seriously," Pitts said, noting that the seminars attract not only students, but faculty and staff as well. LSU was in the process of updating their sexual harassment policies at the time of the televised hearings.

In addition to defining sexual harassment in their policy, said Pitts, the administration added a step-by-step process for the handling of harassment complaints that included instructions on what office to report to.

The policy established very clear lines of responsibility. We spelled it out very clearly for the deans, faculty, staff and employment specialists," Pitts said.

One of 150 harassment complaints on the past year to the Affirmative Action Office. Pitts reported that 10 were for sexual harassment. The others involved racial slurs.

In most cases it was simply a matter of making the person aware that their behavior was unacceptable," he said.

"In very rare cases that we've and spiraling the person something like 'Don't use the words 'babe' or 'gal' he said."

He cited a risk director of affirmative action at Columbia University in New York City, said that while sexual politics about harassment have remained the same, students pay a lot closer attention to the possibilities on the subject of the Hill Thomas hearings.

Before, they only would look over. Now, they just much more at them. They ask questions. They know they could be vulnerable to charges," she said. Pitts also reported that she has seen a difference in the kind of sexual harassment complaint brought to her attention since the hearings.

"They come from a group of women, rather than just one woman, who appear to have been talking among themselves and said enough is enough, and file a complaint about a colleague," Frank said.

The groups had not thought of the behavior as "harassment" until the Anita Hill Clarence Thomas hearings, she said, even though the university had distributed materials defining sexual harassment and offered assistance to victims before then.

Also, Columbia recently issued a statement regarding romantic relationships between students and faculty, and administration and support personnel, Pitts stated.

In the University of Virginia, which is considering a ban on liaisons between students and faculty, Columbia University says "extreme caution" to make certain the attraction is not a consensual relationship, it is said, consensual has been.

At the University of Wisconsin at Madison, a handful of women, as known to one another, separately complained about the harassment by a staff member within the first three weeks of the 1992 academic year. The staff member was fired for inappropriate behavior.

"We've seen some indication of increased awareness of sexual harassment since the hearings," she said.

There was a point in time when credibility was such a problem when people made a complaint. People just wouldn't believe them."

Joey reported that W. Madison had only seven sexual harassment policies in place before the hearings.

"Now, students and staff receive the names and phone numbers of 200 trained campus persons who are stationed throughout the campus to receive harassment complaints.

Job outlook good

Hiring prospects are improving for the second quarter of this year, according to a survey of 15,980 businesses nationwide.

Manpower's eighth second-quarter hiring plans showed that 26 percent of respondents said they would increase staff levels during the March-May period and 7 percent reported plans for work reductions.

Employers are now planning to staff their second and seasonal variations of the past two years. It appears we are headed for a real increase," said Manpower President Mitchell Freeman.

The figures represent an increase from last quarter, when 17 percent planned further hiring and 13 percent were cutting back, according to Manpower. A Milwaukee-based temporary help service. For the second quarter, a year ago, 21 percent of the firms surveyed were planning to increase work force.

A breakdown of professions and hiring plans include:

*Construction: Spring is the traditional period for a rise in construction hiring. 16 percent of the surveyed firms plan more hiring, and 6 percent plan cutbacks.

*Transportation and public utilities: Hiring increases will lag behind most other industries, with 18 percent expecting to hire and 9 percent planning their workforce accordingly.

*Finance, insurance and real estate: These professions are starting to move forward in hiring. Manpower said, although at a slow rate. Of the firms surveyed, 21 percent said they will increase personnel and 6 percent will be reducing staff levels.

*Education, public, and private jobs: In these fields, which have been hard to find in the past two years, are not blossoming up. Manpower found only 12 percent of the respondents plan to hire teachers, and 6 percent will seek decreases.

*Public administration: The outlook for government jobs remains weak. Budget pressures, especially in the South and West, require 20 percent expecting to hire workers, but 10 percent seeking cutbacks.

Reduce, reuse, and recycle

Angie Waxner
Copy Editor

Since dumpsters turned the planet disposal of waste material had been an annoying, yet necessary, part of everyday life. Though the method has changed through the centuries, it's always been done in a systematic manner.

Accumulation of debris in the area around Middle East cities accounted for a rise in the land almost five feet each century, well above the surrounding plains.

During the Bronze Age, buildings in Troy became so cluttered with items the rats were periodically raised to accommodate the inhabitants. Nets to throw out large pieces of garbage were hung out the windows of multi-story buildings, where pigs and dogs quickly appeared to eat everything. Today, in parts of India, raw sewage is still sold in the streets.

Americans don't throw raw sewage in the streets, but other waste regulations vary widely by state.

Alabama does not separate garbage, but Illinois does separate everything — plastic, glass, aluminum, yard waste and paper along with solid waste.

An Alabama official said the system density regulates where garbage ultimately goes — highly populated areas have fewer regulations.

Each U.S. citizen disposes of approximately three and a half pounds of garbage per day. For a total of one billion pounds. "Once people put out their garbage, they forget about it. It becomes a problem," quipped Ed McKesney, garbage collector with Browning-Ferris Industries.

"We have a crisis on our hands," John Hertz, director of public works, Birmingham, Illinois, said when he referred to the number of landfills in the U.S. There are fifteen thousand landfills today, eight percent less than ten years ago.

Browning-Ferris provides containers for each citizen so they can separate their solid waste, aluminum, plastic, paper, plastic and yard waste. Hertz said the state prohibits yard waste in a landfill so it is recycled and baled to Union, Illinois, where landscapers reuse it. "Glass and aluminum are easy to recycle, but cardboard is troublesome because a variety of different types of glass, plastics and cardboard are used. This makes it difficult to recycle," Hertz said.

Birmingham's solid waste is taken to the Milled Lake landfill in Hoover Park. Milled Lake was a large lake owned by the DuPage Forest Preserve when Browning-Ferris Industries bought the contract.

Every day, trucks from surrounding communities arrive with solid waste for the landfill. Because no burning is allowed, each layer of refuse is compacted with rollers, or dirt compaction, then the dirt and refuse are further compacted into solid cubes of waste to save space of its original size. The entire process is monitored daily by the DuPage Forest Preserve inspectors.

Last June a gas emitted from the garbage is sucked up by a leachate collection system and recycled through the garbage, where it is eventually baled away and treated in the same manner as sewerage," said Ray Mason, reporting secretary at Milled Lake. "None of the surrounding residents complain about an odor from the landfill."

Milled Lake has an ecorecord to close December 31, 2003," John Brooks, landfill manager, said. "It will be handed back to the DuPage Forest Preserve, which will turn the land into a recreational facility. At present, a replacement site has not been selected. The Environmental Protection Agency must approve the site selection."

In the East coast corridor, finding space for a landfill is our biggest problem. Alfredo Barrio, consumer representative with Scott Paper Co. said. In Pennsylvania, any town with more than 100 people must recycle three items: usually glass, aluminum and plastic.

Problems remain because they don't know what to do with the recycled trash. It's still in the infant stage.

With continuing government regulations and varying municipal laws, handling garbage is becoming more complicated and costly. Each municipality has varying regulations and this increases the cost of disposal," John Baldoni, general manager of Browning-Ferris Industries said.

Scott Paper Co. makes 50 percent of its 100 percent recycled paper. It's packaging from a self-free number, a Consumer Relations Department and the following information on their products. Scott Paper Co. has long known that solid environmental practices make good sense. We manage our land and our business in trust for future generations.

In 1987, Scott was named Commensurate of the Year by the Alabama Wildlife Federation and the Governor of the state.

The American Plastics Council, Washington, D.C., provides recycling information. "Plastic is broken down into seven categories, washed and the mix and paper are removed, ground, pulped and recycled," Denise Rover, information specialist, said.

"Although the use of the term biodegradable and photodegradable plastic gives people the impression science has solved the problem and plastic breaks down harmlessly into the environment, this is not so," Rover added. "Photodegradable never totally degrades in the environment, and biodegradable material does not break down through natural causes, but sends other influences to the totally broken-down into the environment."

Government officials had millions of tons of waste and hospitals were throwing out blood and damaged body parts. Facilities were discarding thousands of power screws and nails and had had construction debris. Nuclear power plants were producing radioactive waste. Because of the problems, former President Richard Nixon reorganized the U.S. Department of Health, Agriculture and Commerce and in 1970, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) was created to handle environmental issues.

The EPA defines its mission as the protection and enhancement of the earth and its citizens, both nationally and globally. While the federal EPA makes the regulations, each state is responsible for enforcing the waste management, hazardous waste sites, water quality, control of asbestos, pesticides and air quality.

Responsible corporations are sensitive to environmental needs because it is a condition of staying in business. Maintaining the environment is bad business.

There is a growing environmental crisis: systems and activities today's youth. In many communities across the country, young people work together in their efforts to learn about the environment and the children's section in most libraries helps kids with environmental books about the subject.

At William P. Tatem Elementary School in Collegeville, N.J., nearly 2,000 pounds of post-consumer recycled plastic was used to make two new playgrounds. And at Walden, The Success Garden, children play on 5,500 milk jugs.

Nerve Valdheim, manager with Browning-Ferris Industries, offers these suggestions.

Be sure to separate all garbage.
2. Take an active interest in where your community disposes its garbage.

Our primary concern should be source reduction: recycling and reuse of material, recovery and reuse of energy, and last, lifting of reusable, residual waste. Humankind has the power to turn around the process and become involved in the solid waste destiny of their garbage by playing an active role.

Condom lady

"When you take off your pants, like my mania say Don't forget the piece you have to put," coaxed the grandmotherly woman as she squeezed her guest in the lobby of the Student Health Center at Ohio State University.

Meet Jane the Condom Lady. A familiar figure on the OSU campus, the fifty-something Jane Scott helps out prophylactic issues and passes out condoms in a women's center to promote safe sex and raise AIDS awareness on campus.

"She is a tremendous lady, lots of fun," said Mary Ann Joseph, coordinator of nursing at the OSU student health center.

"She is a big presence for us." The mother of three sons, Scott became aware of the dangers of unprotected sex several years ago and took it upon herself to leave condoms on their pillows, she said in a story in the Ohio State Lantern, the campus paper.

"Not that I made her spend time, and she gets requests from all over the country to teach health officials how to encourage students to use condoms."

"I work more of her staff at the American College Health center."

Her unusual condom packages are assembled by the hundreds in the basement of her Columbus home, with members of the Health Center staff occasionally assisting in the production lines.

Scott says the packages get people to talk about condom use. For instance, one package has a tiny girl glued in with a card that reads, "Cover me. I'm going."

Another Halloween special features a small orange pumpkin attached to the package with a card that reads, "Don't get tricked. Use your treat."

For Valentine's Day, Scott added a tiny red heart and a card that reads, "I have a heart on for you."

Scott has passed out condom samples to students in dorms, Greek houses and formal dinners.

Her songs and poems are sprinkled with references to date rape and alcohol abuse, as well as condoms.

"Kids know a lot about HIV, but their knowledge doesn't mean they behave it OK," said Joseph, who said that more OSU students were treated for sexually transmitted disease than were the state and college last year.

YOUR DEGREE COULD BE CLOSER THAN YOU THINK.

Roosevelt University's Arlington Heights Campus requires fewer hours for graduation — traveling hours, that is. Not only do those hours add up, but so does the money you save, because you can live at home. What's more, our accommodating mix of week-day, weekend and evening classes permits you to make money, working part time or even full-time. Each semester more than 2,500 students enjoy these advantages while pursuing a degree at Roosevelt. You can earn your bachelor's or master's degree primarily at our Albert A. Robin Campus in a variety of subject areas including Business Administration, Education, English, Public Administration and History. So when you consider which four-year university to attend, remember you can go a long way further in your education when you don't have to go a long way to your campus.

Time for Da Bulls to pass on the NBA championship

Last Season
Harbinger Sports Council

Before you decide to burn me at the stake, I think it is a little premature to make a decision.

My five pass at pick prognostication has left me in a little bit of a bind, as you see. For me, for you, for everyone. Let's face it, though, who da Bulls? Da Hawks and the mighty Bulls would be a very good bet, like so many have said on the net after a hat trick. "The only good thing about two of the best teams being knocked out this early is that Pittsburgh and Vancouver are more likely to meet in the finals."

I know I'm in the minority, but I've got to pick the Hawks. I'm not going to do it again this week. On April 25, the regular season ended. By the time most of you read this, the first night of the playoffs are complete. We have many interesting matchups this round, but there should be few surprises.

I'll start in the East for no other reason than the fact that we're taking one that goes in my opinion at the end of the season. The night of April 29 takes us to Cleveland vs. Boston. The third-seeded Cavaliers meet up with the fading New Jersey Nets. Derrick Coleman carried the Meadowlark Muffins for most of the season, but Mark Price and crew should prevail in four games. The Celtics have been riding the nostalgia wave for two or three seasons, but I'm a Boston fan, and true, but the Hornets should push them to a fifth game showdown, with Charlotte coasting the NBA history books that are the Celtics. April 30 should bring no surprises for the New York Knicks. The Knicks should handle the Pacers in the Garden, but Indiana will be a better match-up at Madison Square Arena. Look for the Pacers from the Big Apple to win in four games. The Bulls have to live up to all the three-point talk and it will take its toll. The Hawks will push the Bulls in game five, but Chicago will pull through.

The Western Conference will go by with no surprise. The Phoenix Suns should handle the Lakers and then the Trail Blazers will eliminate Houston. Houston has a couple of games left, but the Clippers, but has to face a tough team in the Seattle SuperSonics. The Rockets will win, but will be run ragged in seven games. This will leave the Rockets in poor shape to match up with the Suns. They might push for Charles and company to win games, but the All-Star season for Phoenix will make it to the finals with the advantage of fresh legs and a day or two off.

You may have noticed the conspiracy of an abundance of predictions for the first round of the Eastern Conference. Well, I wanted to make a few, but I thought I might need a topic for next week. Actually, I overlooked it, I promise I will have some for you next week.

I'm going to finish with some comments about last week's "One on One" column. Sexual discrimination does exist in sports and elsewhere, but we are a long way from remedying the situation. It takes years for anyone to come up in the coaching/management ranks of any sport. Women's rights have only been a glacial pace for a decade or so, and only five or six years in sports. Women aren't going to be given three jobs just because they are women. They have to earn them just like everybody else.

Softball team threatens late, but falls to Moraine Valley

Joe Valente
Sports Editor

Even with ever improving play, the Harper softball team just couldn't stick up the bats.

When the Harper softball team met up with Moraine Valley April 24, the wind blowing 25 miles per hour towards dead center was nearly the game of the day, but the Hawks' comeback was cut just short of a win.

The first game of the day wasn't very pretty. Hawks losing a lopsided 11-4 decision, but the second game went right down to the wire.

Moraine Valley started the game with one run in the first inning after two batters. Harper rallied in three runs in the bottom of the second when Heather Anderson, recently moved to second base from the outfield to improve the team's infield defense, led off with a single and advanced to second on a sacrifice by Lauren Kerting.

Ken Valente followed with a walk to set up runners on first and second for Keri Oliver. After a wild pitch to moving up the runners, Oliver doubled for two RBIs and a 2-1 lead. Keri White followed moving Oliver to third on a two-base error by the MV shortstop. The final run of the inning came on a single by Michelle Beard, driving the run home for a 3-1 lead.

Moraine Valley pulled to within one run in the fifth after an error and three runs hit. After an unceremonious bottom of the inning by Harper, MV created their own rally in the top of the sixth, scoring three runs and moving ahead 5-3.

The wind then nearly saved the Hawks in the bottom of the seventh when with two out Diana Lombardi hit a ball between the center and right fielders for what looked like a routine double, but a strong wind carried the ball and turned the hit into an inside-the-park home run.

A single and controversial action helped Michelle Chen let the Hawks two bases away from tying the game up, but Stephanie Willard hit a dribbler that the catcher picked up and threw to first to end the game.

The first game of the day didn't exactly have the emotion of the second. Two consecutive run-scoring in the third and fourth innings had the Hawks in high spirits, but the teams experienced both costly mistakes and Moraine Valley scored four times in the fourth, three times in the fifth, and twice in both the sixth and seventh innings to secure an 11-4 victory.

Head Coach Jennifer Jensen said afterwards that while the teams' overall defense was making great strides, "there are still things on the field a pretty deep hole (with errors), and just can't get it out."

The Hawks are just getting used to playing outdoors due to bad early season weather and Jensen says "that hanging light" but gaining enough experience by play-off time to be competitive may be tough.

Adam Boske puts the finishing touches on "Hot Field" during the Moraine Valley game April 27

Correction

In last week's sports coverage, Head Track Coach Renee Zellner was quoted as calling the track team the only "true" athletes at Harper. That portion of the article was meant in jest. It was in no way meant to demean the other athletes of the school. We apologize if it offended anyone.

Baseball

of the day.
Avalanche began the Harper inning by reaching on an error. O'Grady sampled next before Barklins singled to load the bases. After a run scoring sacrifice by Jim "ah, go" Schener, Bill Barrett doubled home two more runs. A single by Mark Perry scored the fourth run, and after a stolen base, sacrifice and passball, Perry advanced to give the Hawks a 5-0 lead.

A valiant, Garrett said with one towards with a smile "I just love those five run innings."

Harper scored once more in the fourth and twice in the fifth, but the runs were unceremonious in a losing pitcher Tony Gillet allowing only two runs in a fifth inning home.

HOLY COW!

Bats come to life as Hawks show what they're made of

Joe Walcott
Sports Editor

"This is what we thought we'd be doing."

Head Baseball Coach Norm Garrett couldn't figure out why the Hawks couldn't get hits until this past week. However, when he did figure out the problem, he struck gold.

A simple change in batting practice has the Hawks, who began the season 2-12, on a massive team hitting streak. The club has scored 10 runs or more six times during the past week and has won 10 of their last 12 games.

April 27, Moraine Valley came in Palatine expecting an easy win from the formerly pumpe producing Hawks and left stunned and battered.

Starting the first game strong, Moraine Valley jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the first inning off Hawk pitcher Scott Kilpatrick, but would never touch him again.

The Hawks clipped away at the lead in the second and third innings, scoring once each before exploding for five in the bottom of the fourth.

A double by Brad Berkman started things off. One out later a triple by Bill Barrett scored Berkman, and consecutive singles by Mark Perna and Andy Ashby brought the next run home. A walk to Tony Gilio, double by Mike Swaka, and two-run double by Phil O'Grady capped the scoring drive.

Catcher Adam Rowan commended after the rally that hit "Harper Field," a sand creation made at his feet or the dugout, was the reason for the Hawks' booming bats. He may have just been right. As Rowan headed to get a drink of water, the "stadium" was destroyed by a train wreck, and seen after the scoring drive and game ended 7-3 to the Hawks' favor.

The second game was even more fun for the Harper team who won 8-3. In that game, Harper was the first to score with their second live run coming (Continued on page 11)

Eye on the Hawks

Give credit where credit is due. It's an over-used cliché, but it still holds merit. I may catch some slack from my fellow journalists and especially our faculty advisor for my column this week, but some things need to be said.

Heather Carroll, my best friend and former Managing Editor has moved on to other projects in her life. While on the staff, most of us made the mistake of taking her knowledge and experience for granted. She has spent more time in journalism than most of the rest of The Harbinger staff combined.

Who thought of the "One on One" column you are reading right now? Heather Carroll. Where did the idea of "A Step Ahead" come from? Heather.

Most of you probably have a clue that our newspaper has changed our look lately. Because I spent time at the computer actually entering the concepts of how the new pages should look, I've wrongly accepted credit for the new design.

The original idea of how The Harbinger flags new look came from Heather. This newspaper has seen the rebirth of press for our Hawk sports teams. This change would never be possible without Heather's help. As sickly as I usually appear to be, I'm not a great editor. When this semester began, I was even a questionable editor. But I've gotten a great deal of help from one Heather Carroll. She has passed her journalistic experience on to me.

She's shown me what's right and what's wrong. She's shown me what people want to read and what they don't. She's taught me to be as good as I can be, and for that I'm forever grateful.

Yes, we've had our problems. It hasn't always been smooth sailing in these offices. Working a college newspaper is a very tough thing to do. Some of us put in 40-50 hours a week. What do we get in return? Partial tuition. Oh, yeah.

What we do on this newspaper is a very non-cash thing. At this point of the semester, emotions run high and pressure is intense.

Many of us do things we're really, really proud of, and for that I have an apology to make. I'd like to say I'm sorry to Heather and to anyone else I may have stepped on along the way.

One On One

The last One (on One)

Joe Walcott
Sports Editor

Hello and goodbye. Yeah, it's true this will be my final "One on One." As of this week, I will no longer be working for the Harbinger.

Since I am leaving, I thought I owed it to you, the readers, a farewell. I just couldn't leave "One on One," "One on Nine," without doing so.

I just need to move on. People have always told me that it's the best sometimes to move on. But recently my job at the paper in Woodstock has required more of my time. I see no need to go any further.

I have enjoyed writing both "At a Glance" and "A Step Ahead" as much as I hope you have enjoyed reading them.

I would prefer to continue to write for the Harbinger but time has caught up with me. I guess that things like this happen.

At a glance

Well, I really don't have much else to say. Jim and I, unfortunately, did not choose to argue. (Except for whether I should stay or leave.)

Even though I am leaving the Harbinger I still will be around campus. So if you see me there's one thing both Jim and I would like to know.

Over the past four months who really won "One on One"? Anyway, this is my final goodbye. Goodbye!

Editor's note:

Due to the departure of Heather Carroll, a very important portion of the sports page is left vacant. Anyone interested in guest writing for "One on One" in the last two issues please contact Jim Walcott in the Harbinger office, A 367, ex 2461.

Senate meeting all talk, no action

KAREN DILLARD
Editor-in-Chief

Choosing out the school was an unusual fashion in the Student Senate voted 5-4 last Friday to spend its remaining $2,240 on a trip for the astronomy club, instead of a new CD-ROM system for the library.

Voting members Al Nichols, Melissa Neubauer and Prashant Rawal voted in favor, casting their proxy votes for the measure.

Cheryl Brandt and Bonnie Jones voted against it, in addition to their proxy votes.

Proxy votes are cast when senators who are unable to attend an upcoming meeting give their power of voting to another senator.

The decision came after over an hour of deliberation.

John Stuart, media specialist for the Learning Resources Center, gave a brief presentation on the system and its capabilities.

"It's not just an encyclopedia," Stuart said, describing the system and its purpose. "It allows students access to information from other area libraries on a much faster time than currently available."

A representative from the astronomy club, whose identity wasn't readily available, then presented his presentation on a trip to New Mexico to observe meteorites.

"We don't look for much," he said. "It's just that we need the assistance, this time."

After hearing both arguments, the senate discussed the issue, before a motion was introduced to support the astronomy club.

"The purpose of the trip is to help the club," said "Ned," proxy vote represented Dean Springer. "I mean, the current student interest."

And the astronomy club is the most active club we have on campus with over 25 social functions during the past year.

After the vote was taken, Senate President Charles January heard asked these in favor of the club to reconsider their vote. Toward they refused.

January then asked the vote, casting his disapproval with the senate. "The choice is pretty obvious," January said.

"It is the benefit of the astronomy club."

approved to the benefit of 24,000 (the club).

After the vote, a motion was brought up to approve the funds for the computer, but was subsequently turned down by the same 5-4 vote.

"Neither side was willing to negotiate," Spring instead to hold a special meeting to discuss where the funds will be distributed.

"I don't understand why the senate is unwilling to negotiate," said Sharon Allen, senate advisor. "This conflict is really unnecessary."

Later on the day, January related a letter to the administration. After "We need to find a way to get the funds to be given to the astronomy club."

"I decided the senate is a victim."

in approving the motion, it $2,240 to the astronomy club," the letter stated. It listed other reasons for the reversal in decision.

Adding further confusion to his decision making policy, January also stated his second voting of Kim Hansen and Michael Dekan as senate members.

January had saved these names to vote earlier in the year, only to grant them senate status in late March.

Earlier, during the meeting, January had also given both former senators the confusion that he had caused this far and thanked them for their understanding.

January's decision leaves seven members on the senate.

January, Neubauer and Rawal were not available for comment.

Lab aide learns valuable lesson after shooting

Flying bullets hit home as employee puts life on line for family

DAVID BLOOM
Staff Writer

There was another drive-by shooting, but don't get too comfortable in your suburban home with spot lighting in your feet.

It could be a startling reality for someone you love, as it was for Sylvia Badano, a Harper ESL lab aide assistant and her family on Saturday, March 20.

They had spent the day visiting close friends and she finished having dinner at a charming restaurant in Little Mexico, Chicago.

Just as they were leaving, a car came from around the corner and started shooting at them.

They immediately ducked down, but Sylvia's husband, Hector, was shot in the bridge of his nose.

"I heard the banging. I pushed them into the car," said Badano, recalling the accident.

She protected her family from the stray bullets by pushing them into the back seat of their smoky parked car, unconcerned with her own danger. To Carolina, her four-year-old daughter, it felt more like a movie, but if she only knew how brave her parents were.

"I did not want her to be scared," said a 3-1-1 dispatcher who later discovered that her husband also been hit in the lower back.

Sylvia spent eight days in Cook County Hospital and the bullet which was embedded in her neck from his spinal cord, was removed last week.

She is now at her seventh week of recovery, but already, Badano has returned slowly to her job here at Harper.

She has been working at the ESL (English as a Second Language) Lab for four years and is now the head FSL. Its training lab aide assistant.

"I know the situation. I'm glad to be back," From what I saw on my visit with her, Badano was more than well-com e d back with guns, banners and cheerful faces from friends who missed her during her stay in the hospital.

Badano is originally from Mexico and has been living in the United States for a total of 11 years, but this incident has not changed her view of America.

According to Badano, she is not angry with the people who shot at her and her family.

"I feel very sad," replied Sylvia.

She feels sorry for them. That they don't have any love in their hearts.

"I would ask them who they loved," indicating a strong relationship between family values and behavior.

Officer Michael Macinara, Chicago Police Department, was unavailable for a statement, but the police told Badano that there was nothing they could do.

"I only have one life," Badano said.

She has realized the impact of one powerful incident on her and her family.

Journalism convention brings high school students to campus

AUSA CHENLID
Staff Writer

Last week, 130 high school students and 70 advisers attended the Northern Illinois Student Press Association (NISPA) conference here.

"Most of the attendees are graduating seniors so they're looking ahead," Rhia Dawson, executive secretary for the NISPA spring conference and administrative faculty, journalism, said. "A cool place to be."

The conference is an annual event at Harper. "We're now up to three," Journalism Coordinator Suzanne Havis said. "Last year the conference was better and better."

Three years ago, NISPA President Tom Gebhart asked Havis to host the conference.

Previous 1991, it was held at Northern Illinois University.

This year, one highlight was the awarding of the Paul Harper Memorial Scholarship, an opportunity by NISPA and NISPA, from students Sara Brandt and Kimberly Beyer of Prospect High School. Havis judged this year's school and applications and selected winners for the $500 scholarship.

Students from all high schools had the opportunity to learn about story ideas, interviewing, writing, layout, advertising and managing a yearbook.

Another conference highlight was the keynote address by Doug Longhini, executive producer of Channel 5's Unit 5 news program.

"We had several students who were present in our program and working at The Mailer for next year," Dawson said.

NISPA will remain in program for next year but Havis and Dawson hope to raise Harper orientation.

"We hope next year to be more aggressive in recruiting information for students who think they may or may want to come to Harper to show them what Harper can do for them," Dawson said.

The conference was a success, Havis said. "This was a record year for attendance."

"We appreciate the support of the entire Harper community, everybody who made it possible from the physical plant all the way up to the top of the administration and every one in between for tolerating and supporting it emotionally and financially," Havis said.

Harper trustee, Barbara Barton honored by USC

Harper College Trustee and President Barbara Barton has been chosen to an honorary membership by the Central Alumni Board of Governors of the University of Southern California.

A profile of Mrs. Barton appeared in a recent newsletter published by the University of Southern California. A former trustee of the university, she has been a member of the "women graduate program" at USC since 1968.

The Association of Southern California Universities, which represents the interests of the state's public and private universities, has elected Mrs. Barton a trustee.

and her husband Ken Barton, an urban '68 graduate, have been officers of the USC Alumni Board of Governors since 1981.

Mrs. Barton is especially proud of her work as president and trustee of the Trustee College Associates of Greater Chicago. The University of Southern California's first non-student trustee organization. Mrs. Barton is a member of the Harper College Board of Trustees, which she and Chairman of the Board for two years, also served as vice president and president of the Illinois Community College Trustees Association.

As the mother of six children, all of whom have attended community college, Mrs. Barton continues to be an education advocate. She was influential in obtaining an agreement with the U.S. where about 10% of the freshmen classes come from the Chicago land area. Recently, she has been active with U.S.C. and Harper College. Mrs. Barton is president of the board of the Peace Center for the Americas in Schaumburg and is a member of the boards of the League of Women Voters and the American Association of University Women.

Letters To The Editor

Norris encouraging student input during his term as trustee

To the students
I first want to thank all the people who voted for me. I am grateful for your support and I pledge to listen to any of your comments or suggestions and to be an exemplary student advocate for your behalf. I also want to thank all the people who helped me campaign, especially Melinda Neuhaver. One of my first goals is to have an open-minded policy running all future elections so that each candidate running gets a fair and equal chance, and especially so that no student can run an election because they are manning the polls or counting the votes. I can be reached at extension 2244 on campus or you can write me in person at A332 on Mondays between noon and 2 p.m.

Sincerely yours,
Al Norris, Student Trustee

Candidate gives thanks for support during election run-offs

To the students
I would like to pass on thanks to all students who voted for me in the run-off election. I appreciate your support and will continue my efforts to serve the student body. Special thanks to all those campaigners who aided in one or both elections.

To my opponent Mr. Norris, I challenge to accomplish no less than what I would have accomplished as student trustee. I think that your meeting the student's needs are essential to inspire and record the student voice. Your agenda should be published in the Harbinger along with a post-meeting analysis. You've got the title now, earn your keep!

Arthur Weisk

One disgruntled voice dislikes the way campaign is run

To the editor:
I need to get something cleared up in my mind. Was this past election a national event in a junior college election? In a national election we know what happens who our great officials will be, but in the Harbinger election, days went by before the outcome of a few hundred votes? Why in such a simple matter turned into something so complex and secretive?

Another concern I have is knowing who the candidates are by appearance. I'd like to be able to open them on campus if I have concerns. When Al Norris and why in all the election publication and campaigning did I never once see his photo?

This should be a requirement of all candidates simply for the purpose of recognition of the concerned student. I was able to recognize Art Weisk immediately in an H-club society last

Thank you,

The Native American lesson

Paul Goodman
Harbinger Columnist

This week's column is an estimation of how one of the most important ideas of the 20th century, the idea of the Native American, has been expressed in the United States. The idea of the Native American is a complex one, and it is one that has been expressed in many different ways. It is a way of looking at the world that is both simple and profound. It is a way of looking at the world that is both old and new. It is a way of looking at the world that is both American and universal.

There has been a lot of talk about the Native American in recent years. It has been a topic of discussion in the media, in the classroom, and in the living room. It has been a topic of discussion that has brought people from different backgrounds and different parts of the country together. It has been a topic of discussion that has helped us to understand each other better. It has been a topic of discussion that has helped us to see the world from a different perspective.

Backstage Pass

What really goes on in that castle?

"My Lords and Ladies, welcome to Medieval Times!" booms over the crowd's heads in the Hall of Arms. The crowd is spotted with green, red, blue, yellow, and black & white. A few individuals prefer to wear their crowns up, side down or in a queer fashion. I worked at Medieval Times as a guard/diplomat/entertainer, which simply means I was in the sound and lighting department. I would check in and then, if I was guarding, would go outside and fight the intruder who would not visit and demand access to it not being included in the tournament. The King of Arms would come out and battle the wicked intruder to go away. The guards stand on it about half hour, thousands of people take their pictures with us, and then go inside to get our pictures taken in the knight's ceremony.

The Knighting Ceremony consists of a photo wench (who takes your picture), the count (who runs you to the holy altar of St. Martin), and two guards who stand there for a reason what never.

In the Hall of Arms, you can spend lots of money in the gift shop, or the game room, or the large track, or the dining hall.

The Dungeon is full of replicas of actual historical instruments of torture and torture used during the Middle Ages. People usually love this part.

Finally, it's time to enter the arena. The guards have to stand in front of the doors acting in a crowd control (which is really impossible) and many of the guards are drunk. The only defense is a long spear called the guards.

The people rush into the arena, find their seats, and begin the experience. The Arena is divided into four by the squares and the King of Arms.

When everyone is seated, the lights dim and the experience begins. First the Master of Ceremonies introduces the knights and the green crowd. Then the show begins with "medieval get-together" medley. The horses engage in jousting drills where they drive in "The Squire" or "The Spanish Walk." You can see that the crowd is thinking "I can't believe I have to do this. I don't want to."

Next, we meet "Squire on a Stick." The King of Arms comes out with a squire riding bare horse back with a bar behind his back, restricting his arms. This is so he can learn the balance, control and posture that are imperative to being a knight. The King of Arms directs the squire around the arena a few times and then puts him in the "ultimate test" and the squire rides on his own. Very exciting stuff!

Out comes the Master of the Hall of Arms, you can spend lots of money in the gift shop, or the game room, or the large track, or the dining hall. The Dungeon is full of replicas of actual historical instruments of torture and torture used during the Middle Ages. People usually love this part.

Finally, it's time to enter the arena. The guards have to stand in front of the doors acting in a crowd control (which is really

The rest of the show involves a "surprise" visit from two ambulatory knights. The knights come out with a table placed in the center of the arena and play a few rounds of joust. Then change of pace to "Fletcher and a Squire" with chess. The Green Knight cheats.

No! I'm kidding. They perform "game-like" joust the flag back and forth riding really fast on his horse. "I've got a little little ring with my big stall," and "I am the squire's little stick with the sharp end and try to hit a ball!"

Games conclude and the tournament commences. One of the knights is picked as joustman with the "honor" to make the first challenge. I'll give you a little hint: this means that he is the first to die. But you didn't know that.

The fighting goes on and on and on until there's only one knight left and he gets to be the "Knight of Love and Beauty" which is a form of joust. The rest of the knights are fighting for the first place.

So that's what the show is like. It's a lot of fun but it's really, really, really boring. The cynicism comes from the fact that it's a great night out for all your entertainment in one building—food, drink, shopping, information, a show. And the whole experience is so much fun (including dinner). For more information, call 1-800-4-A-E or the Harp's Bell (1-800-4-A-E, 247).

"Cheese—milk's deep toward immortality." —Cotton Fordham

Squeaky's Big Day

Once upon a time, there lived an adorable little white mouse named Squeaky. One day he was scurrying about happily. His tiny pink nose wiggled as he sniffed the air in search of food. When suddenly, he happened upon a tasty morsel of cheese. Squeaky's favorite! The treat was attached to a large and deadly mouse trap. Uh oh! Squeaky eagerly snatched the cheese and (oh happy day) the trap didn't go off! Squeaky got away!

Unfortunately the cheese was tainted with a generous portion of rat poison which caused Squeaky to lie in a huge, painful, bloated death.

A&E makes TV history

PRINCE

After nine years as the cable leader in quality programming, A&E will launch the History TV Network (HVN), a new 24-hour terrestrial basic cable network, it was announced today. As the new president and CEO of A&E, Mr. DeLoach stated that the new A&E Series Vice President of Marketing and Senior Vice President and General Manager of HVN and Creative Media, A&E's Vice President of Historical Programming and Chief program executive of HVN.

HVN will launch on the air in late 1993. According to Mr. DeLoach, the new network will focus on historical documentaries, historical dramas and mini-series. Original productions and pre-produced historical TV productions will be the mainstay of the network, and a focus on the most popular historical events and figures.

History is the beginning of recorded history is yesterday's headlines. HVN will make history come alive to viewers across North America," said Mr. DeLoach. "We have been working to develop this service with cable operators across the country during the past year. Those meetings have led to the strong conclusion that HVN will become a unique programming service for operators as well as a valued resource for advertisers." Highlights of HVN's prime time programming, which will include Monday through Friday prime time segments, include: Heroes, Alive, an hour each week on the lives of historical figures and the lives of the people who lived with them; Legends, an hour each week on the lives of the people who lived with them; Legends, an hour each week on the lives of the people who lived with them; Legends, an hour each week on the lives of the people who lived with them.

As we enter the end of the millennium, our appetite for history grows ever greater," said Mr. DeLoach. "Research indicates that HVN will prove to be a particularly interesting viewership for the 18 and 49 age-old, the fastest growing demographic group."

The strong interest in history is not limited to historical magazines and book club memberships, as well as the enormous number of visitors attending historical museums and sites. In Washington, D.C. alone, historical attractions had nearly 10 million visitors in 1992.

HVN will serve the growing history buffs with an extensive and varied high quality programming. For every viewer, ranging from the middle-aged to the full-blown history buff, said Mr. DeLoach.

The A&E Network, based in Los Angeles, has a long history of producing new content. Following are some of the new series from the network:

"Spinning" is a new series with programming related to a published story from the past. The new A&E series is the right formula for the growing with a close "emotional" and "entertainment" value. ## Move it! Move it!

Tom PARADISANO
Culinary writer

It's 4:30 in the morning on a Saturday in March. Mark Rader is trying to get ready to serve his country.

"There's a lot of self gratification involved in serving my country," says Rader. "I know I'm preparing to protect our way of life."

Rader, 23, is a sophomore at Harper and one of the many college students who turn to the United States Marine Corps for financial assistance. He serves part time as a reservist while attending school full time. In return, the Marine Corps pays the tuition of any state school he chooses to attend.

Most reservists in the Marine Corps wanted out like Rader. Instead of going through the pressure of maintaining good grades while working full time, they take a few months off from school and join the Marine Corps.

"I'd say about 80 percent of the Marine Corps Reservists started out as young teenagers who need money for school and wanted to leave the state," says Sergeant William Morgan, who works for the Marine Corps as a recruiter.

"I try to help them out because after they graduate from high school they find out how hard the real world is. I think the Marine Corps is an excellent choice because it offers so much more than money and it really doesn't take up much time from a student's studies."

"The plan is simple. You serve your country on a part-time basis one week end a month and two weeks every summer. Once you sign up, you must choose a career."

For example, if you're interested in computer science, you could be a computer programmer.

Shortly after the job is selected, you must participate in basic training, which one reservist described as being similar to if you are a prisoner of war.

After the 13 weeks of basic training, a short leave is usually granted. After the leave, the real plans begin. This lasts four weeks and is called Marine combat training; this is a familiarization of different types of weapons used in war.

Marine combat training is usually followed by primary and secondary training. The length of this training is dependent on the complexity of the job. The average time to become a Marine Corps Reservist ranges from five to six months.

Once your training is completed, you are eligible to attend school full and you also receive some minor benefits. These benefits include discounts on car and life insurance, small loans through the Marine Corps and a pension after 25 years.

With all these benefits offered to college students, it's a mystery why the reserves is not highly popular. "They're scared," says Morgan. "They watch movies about how hard it is to make it, especially through boot camp. They hear stories about bad experiences people have. So when they join, they think we're Marine Corps going to beat them up every time they do something bad."

"I think the Marines are somewhat innocent. Don't get me wrong, there are some rough days, but overall I think that to a certain extent, we are lenient. We let them pick the jobs they want and the status. We let them leave after six weeks. We even allow them a one week 'sick day' per year."

Still some college students persist the Reservists take a lot of time. "I don't think I have enough time to concentrate on my homework," says Demo Spingolone, a college student.

Rader, though, thinks the Marine Corps is a blessing. "There's a lot of time available for school. If anything, it helps. It helped me because it gave me discipline and direction in life."

For most college students, discipline and direction may be what they need, even if they wake up at 4:30 in the morning.

Easy Apple Cake

- |   |                                       |
|---|---------------------------------------|
| 2 cups dried apples (peeled or unpeeled)    | 1 1/2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour |
| 1/4 cup sugar                               | 1 teaspoon baking powder              |
| 1/2 cup vegetable oil (canola or safflower) | 1 teaspoon baking soda                |
| 1 teaspoon vanilla                          | 1/2 teaspoon salt                     |
| 1 egg substitute (equivalent to 1 egg)      | 1/2 teaspoon pumpkin pie spice        |
|   | 1/2 cup raisins                       |

Preheat oven to 350° F. Lightly spray an 8 inch square cake pan with vegetable oil. Combine apples and sugar in a medium bowl and set aside for 10 minutes.

Add oil, vanilla and egg substitute. Stir to mix well. In another bowl, combine dry ingredients and stir to mix thoroughly. Add to apple mixture and stir to mix well. Add raisins and stir to mix well.

Spoon batter evenly into prepared pan. Bake 35 to 40 minutes. Makes 16 servings.

Heart Warning: Watch What Your Kids Eat

Heart disease has no age limit.

The American Heart Association estimates that 36 percent of U.S. children age 19 and under have high blood cholesterol, a major risk factor for heart disease.

As diet high in fat and saturated fats, acids and cholesterol raises blood cholesterol levels, high blood cholesterol could lead to atherosclerosis, a hardening of the arteries, and later to heart disease.

Therefore, the AHA, which recently developed the Heart's School Lunch Program to encourage healthful eating in the nation's school cafeteria, suggests that healthy children over age 2:

- Eat a wide variety of foods.
- Eat less than 10 percent of total calories from saturated fatty acids, an average of no more than 40 percent of total calories from fat and less than 300 milligrams of dietary cholesterol per day.
- Eat only enough calories to support growth and development.

energy and the recommended daily allowances for all nutrients for your children and adolescents. Even better, kids can still eat healthfully and enjoy their food. It's just a matter of planning, selecting, preparing and savoring foods with their hearts in mind.

However, the AHA doesn't recommend these habits for infants from birth to two years of age. That's because their fast growth requires a higher percentage of calories from fat. Besides helping your kids eat healthfully at home, you can encourage your school's food service to use more food items low in fat, cholesterol and sodium. You can also push for increased amounts of complex carbohydrates and fiber—these and other positive life-style steps, such as physical activity, can help your children avoid developing heart disease — and maybe live longer.

Collection of poems takes readers on a journey

Local author's work leads to Palatine murders

CANDY JETT
Each year Editor

In a newly published collection of poetry, titled Crossing the Border, Palatine writer and editor Kris Prepenburg tells of the changes that small towns and suburbs encounter. The poems begin in northern Wisconsin, in the farming communities around Green Bay, where his family settled generations ago. Then, the poems move to Palatine, where the author has lived all his life. The book's title poem, "Crossing the Border," describes the author's reaction to the mass murder at Brown's Chicken.

The book had been in production for over a year when the murders occurred. The author's shock and dismay gave the writing new urgency. Publisher Frank Smith feels that this is an "extraordinarily good" work. It was he who approached Pieperburg about publishing a collection of his works.

Smith went on to say, "People have been blown away [Piepenburg's] work is that powerful."

"On the Map," Piepenburg's first poem, tells us about a small town. He says that a map cannot do justice to a town: there is much more than meets the eye. "The maps can't show every bend... No road stands by itself." To get a real feel of the town, the character digs his fingers in the soil.

Wheeling artist Jason Peck has designed the cover, which layers scenes from the poems on a map of Wisconsin and Illinois.

Piepenburg is a medical editor with degrees from Harper and the University of Illinois, Chicago.

Crossing the Border can be ordered for $5, plus 95 cent postage. Write WECSP, P O Box 383, Fort Wayne, IN 46802-0383.

Hawk (Helper) Focus: Lisa Brady, academic coordinator

ALISA CHIDLUP
Staff Writer

Lana Brady, Harper's athletic academic coordinator, knew she was going to be an athlete. It was her karma. After all, her grandfather was a track star, her grandmother was a competitive swimmer, her father was a basketball player, and her aunt was a track athlete.

"I don't ever remember making a conscious choice to become an athlete," Brady said. "I knew when I was little that athletics would be my whole life."

Her athletic career emerged at an early age. One of Brady's earliest memories is also one of her most memorable experiences.

"I think I was eight years old," Brady said. "I was at a picnic. My father was involved in the Jaycees. All the kids were running around and having water balloon fights."

"So I, of course, victimized this poor child I threw a water balloon at him. Then I turned around and ran smack dab into a big pole. I hit my face and I yelled my eyes lined

Well, I had a softball game later that day. My father was the coach. And he said, 'Get out there.' I could barely walk. I limped out there. I'm standing with my glove and my knee's bigger than my thigh. I'm ready to go. I can't hear. I can't see out of one eye. I'm teetering back and forth. The umpire actually stopped the game, came out and asked if I was OK.

"I think this experience taught me something important in athletics. You can't just get out there, suck it up. Go through with things. Don't. Don't worry about anything else."

Brady learned about stamina, will power, endurance and the desire to succeed in sports. She persevered in a field dominated by men.

She specialized in softball and volleyball but wanted more. Several years later, she met Harvey Dorfman, athletic director for the Oakland A's.

He was speaking at a baseball conference and invited Brady as his guest. "As I walked into the baseball conference, I realized I was the only woman there," Brady said. "Well, that was a shocker for me. It happens a lot to women who are involved in athletics. I was head the program and noticed that

What to watch for in NBA, NHL playoffs, and sporting event security

Ian Ferguson
Harbinger Sports Column

By the time you read this, the best team in the NBA could be nothing more than minor-league bystanders in the 1993 playoffs. I don't know what the Las Vegas odds were in Los Angeles, but the Suns won two straight games in Phoenix. But if you bet a dollar or two on the chance they would, you are now the proud owner of a Western Hemisphere.

Anyone who says they picked the Lakers to win has a nose as long as the shot Don Nelson made to win a cool million. I'm still hoping the Suns will rebound and win three straight, but championships are won by teams that play consistently, not by luck.

made from the rearguard Bulls and the playful Kinderknechts, even team has lost a game on its home turf. The Bruisers' from the Big Apple were downed 11 early in their year against Indiana on Sunday, but came back to win by 10 points. Chicago's favorite was locked strong as they took their sets and straight sets from the hapless Hawks, winning by a notable 15 points. The only complaint to be made about the team is it could play five or six more sets to match. Some Pippin could have carried the team for most of the season, half but I'm sure he appreciated the insurance policy as Mr. Max Jordan. The Bulls' star, Lee is a tough player in Cleveland, possibly the No. 3 seed Cavaliers can hold. At the peak New York from New Jersey. Check. All the decent year coaching the Detroit Pistons in Barcelona and the new season from New York. I believe he made an excellent career move in downing the sinking ship that is the Detroit

After two and a half columns of basketball, I'd like to state myself firmly for the hawk and head to the hard heads of the NHL. With two of my favorite teams (the Bruins and Hawks), the path seemed clear for the Penguins to move first (my tribute to the Canadian national pastime). I (mistakenly) Mario-Pepe Lemuria moved Sunday's game due to lack of spots. The Mighty Gums are still capable of winning the Cup, but they face a worthy opponent in Vancouver. Year Yeah! Harpoon the Canucks to win it all, but none else gives them the respect they deserve, so I am taking up the slack.

The Final Word for this week concerns the knife attack on Momia Seles. This is an important topic because of the undisclosed danger most athletes face daily. The NBA practice of seating fans so close to the court on is morally financial, but must be reviewed because the only thing keeping psychos from the court is the price of a court-side seat. No one wants to mess with an athlete armed with five-foot cudgel or blades on their feet. So the NBA is pretty safe.

The only other sport with a degree of safety is softball, but after seeing fans throw batteries and the like into the end zone at baseball games, even a softball helmet does not seem like a side place to hide.

I regret what happened to Seftin and she'll be back on the court soon. The good thing to come out of this incident is the chance the governing bodies of all major sports will review their security policies and not some drastic changes.

No harm, no ticket

Harper students learned to play a new game this semester called "create-a-parking space." The object of the game was to see who could park in the most unusual or illegal place while not getting a ticket. This year's award-winning cars included a Toyota Paseo (top right) that was parked in a new space outside the yellow lines and a Nissan 300ZX (bottom) that was parked in a handicapped parking spot with no sticker. Congratulations to both winners and better luck to those students who didn't place.

On May 5 the Student Affairs staff arranged a performance of classical guitar. Marisa mess, and folk dancing in the cafeteria dining room. The program was a celebration of El Cinco de Mayo. The repertoire included a short performance of classical guitar by Manuel Arana who drew his inspiration from the master classical guitarist, Andrie Segovia. A Chicago native, he grew up in the Bridgeport & Taylor street area among drug activity and gang violence. At age 10 he was taught classical guitar from his uncle, in a home with aging parents. He earned a degree in Classical Guitar performance from the Chicago Music College of Roosevelt University under the instruction of Pamela Komet. He continued his studies in Mexico and Italy. He has taught guitar and presently appears as a soloist and solo music accompaniment.

Jose Manuel Lopez, a student at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, was the featured soloist.

were born in Mexico, and because we lived in the area, through personal interest. The term Marisa mess, derives a lot from dancing, a lot of street music, too. Their music is a combination of native and European influence. The dance group, Marias de Dances, performed dances native to several provinces of Mexico. They make their own costumes and the children learn to dance at the age of four to five. The dancers include the Polka city (European influence) of the Northern Provinces, the Mexican Hat Dance from Jalisco and the beautiful white costume dancers who are native to Veracruz in the Gulf of Mexico. The audience was receptive to the program. Comments included: "I am not used to this. I haven't seen Mexican dance like this before," and "I don't know the cost of this, but I think they should have more of these programs."

El Cinco de Mayo, the fifty of Mexico's birthday that commemorates the Battle of Puebla (La Batalla de Puebla). This battle marked the beginning of the Mexican revolution against French Emperor Napoleon III. French rule only lasted until 1867 when Napoleon's army was repulsed. Mammilian of Austria was executed by a firing squad.

Clinton loan reforms face challenges

Tuition credit program gets mixed remarks as a benefit for college students

President Clinton's proposal to let college students earn up to $10,000 in tuition credit through community service and borrow money directly from the government guaranty direct loan program, although no one seems to be pleased with his entire agenda. In late April, Clinton unveiled plans for a national community service program to repay college loans and a new direct loan system between the federal government and students.

Despina Patricia, a staff member with the Washington based United States Student Association, said he supports the community service and direct loan program, but he has concerns about the new employment proposal. Students who take low-paying jobs after graduation instead of paying off their loans for the next 25 years, he said. And Patricia said that kind of work for the IRS.

"The IRS is not what students need," he said. "On the surface, it sounds like a good idea, but it's a support role in an office for students who are in default. We are wary of it, if it is presented as a panacea."

But officials' worriedly noted was the need to have a significant number of students who are willing to do service during school. "It's not realistic," he said. "It's possible the program is recognizing 'paying service'." Clinton said that $10,000 in tuition credit would be available to students who complete a year of community service in a field related to their field of study. "We are not looking for a post office without a chain of the IRS."

of the American Association of University Professors, said: "Even the direct loan program. The directly high post-direct loans. Interest rates are very high. There seems to be no question that they could be less," he said. A spokesman with the American Bankers Association and his explanation before the committee was that they have to get banks out of the loan business, and we will get a lot of federal government money, a community service.

"We opposed initiation of national service. Private is a lot more than government. Looking at the needs of the country," said spokesman Chris Rock. "We're trying to find a middle ground to allow banks to stay in the marketplace, but not to be the president's substitute. The first kind of concept, emphasizing the need of the post office without a chain of the IRS."

$2 billion per-year campaign sends the wrong message to young viewers

This is the world of alcohol. Beverage advertising in which $2 billion a year (roughly $5.5 million a day) is spent to encourage the purchase of products that are doing little to advance the good of the world. The images presented are designed to inspire the viewer who sits on the sidelines, alone on the couch in front of the television, to join. "Who says why?" The socially shy are particularly vulnerable to the seductive, alluring image of a young adult so young. But in the real world, rampant sales into alcohol-related, avoidable crashes, which are the leading cause of death for youth, and promoted in the beverage industry, have been the leading cause of death for 16-24. Alcohol will ruin and kill far more young people, disrupt one's families, and steal hope and opportunity from significantly more youth than all other drugs combined. Whether youth are already targets of the alcohol industry or not, the alcohol industry is targeting youth in the children's

First annual deaf co-ed volleyball tournament

Kerry Nowak
Guest Writer

The first annual Collegiate Illinois Association of the Deaf sponsored Deaf Co-Ed Volleyball Tournament. The tournament took place Saturday, May 9 at Harper. Volunteers arrived at 8 a.m. to begin setting up.

Matches began at 9 a.m. and the championship game was played at 2:30 p.m. with cash prizes awarded to the top four teams. First place went to the Aces, second to Side Out II, third to South side, and fourth to the Warriors. Additional awards went to Side Out II, Sportsmanship, Charles Harris, Most Valuable Male Player, and Caroline Depick, Most Valuable Female Player. CIAD president is Tim Zank, vice president is Robert Perdicchia. Chris Lopez ran the food concession and Jorge Uribe and Jennifer Cooper ran the care of admissions.

Surveys were circulated among the participants and spectators in order to evaluate this years event as well as plan for the next tournament. Which asked about Sampsons feeling overall of all the tournament she stated, "The tournament went almost just perfect. I am delighted relieved. Everyone enjoyed themselves and we got positive comments on the evaluation."

The date for the next tournament is still being juggled around, but it will be posted.

Norris campaign full of blatant lies and lack of knowledge

The real facts are in. Before the election of Al Norris as your student trustee, he lied through his teeth in a libelous letter handed out to get him elected.

What's more, dozens of students may have voted for Norris on this basis. Art Weston knows this. Al Norris knows this, and most importantly the election committee knows that Norris's use of lies and deception may have been the difference between winning and losing the election.

So why was only one vote disqualified? "There's no rule that says you can't tell falsehoods about your self or opponents," according to Jeanne Pankram, Director of Student Activities. "We even consulted a lawyer."

Yet there is something called election ethics and integrity.

By letting that letter circulate false hooed about him: he apparently forfeited his integrity. And his use of ethics? The Election Committee was quoted as being "extremely displeased with the unethical behavior exhibited by Al Norriss supporters." Supporters? That's right we still don't know a thing about the real Al Norriss.

For all the times that Al's supporters campaigned for not only weren't true, they weren't his. He claimed to have not written a word contained in the infamous letter.

In fact, when a friend of mine, Nicole Brady, asked Al what he stood for, he allegedly paused for a moment, and then gave her a flter telling her to read it for the information on him, as if he didn't know it himself.

a strong issue uttered to on his mouth except for having a neutral party running all future elections. Good! Then they will have no problem enforcing a law I'd like to propose. To punish any party that makes false claims that would affect the result of future elections. Then, we would finally know who we were electing instead of being unsure, worried.

Now if Al Norris didn't do much campaigning or even involve himself in writing literature about himself, who did? And whose views do you think will be represented next year in front of the board of trustees. A quiet Al Norris who made no comments and after the election or "supporters" who campaigned madly and made up his issues. Why do you call Mr. Norris at 2244? Was he himself encouraged and asked to run?

Sincerely,
Michael Pollack

In our Preamble to the Constitution it is stated that the government will establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity.

Yet I'm concerned about the continual lack of freedom, equality and justice for the individual citizen of the United States.

It is a tragic problem that has been present in our nation since the very beginning, when Thomas Jefferson Progress has been slow, but an effort has been made to hear the cries. So why do we allow society to keep ignoring the facts?

Even after numerous amendments and Martin Luther King Jr.'s march for civil rights, our country still harbors and legally protects persons in authority (such as police officers) who verbally and physically abuse and brutalize innocent people of a minority race.

A shocking videotape aired on national television in March 7, 1991, showing several white armed police officers of the Los Angeles Police Department attacking an unarmed Indian King

This is proof yet again that there is no equality of all. The case of Rodney King that was tried last year resulted in a not guilty verdict for the California police officers.

I was personally outraged by the verdict handed down by the judicial system of the United States. The actions and decisions that took place should never have happened.

Hopefully, our nation has taken last year's events into consideration and began to heed the warning signal.

The recent guilty verdict in the federal trial of Sgt. Stacy Koon, Theodore Bouseno and Lawrence Powell and former Officer Timothy Wind, although only two were convicted, is just the first stepping stone for the equality of the individual and

It is an essential step in the process of mass equality.

First Lady speaks up

Sigourney Weaver puts her versatility to use in a wide variety of projects. From the "Alien" trilogy to the "Ghostbusters" comedies and "Working Girl" to her dramatic turn as "Gloria in the Mist" and countless stage performances, Weaver always seems to appear in something fresh and new.

New there's "Dave." Ivan Reitman's new comedy that, while starring political laughs, also touches the heart. Weaver stars as Ellen Mitchell, America's first lady, an intelligent woman who cares about everyday people, but is stuck in a bitter marriage to President Bill Mitchell (Kevin Kline), who cares only for himself.

When Mitchell suffers a stroke while cheating on Ellen, a power hungry chief of staff (Frank Langella) installs Mitchell, a good-natured dupe. Dave Kovic later Kline as a puppet president. Somewhat how ever, Dave takes an interest in the lovely first lady and the plight of the nation's people.

"Dave is a comedy and contains its comedy," says Weaver, during a recent interview at a Manhattan hotel. "It's a great good movie, but neither are these scenes where I talk about how sad it is to be a first lady. I found it a challenge to keep the balance, not to be too frankish or melodramatic, where it's such a struggle."

Weaver read books about presidents and their wives, but elected not to speak personally with any former first ladies. "I thought of it," she says. "I thought I should write them all letters and ask, 'What was the hardest thing about being first lady?'" I can concentrate on Eleanor Roosevelt who, I think, was in a less than happy marriage and ended up sort of putting it aside and getting on with her life and what she considered important.

"I think in many ways she was more enlightened than her husband. She was an inspiration," Pat Nixon also thought the same one similarity is Ellen Mitchell. She was a very warm, outgoing and personable first lady who was married to somebody we thought of as chilly, who had a different style.

"First lady is just an impossible job," she continues, "such high expectations. I'm very relieved Hillary Clinton is being so much more honest about what it's like to be a first lady, who her agenda is. It's really refreshing."

Part of "Dave" were shot in Washington, D.C., in the midst of the recent presidential election.

Weaver often found it difficult to separate reality from fantasy. "I felt maybe we were actually asking a presidential debate while we were shooting scenes where Kline is giving a speech in the press room. The numbers looked exactly the same," she says. "In fact, I thought Kline was at the most impressive of everybody that particular day. It was fascinating."

And her next film "Weaver" production company, Good Co., is hard at work developing several projects. "I have so many projects and I don't want to be all of them. They're wonderful parts," she concludes, "but I don't want the company to develop period to my own. I just did it myself good stories."

Political comedy on target

Anna Combs
Dignity Writer

Director Ivan Reitman's premise in "Dave" preposterous. What if the president were comatose and his job were held a look-alike figurehead?

It's not unrealistic. After all, we had one actor in the White House. It's a tough job but someone has to do it. All you need is some coaching and a good screenwriter.

As the movie continues, we are introduced to a President Bill Mitchell (Kevin Kline), a philanderer who puts the public's interests last. Therefore, Ellen Mitchell (Sigourney Weaver), married at his double talk and deception, appears as public functions but barely talks to him in private.

Dave Kovic, Kevin Kline's operator, an employment agency seeking jobs for society's underdogs. He moonlights as a presidential impersonator at car dealerships and social functions.

After impressing the Secret Service, Dave is asked to be the look-alike for the president's command in a short-term service with a security secretary. During a moment of illicit passion, the president suffers a stroke.

Villainous chief of staff Bob Alexander (Frank Langella) and presidential aide (Kevin Dunn) convince Dave that impersonating the president is his patriotic duty. Besides he'll be saving the country from panic and protecting the public from a mentally unbalanced vice president (Ben Kingsley).

Dave now faces his biggest challenge. Can the owner of a small town temp agency assume presidential leadership without arousing the suspicions of the president's wife, cabinet, press or constituents?

Heaven Dave is essentially the perfect party. He mimics the script Bob and Alan prescribe for him. Bob returns ultimate, one of the Oval Office, the "president" under his public thumb. All is perfect until Dave starts making his own decisions.

His naive theobetics campaign deepens him as a mediating Dave is everyman, is acting understanding who's just afraid to mingle with the public, save the needy, provide jobs for the unemployed, or at $60 million out of the budget to fund the first lady's home.

less plan. Dave's the talk of the town. Guest cameos from celebrities and comedians like Paul Simon, Tim O'Neil, Tom Harkin, Larry King, Oliver Stone, Les Leno and A.R. media maven Helen Thomas, provide insights into the president's newly increased, humane persona — attributed to his altered view of society after the stroke — and his program.

Dave, like his predecessor, Mr. Smith as "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," shows us how one people can make a difference in society, injustice can be fought if we stick together and sometimes the underdog wins.

"Dave" is a heart warming comedy with an endearing story and first rate acting across the board. It is not perfect.

Hard it is difficult to believe it was not outside the White House even suspects Dave is an impostor. Is it that easy to pose as the president? He also makes running the country seem too easy. Important political matters are discussed and immediately resolved. But it doesn't seem to matter. Despite the flaws, the film works. It's a little recommended. Dave. It is a little to everyone.

Plastic recycling is key to saving the environment

Janet Wade
Guest Writer

Remember when people thought the "R's" were referring to "Reading, Writing and 'Rithmetic'"? Today, without concern turning more and more toward global warming, overflowing landfills and conservation, the new three R's are "Reduce, Reuse and Recycle." Many Americans routinely recycle aluminum, glass and paper through curbside recycling programs. Plastic recycling, however, has been slower to catch on and less successful because Americans are accustomed to living in a throw-away society and only certain types of plastic are recyclable.

True plastic serves its purpose. As a matter of fact, plastic has "infinitesimal waste" as it never degrades, it may use life without end," says Sarah Jane Kins, Regional Executive Director of Greenpeace, Great Lakes Region. Unfortunately, life with plastic is becoming distinctly hazardous. Most plastics are made from petroleum and natural gas and there are several different types:

- Polyethylene terephthalate (PET): High-density PET (HDPE) milk containers and two-liter pop bottles
- Polypropylene
- Polyvinyl chloride
- Certain kinds of plastics contain chlorine, but the biggest offender is polyvinyl chloride (PVC), says Jack Weinberg, who heads Greenpeace's Chlorine Task Force. PVC plastic contains massive amounts of chlorine and is mostly used in the construction industry in the form of pipes, window frames, siding. It's in anything commonly referred to as vinyl. "The production is toxic to the workers," Kins adds. "Unintended by-products are produced in the manufacturing process."

Growing evidence shows that these by-products contain dioxins in large amounts. A dioxin is defined as "any of several carcinogenic hydrocarbons." In the production, disposal and incineration of PVC is when a building built with some PVC materials burns—dioxin escapes into the atmosphere.

After it enters our body, it cannot be expelled—just by breathing, crying or urinating. It mimics hormones, affecting the endocrine system and the immune system. It has been linked to certain kinds of breast cancer. Some laboratory tests have shown second generation effects. A lot of developmental disorders and learning disabilities in the children of exposed adults.

"There just isn't a safe way to make polyvinyl chloride," says a Greenpeace spokesperson.

Plastic industry spokespeople disagree, calling working with plastic "very safe" and denying knowledge of "any long-term effects from working with plastic."

When plastics are discarded and enter the trash cycle, they stay there. That very property—non-biodegradable ability—is what makes plastic so attractive to its customers. Plastic manufacturers don't think about or choose to ignore—that plastics would affect our landfill.

When measured by weight, plastic makes up only 8.1 percent of our trash. But sheer weight doesn't fill the landfill, volume does. In volume, plastic accounts for as high as 31 percent of U.S. garbage, second only to paper and paperboard, which accounts for 42 percent.

Plastic can be found everywhere—in our kitchen cupboards, in our garages, in our cars, in our grocery stores and in our hospitals. Do we need so much of it?

And why can't we recycle it instead of manufacturing more? John Feinberg, president, Boston Line Consulting, Inc., Lake Barrington, Ill., thinks we should do just that. Feinberg thinks manufacturers who make plastic products should try to use post-consumer materials. He wants to see an end use for the recycled product.

Recycling efforts succeed.

Feinberg's company works with companies who want to design products with post-consumer materials. He also advises companies to implement recycling programs.

Soundly, about 100,000 tons of Companys are not willing to jump on the "reuse, reduce and recycle" bandwagon. While the consumer demand there who consumers for manufacturers to use recycled materials.

"People think they are doing their part by curbside recycling—and they are—but they need to buy products made from recycled materials," says Will Flannery, community relations manager for Waste Management, Inc., Highland, Ill. "Manufacturers in the recycling loop they must create the market for recycling," says Flannery.

It costs $17 per ton for the curbside collection of nonrecyclable materials. Those same materials bring only $4.40 per ton from companies willing to use them. That 25 percent return on investment is efficient.

The public assumes there will be a market for post-consumer materials and that just is not true, says Feinberg.

That's why there's a need to develop products that use recycled plastics to increase the demand. "Historically, consumers are good about filling out their own materials, saving them or returning them to recycling and the environment. But when the consumer in the grocery aisle finds the product made from post-consumer materials costs more, it sits on the shelf."

Consumers forget that it takes a processing fee to start the ball rolling to the price will come down. A recently completed independent survey by the recycling firm, Terra & Son, showed that plastic resin producers will spend $1.2 billion from 1994 to 1995 on post-consumer plastic advance ments.

The APC says, "The plastic industry is committed to increasing reuse and money through the control of recycling." One thing they're working on is the sorting process once material has been collected, currently done by manual labor. The plastic industry has implemented new ways to complete this task using automated equipment.

All plastics are not the same. PET, polypropylene and high-density polyethylene are the most common. PET is used in bottles that come in contact with food. Polypropylene is the recycling process makes the plastic unusable for use in recycling and form, so recyclers can only accept certain materials for reuse. As a result, various plastics are difficult or impossible to market.

Yet the APC spokespeople quickly point out that there are bottles and plastic grocery bags are re-usable or reusable.

What can the average consumer do? Plastic can't be completely avoided, at least not in a society. Some easy measures:

- Don't use single use products such as throwaway plastic cups and disposable razors.
- Carry a reusable coffee or beverage cup in your car and carrying the disposable ones offered at fast food outlets.

• Be an alert consumer. Buy products that aren't excessively packaged. Try to help clear the recycling loop and purchase products made from post-consumer materials.

• Let the plastic industry know your concerns about plastic and plastic recycling. The American Plastics Council has a toll-free number to call 1-800-4-PLASTIC.

• Write to your local and state legislators urging them to tighten regulations on plastic production and disposal.

"There's nothing environmentally friendly about plastic in any circumstances," says Greenpeace.

Maybe it's time to turn things around.

Kerri Olivar

Age: 20

Home town: Schaumburg, Illinois

Year at Harper: Sophomore

G.P.A. : 3.0 (Spring '93)

Sports: Basketball, Softball

Joe Williams
Sports Editor

"Not only is she a good athlete, but she's a natural leader," said head women's basketball and softball coach Jennifer Jensen of this year's female athlete of the year, Kerri Olivar.

Just before Jensen, Olivar and two other softball players left for North Eastern Illinois University on May 11, the coach took some time to reflect on how Olivar earned the women's athlete of the year award.

Jensen said Olivar has "quite a bit of natural talent but also a really good work ethic." Such was the case when during the basketball season Jensen knew she had the potential to play for a Division II school.

Olivar consistently stayed after practice to work on her weak hand-dribbling skills. Olivar is now holding the women's basketball all-time record at Harper for three pointers in a game with eight.

The effort on the basketball court flowed into the softball field, where the sophomore out of Schaumburg High School continued as a team leader and gained an honorable mention in the all-conference softball team, one of only 27 players in the region to earn the status.

While most athletes at Harper only compete in one sport, Olivar is used to and thinks little of being a two-sport athlete. While at Schaumburg High School, she played volleyball, freshman year, softball, freshman and sophomore years, and basketball all four years.

She played on the varsity level in softball through senior year when she was All-Conference.

Olivar gives a great deal of credit to her playing at Harper to basketball and softball teammate Diana Lombardi, who played against her while attending Palatine High School.

Lombardi's uncle was the basketball coach at Schaumburg while Olivar played, and the two became friends in a competitive arena.

When the two moved to Harper last year, Lombardi was able to continue Olivar's experience in the basketball and softball teams.

There was an immediate hesitation to join due to lack of high school team games in the Harper squads, but that soon changed as Olivar became comfortable with her new teams.

Olivar said playing sports at the college level is much different from high school, finding the quality of the basketball players to be much tougher at Harper while the softball play seems to be comparatively weak in the high school game.

Frank Hammond

Age: 19

Home town: Indianapolis, Indiana

Year at Harper: Freshman

G.P.A. : 3.0 (Fall '92)

Sports: Football, Wrestling

Joe Williams
Sports Editor

Like kids for Harper's football and wrestling teams, Indiana's junior college doesn't have very many sport teams.

Because of the lack of any schools with football or wrestling teams in Indiana, Frank Hammond, the male athlete of the year for the 1992-93 school year, was forced to turn to Illinois for his first two years of college.

After an "All-conference honorable mention in football and undrafted senior year in wrestling at Perry Meridian High School in Indiana," Hammond entered Harper this fall and immediately made his presence felt.

According to Head Football Coach John Flisak, the offensive guard is "a blue collar officer, steady and reliable, not flashy," after playing both offense and defense in high school.

Hammond turned playing defense only when first arriving on Harper's team, but Flisak soon realized his true talents would come out better if he concentrated on offense.

Flisak is looking forward to next year when a more experienced Hammond will be in the starting lineup stating, "You can always count on his ability. He's a reliable player." Assistant wrestling coach and former Harper wrestler himself Dan Lepore says it couldn't be happier with the talent Hammond has brought to the team. While he sees the heavy weight as a payoff of the mat, Lepore knows what Hammond is capable of. "We know he'd be tough. He's got the potential to win it all," said Lepore, who coached Hammond's high school team.

Hammond gives a great deal of his success to Lepore and his one-on-one approach to coaching. Because of his family living in Indiana, life at Harper was tough on the wrestler.

Hammond sees Lepore as "Like a parent, more of a friend than coach," making the transition easier.

Hammond has even higher hopes for next year at Harper. On the Hawk's back, he hopes to make a statement for the player who was an Indiana North and South All-Star, and only was kept from starting for the Hawks in '92 by an established sophomore.

In wrestling, Hammond hopes to improve his 24-6 record, including being undefeated in dual meets. While most wrestlers would be ecstatic about a sixth place finish in the country this year, Hammond still says, "I'd like to do better as a national in '94."

"Frank Hammond" is a blue collar athlete, steady and reliable.

Head Football Coach John Flisak
